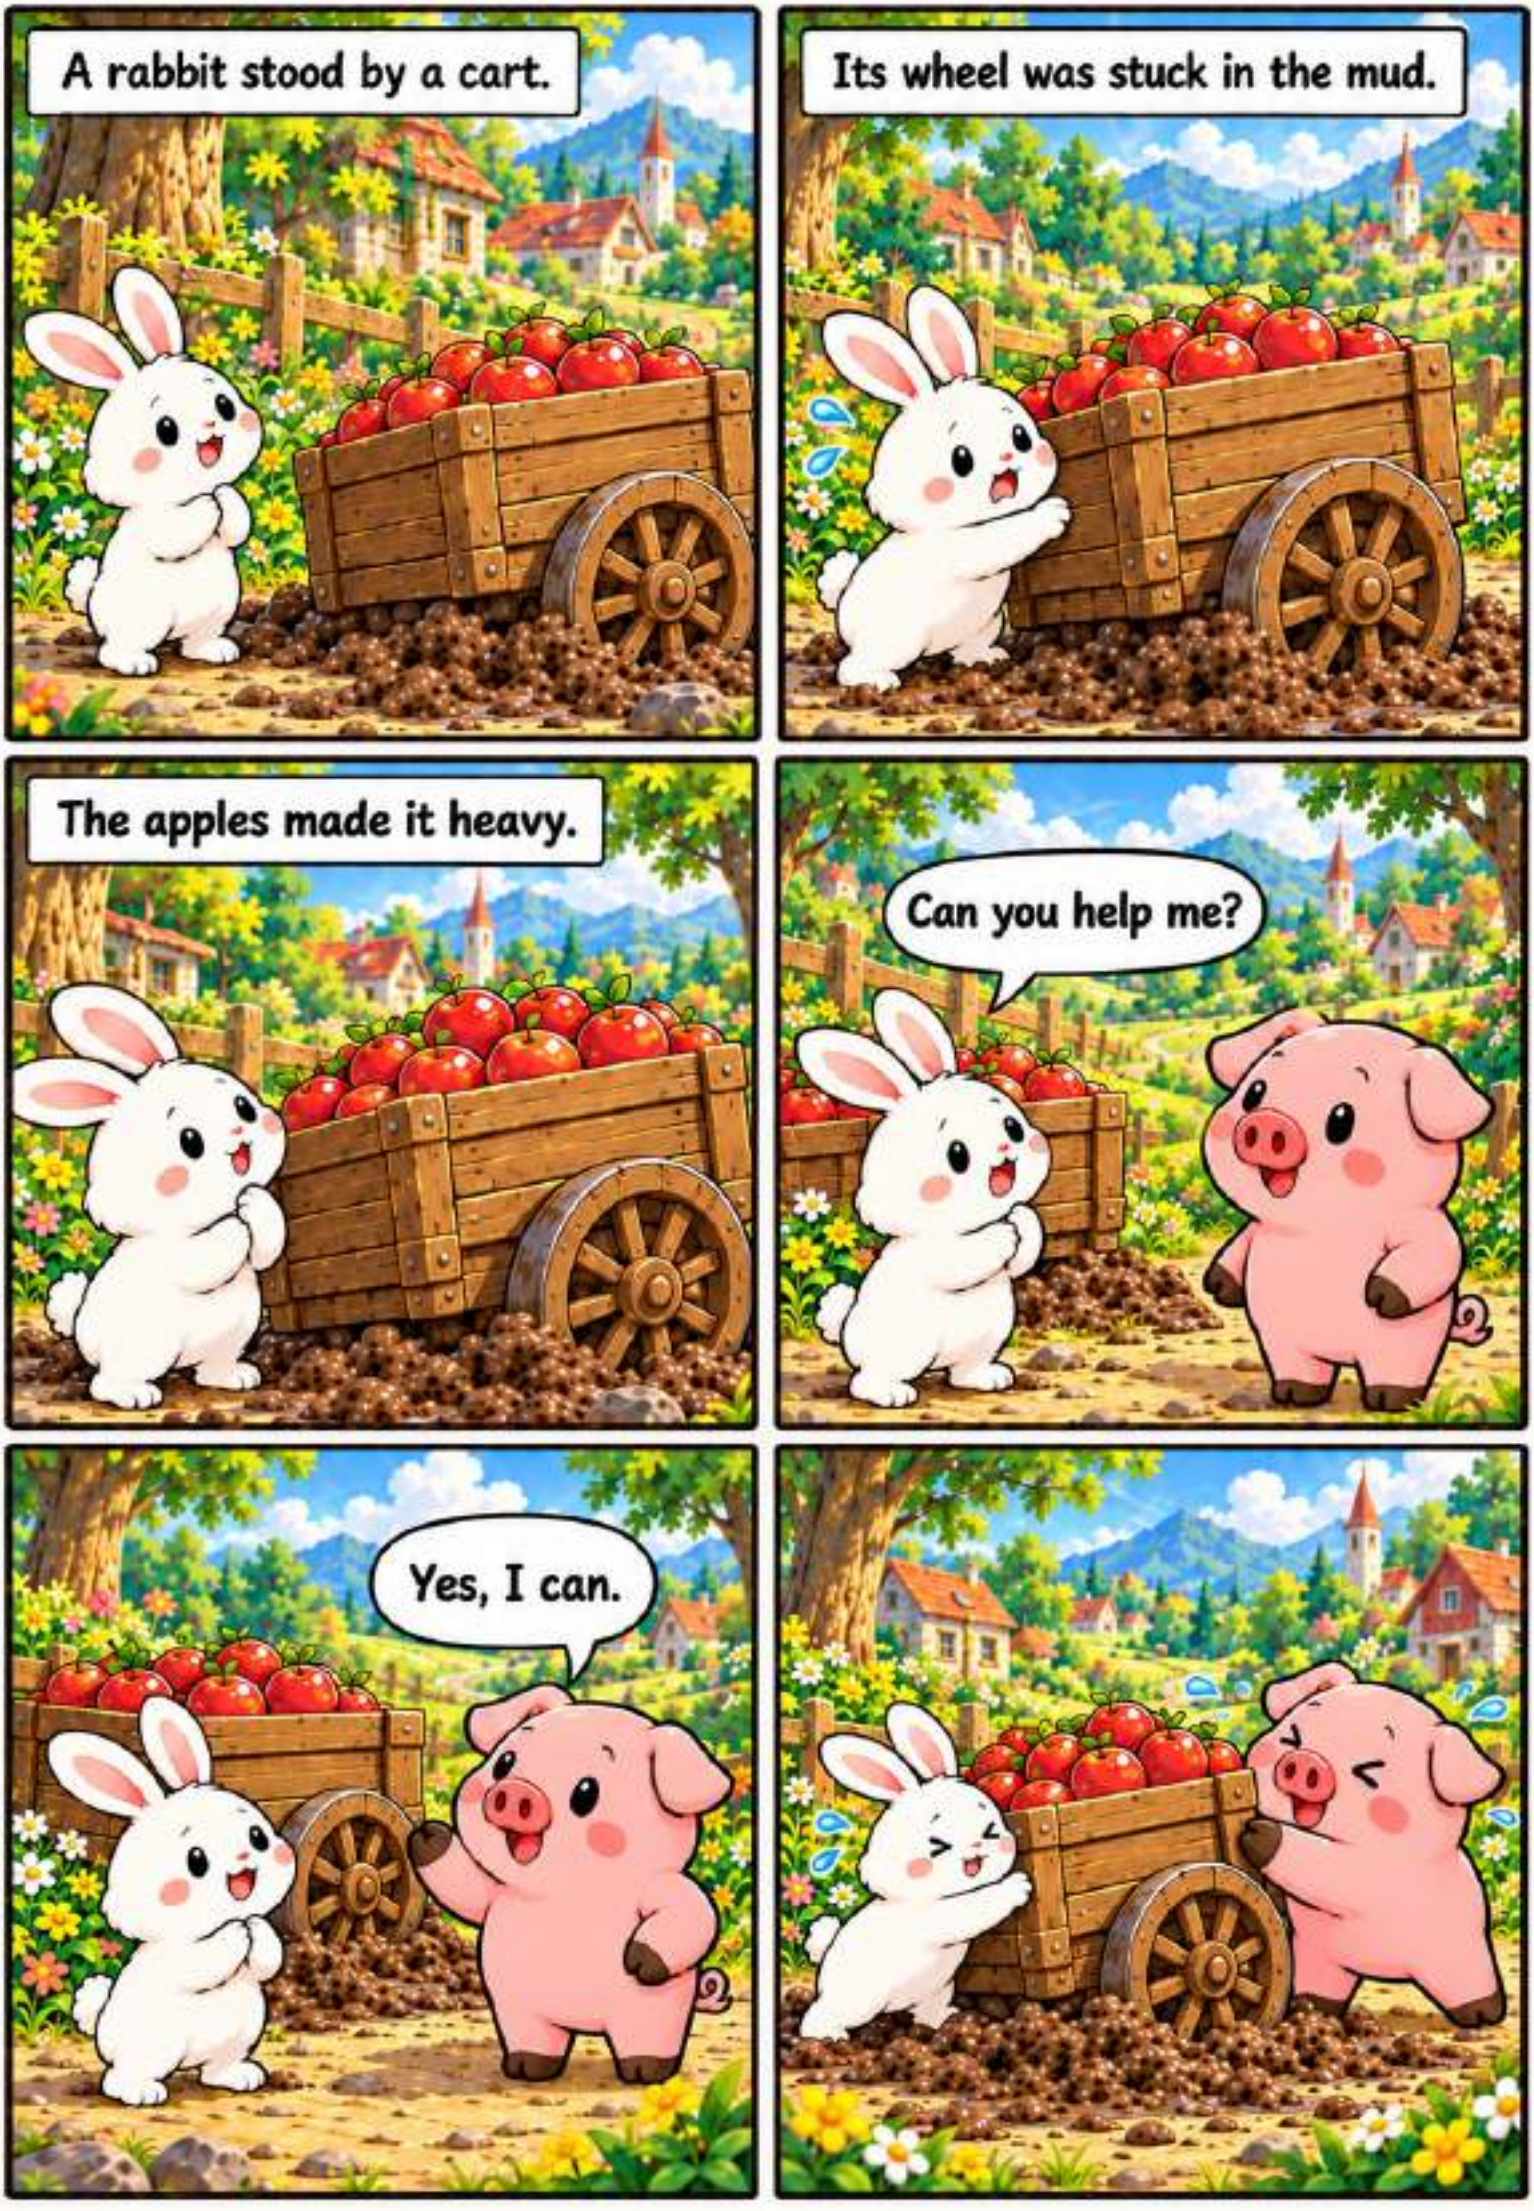
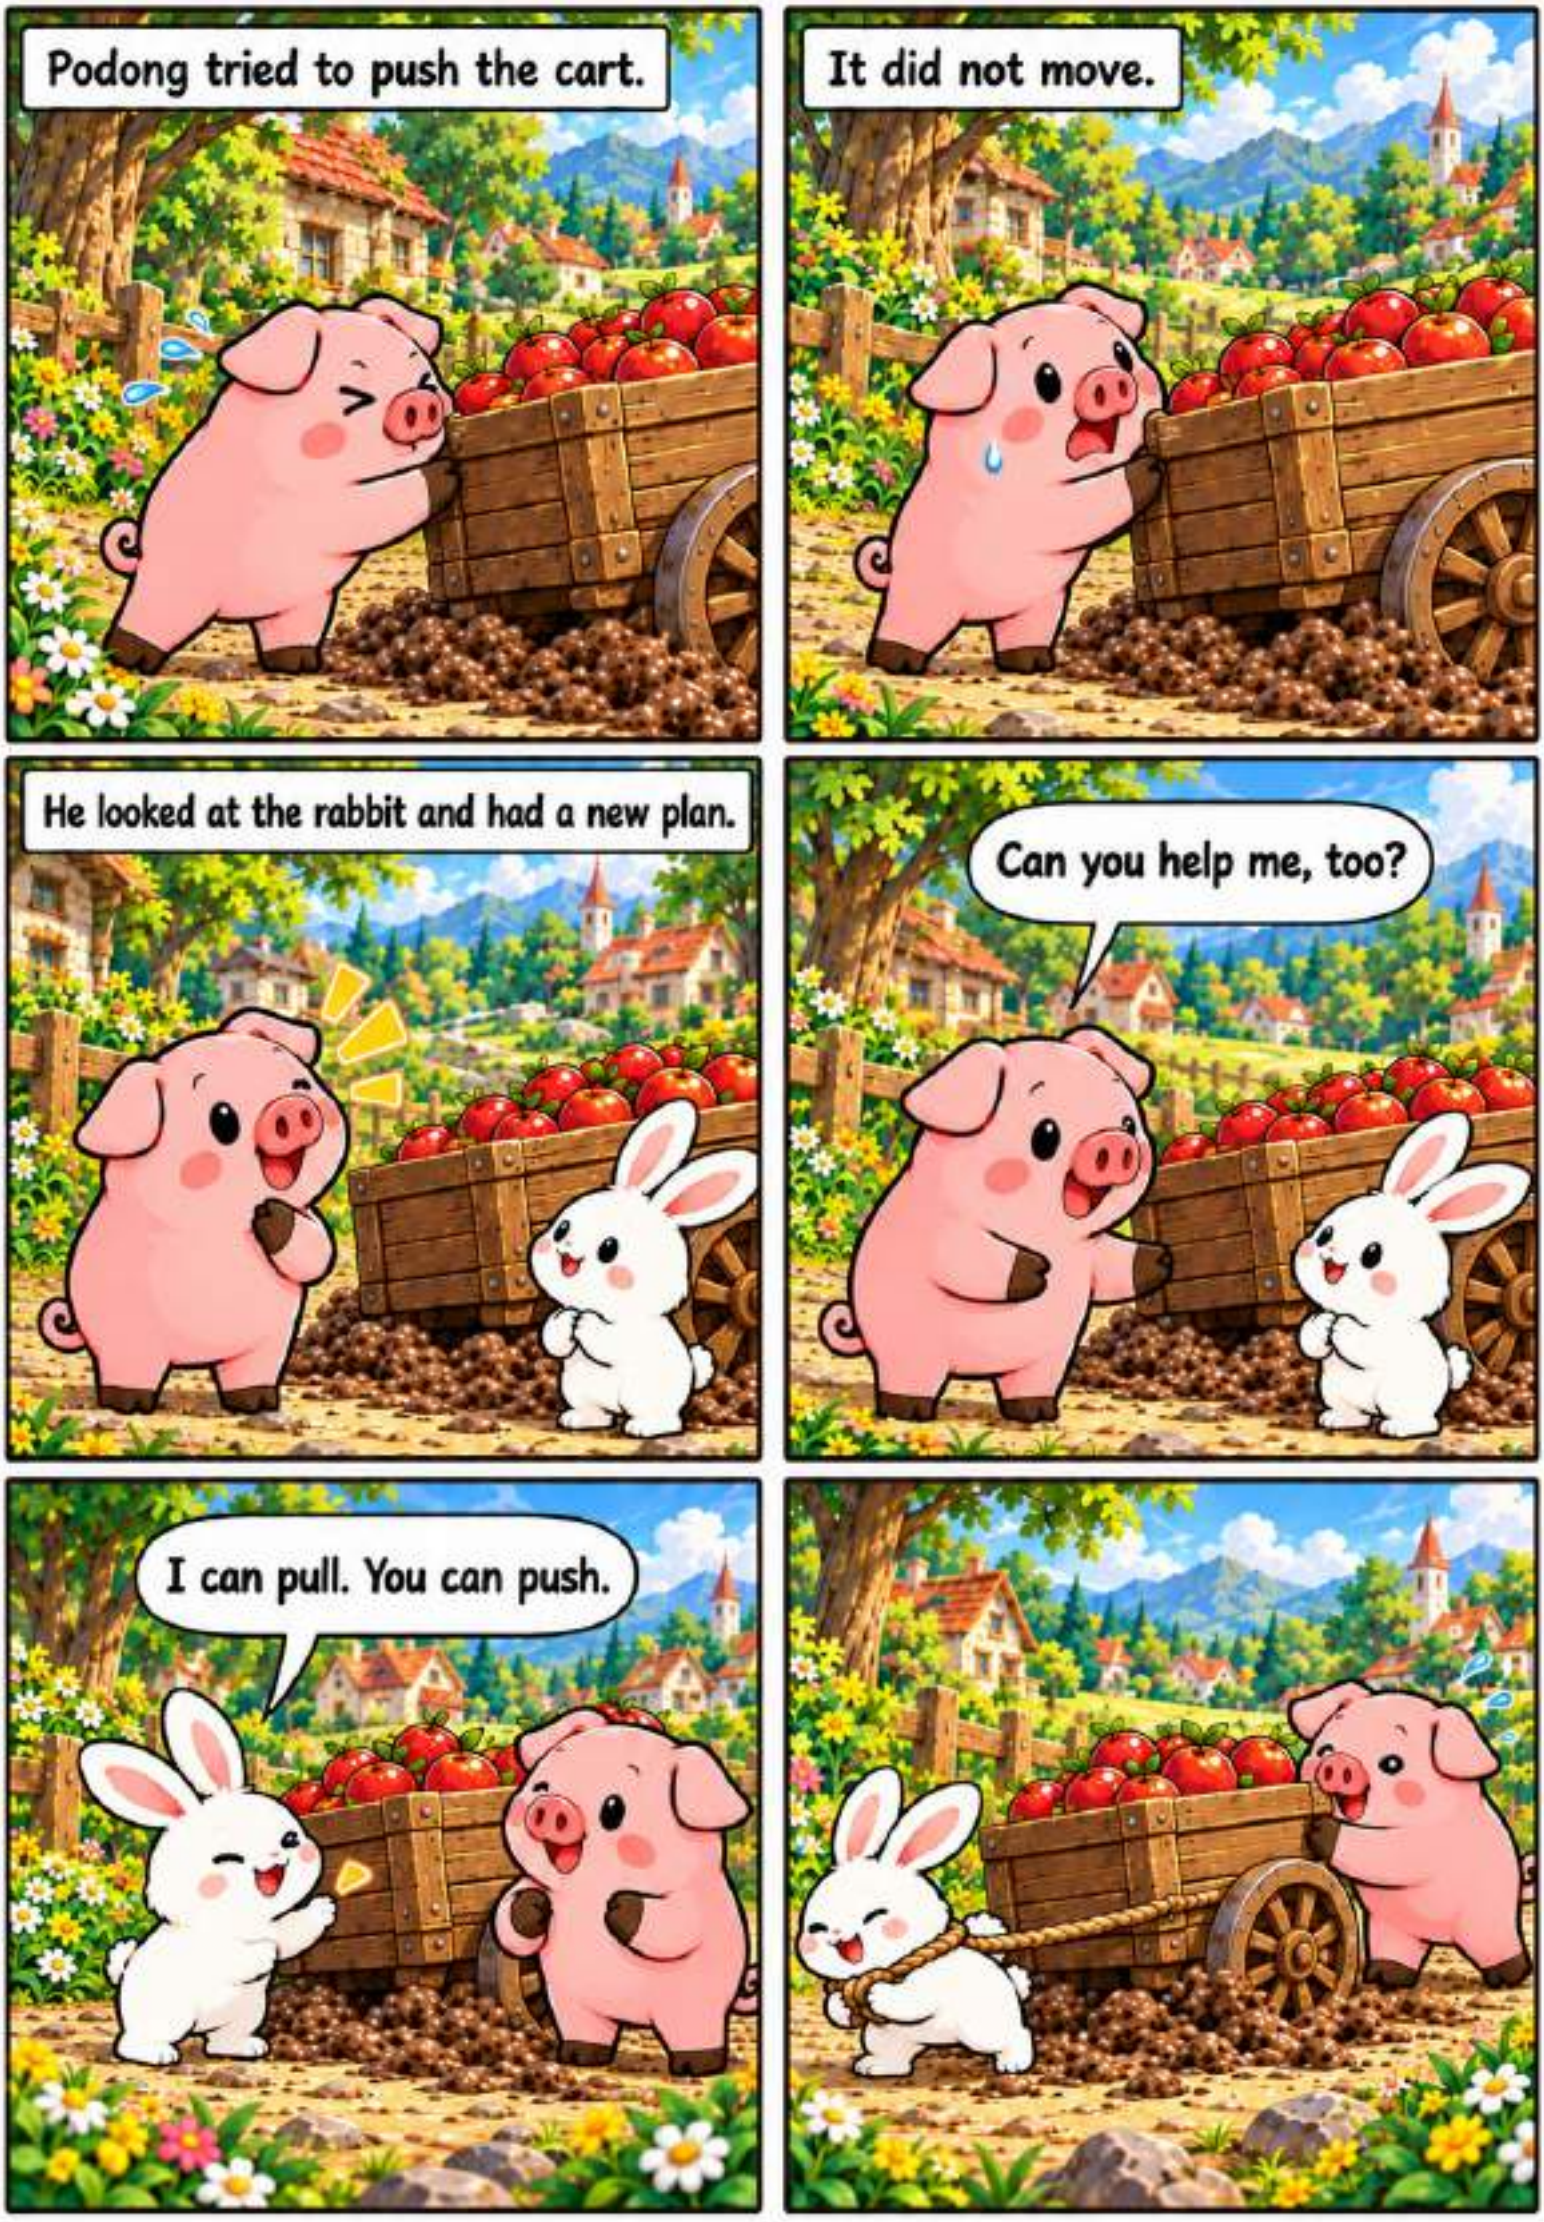
1

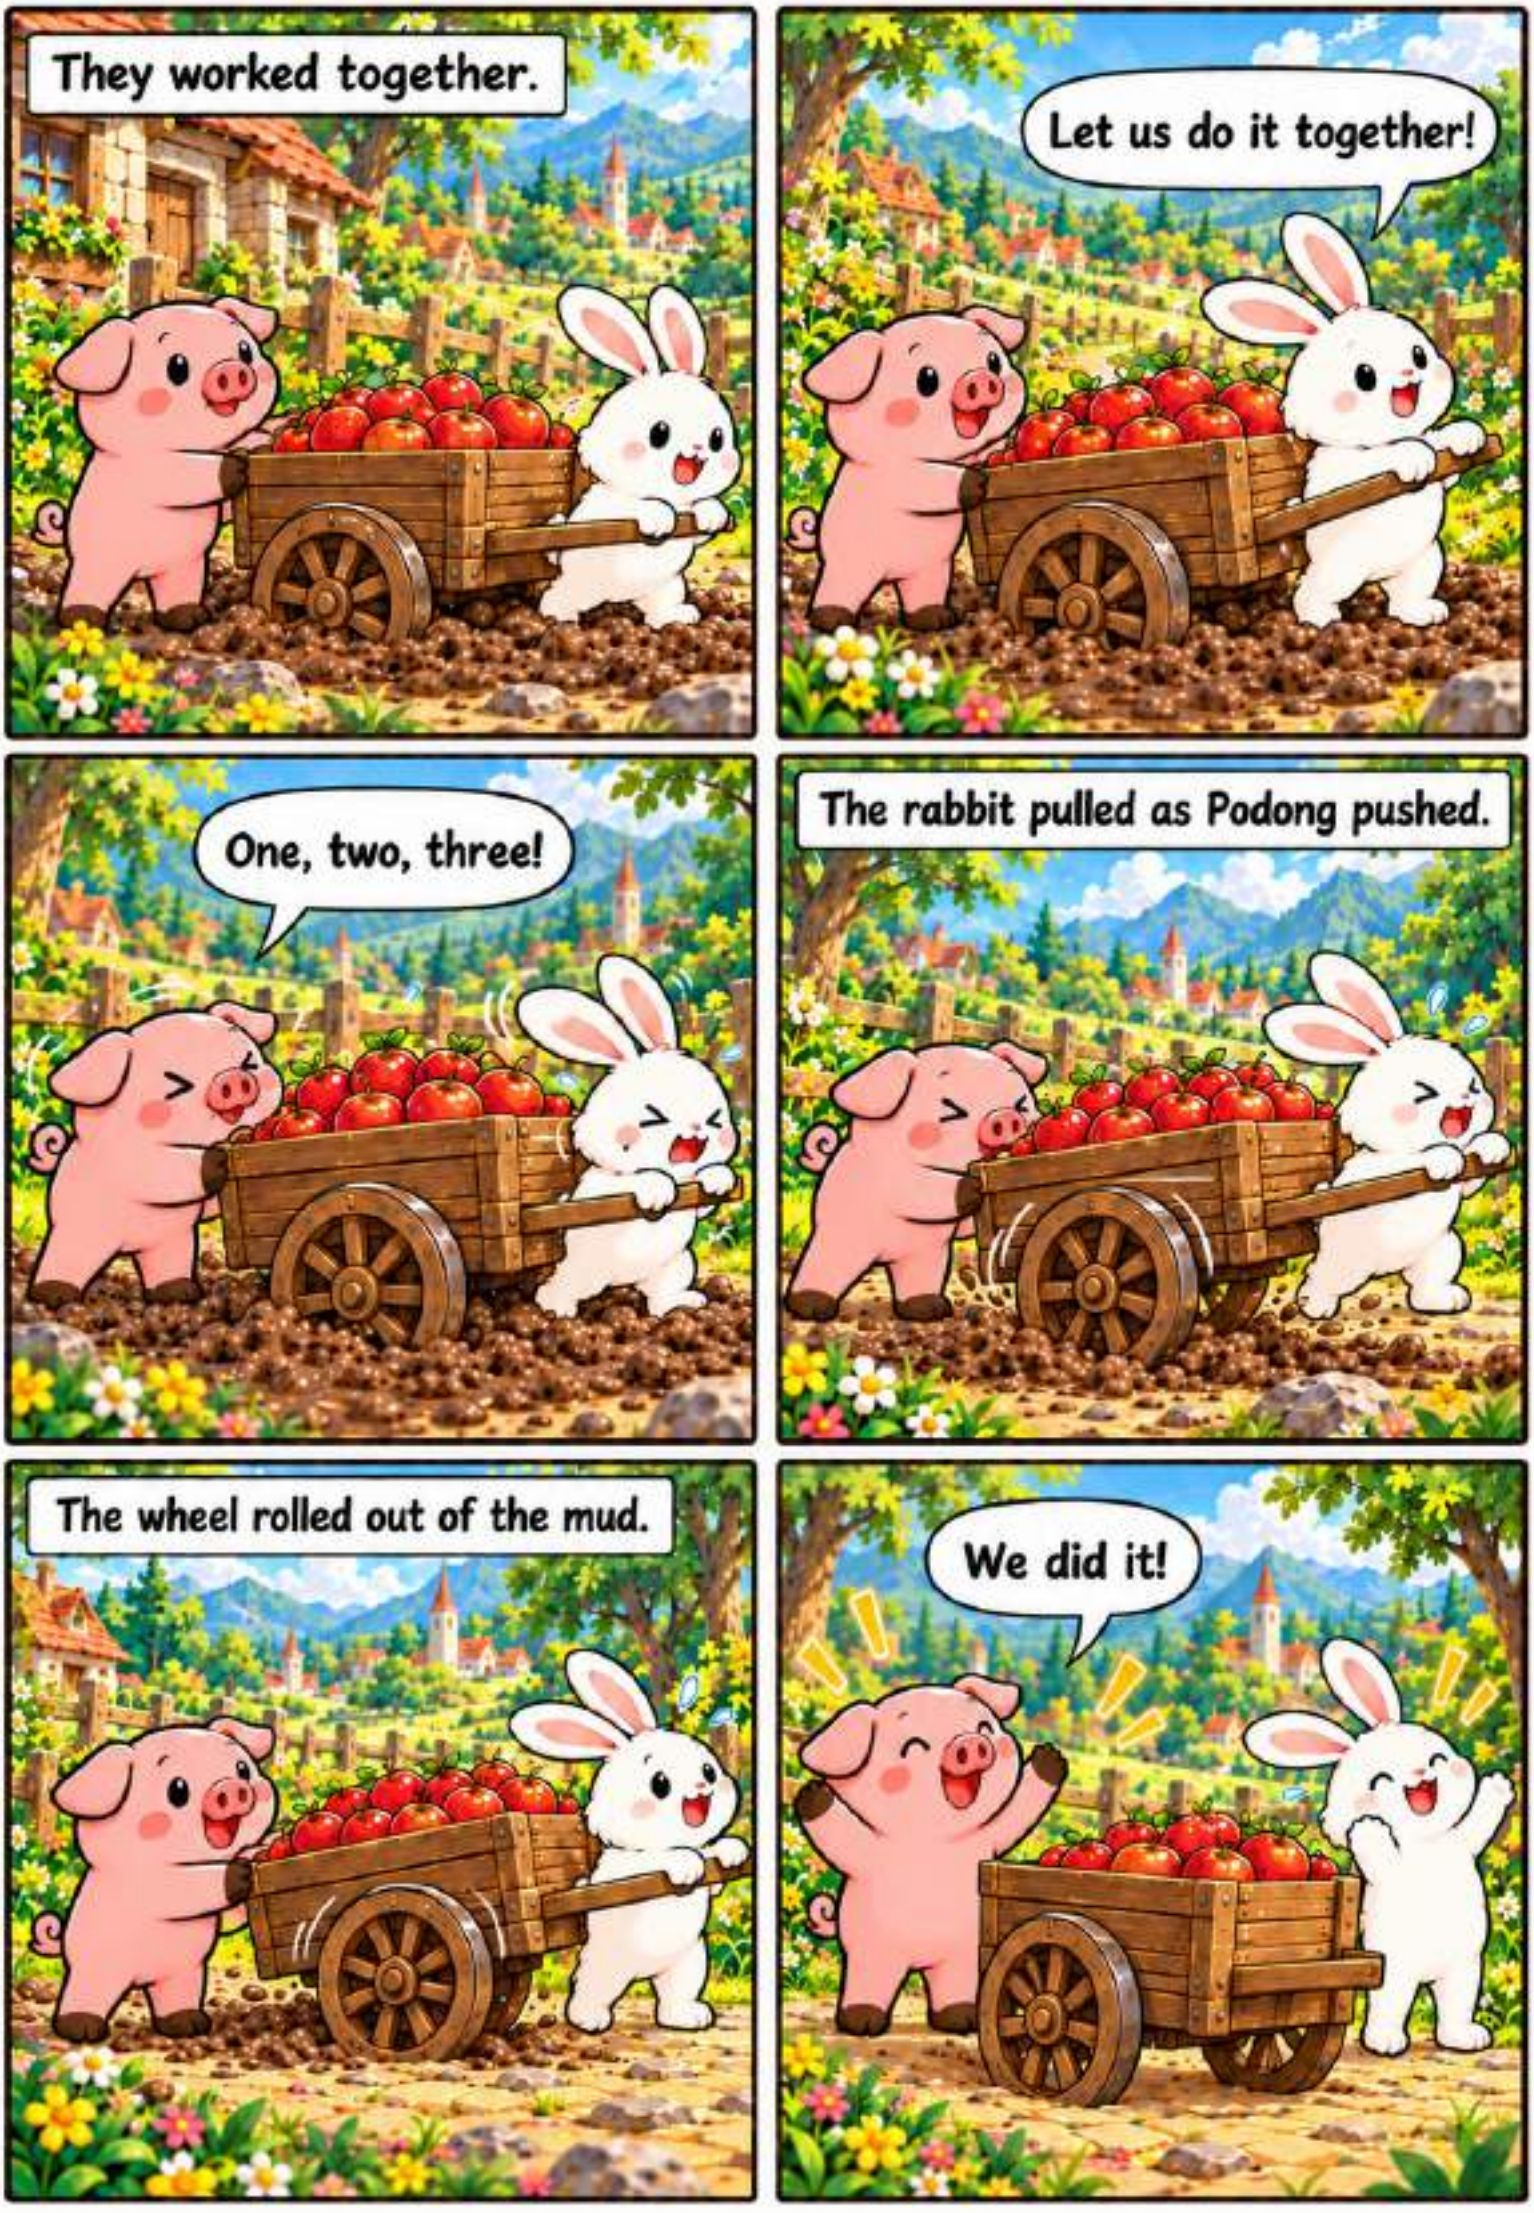
Podong had a big dream.
He wanted to see new places.
I want to see the world.
I am ready to go!
Today, his journey would begin.



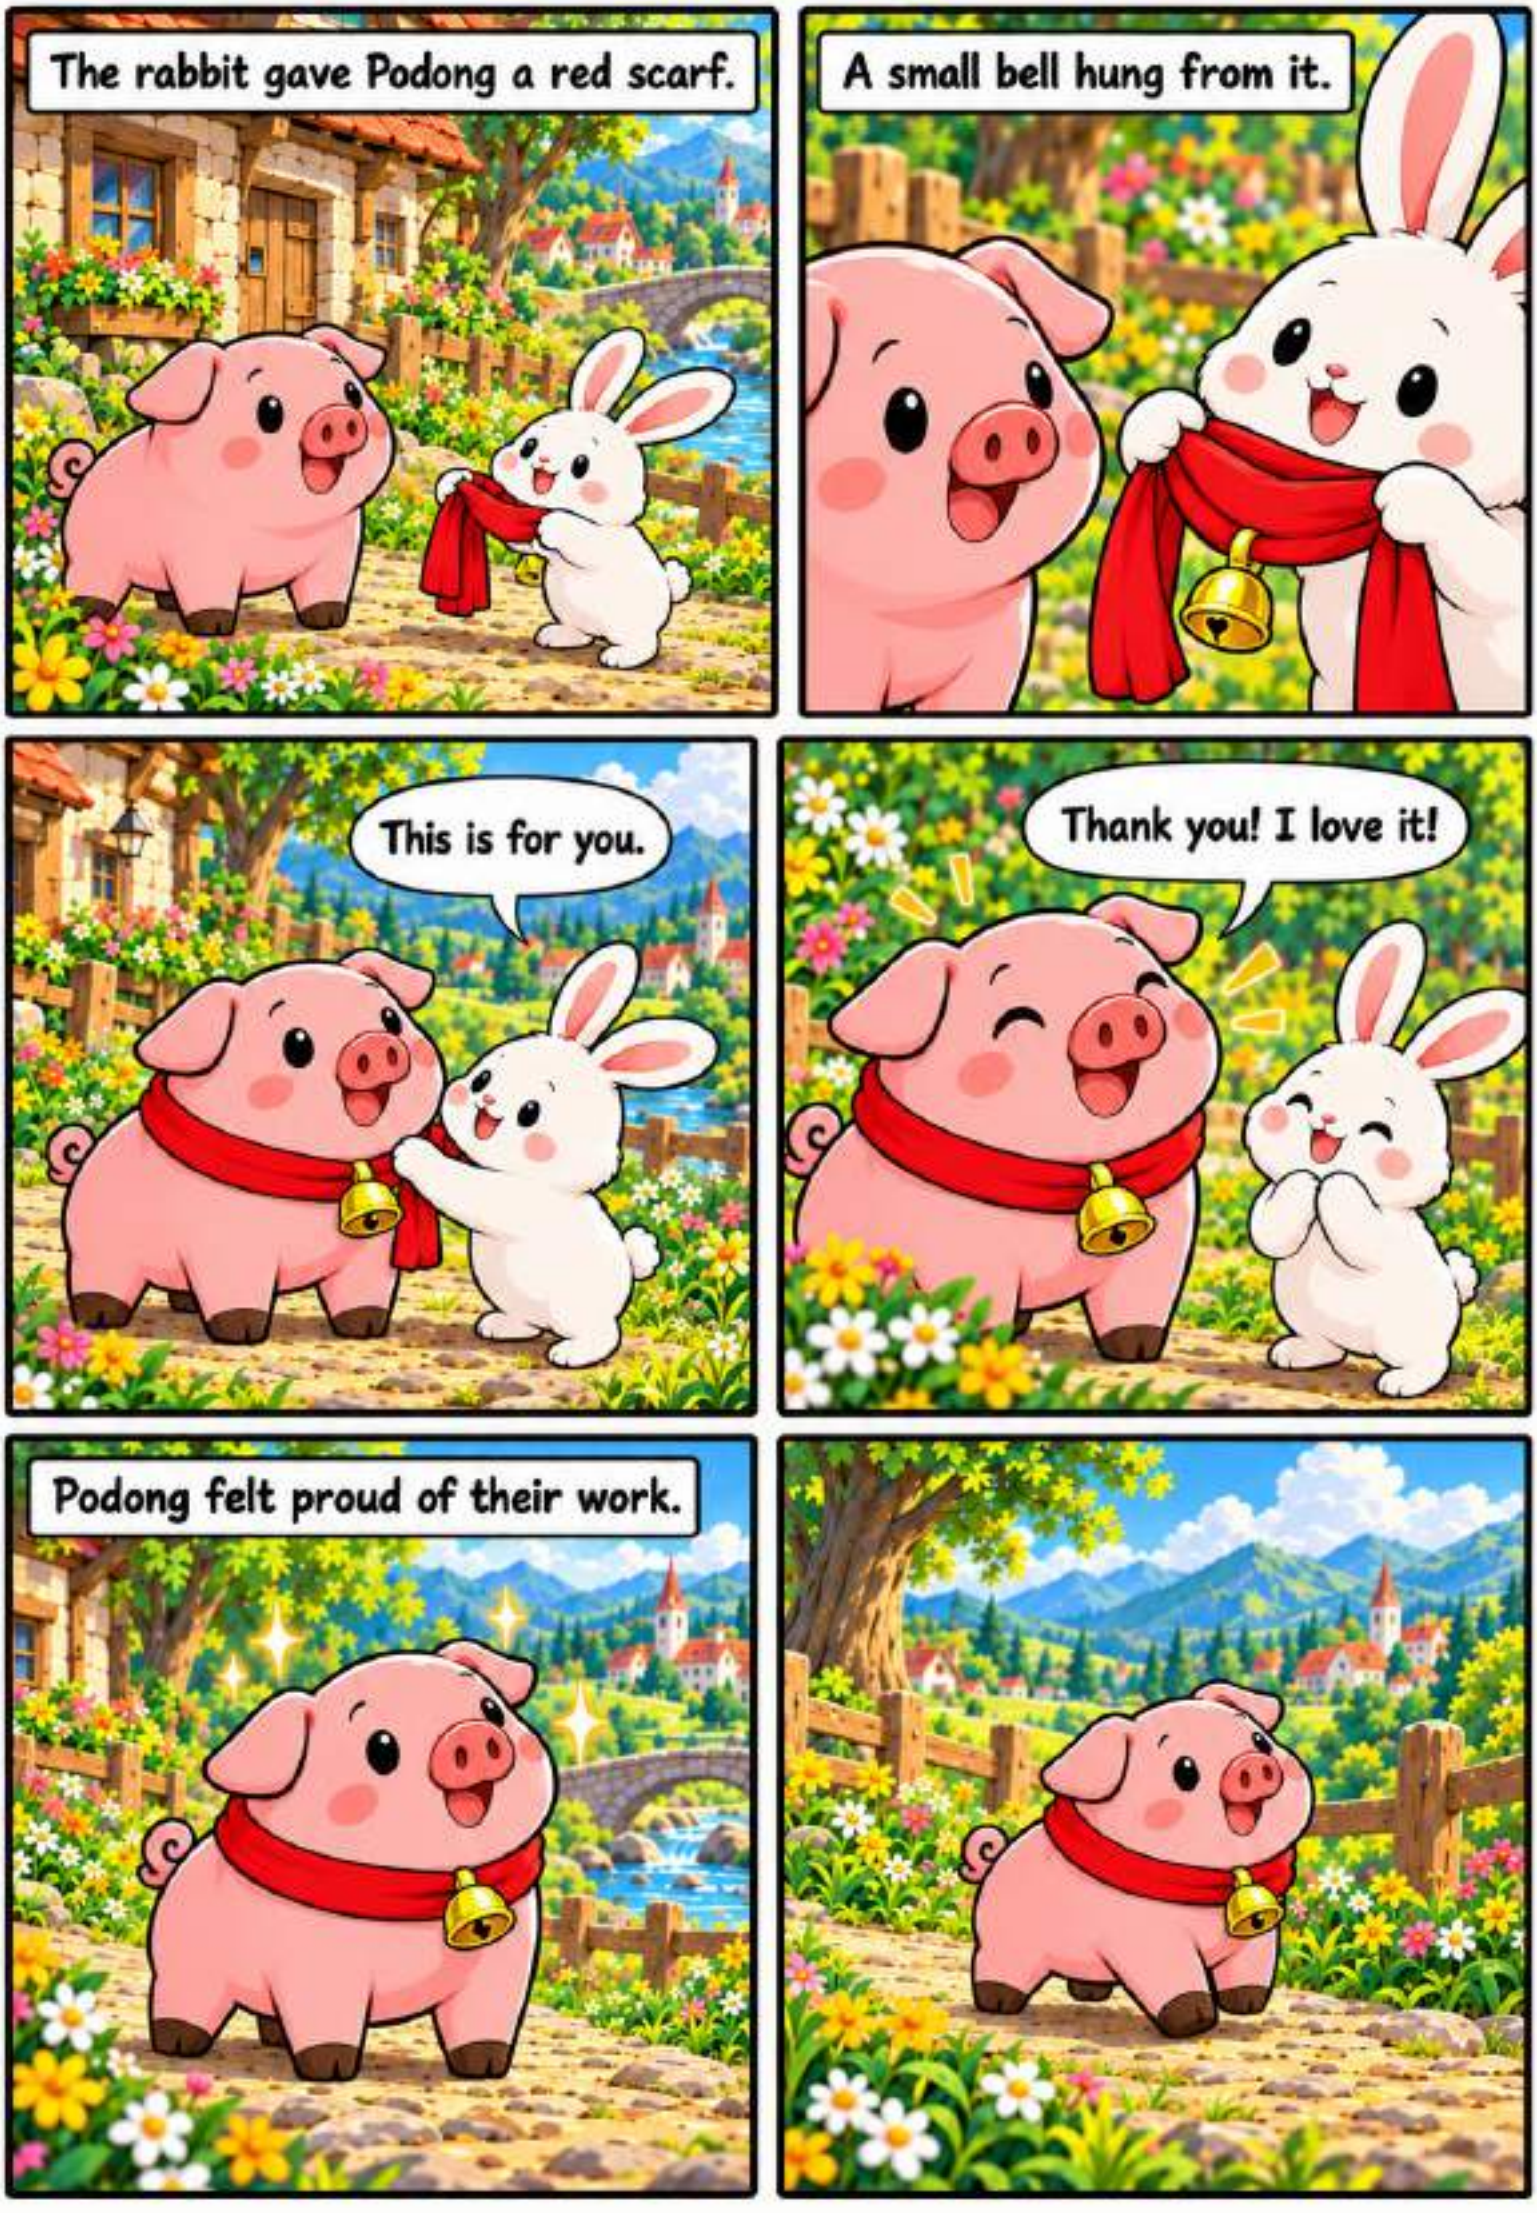
A rabbit stood by a cart.
Its wheel was stuck in the mud.
The apples made it heavy.
Can you help me?
Yes, I can.



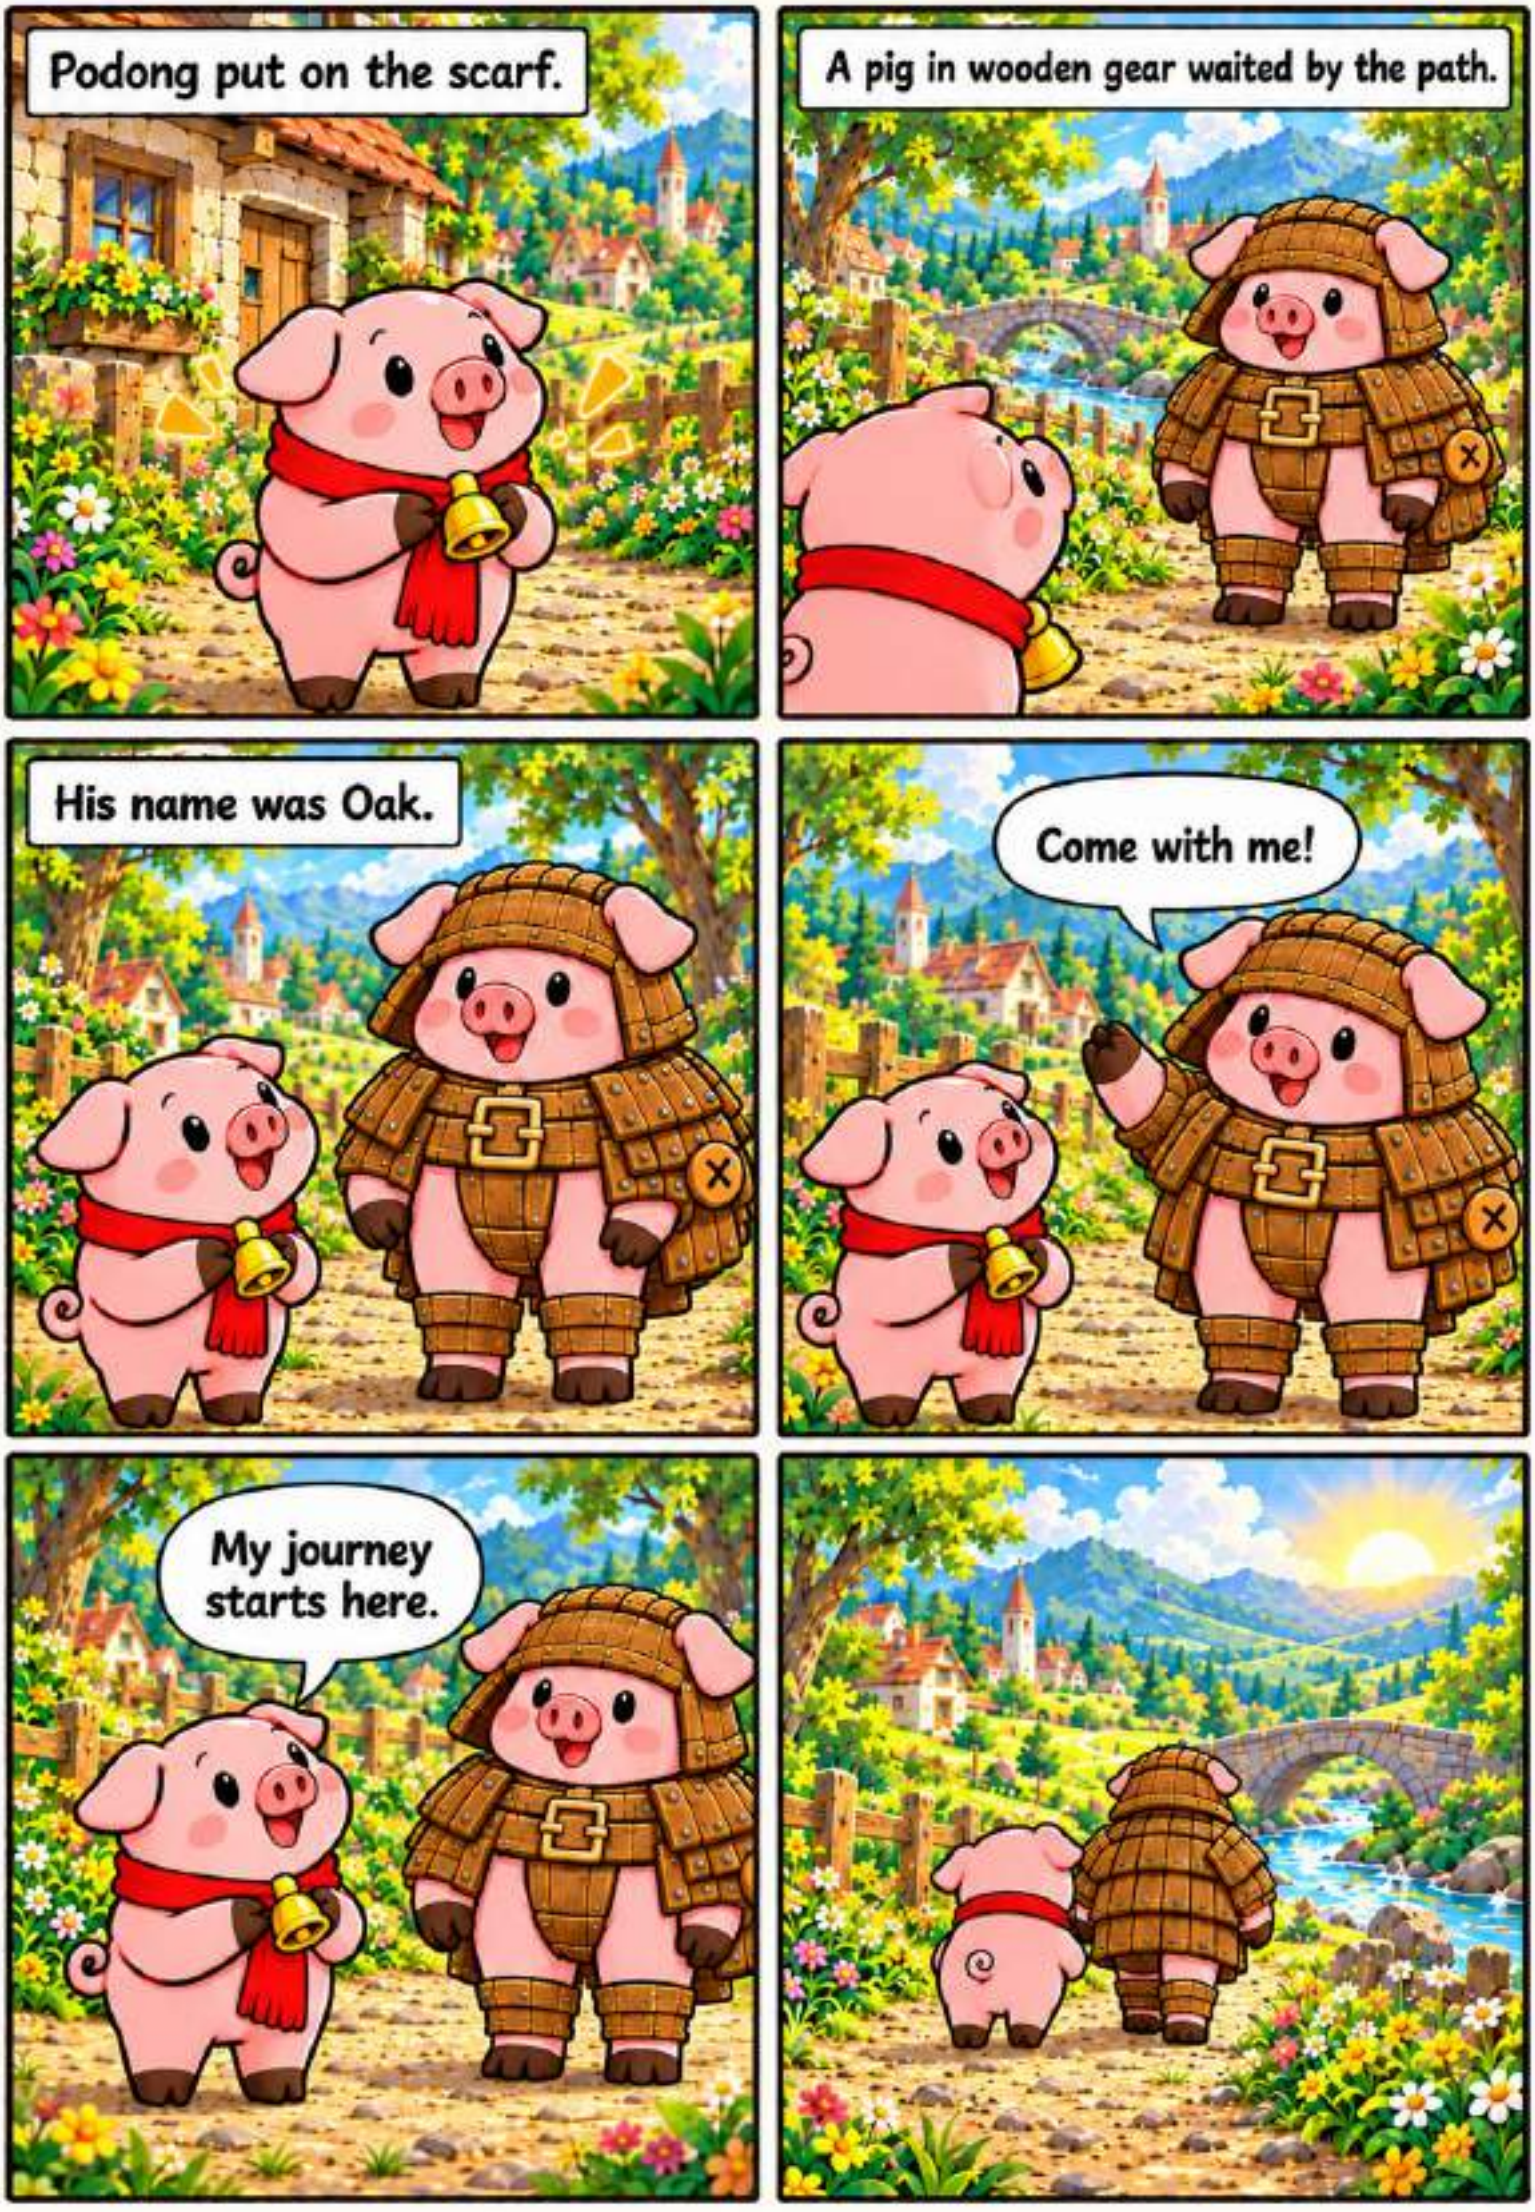
Podong tried to push the cart.
It did not move.
He looked at the rabbit and had a new plan.
Can you help me, too?
I can pull. You can push.



They worked together.
Let us do it together!
One, two, three!
The rabbit pulled as Podong pushed.
The wheel rolled out of the mud.
We did it!



The rabbit gave Podong a red scarf.
A small bell hung from it.
This is for you.
Thank you! I love it!
Podong felt proud of their work.



Podong put on the scarf.
A pig in wooden gear waited by the path.
His name was Oak.
Come with me!
My journey starts here.

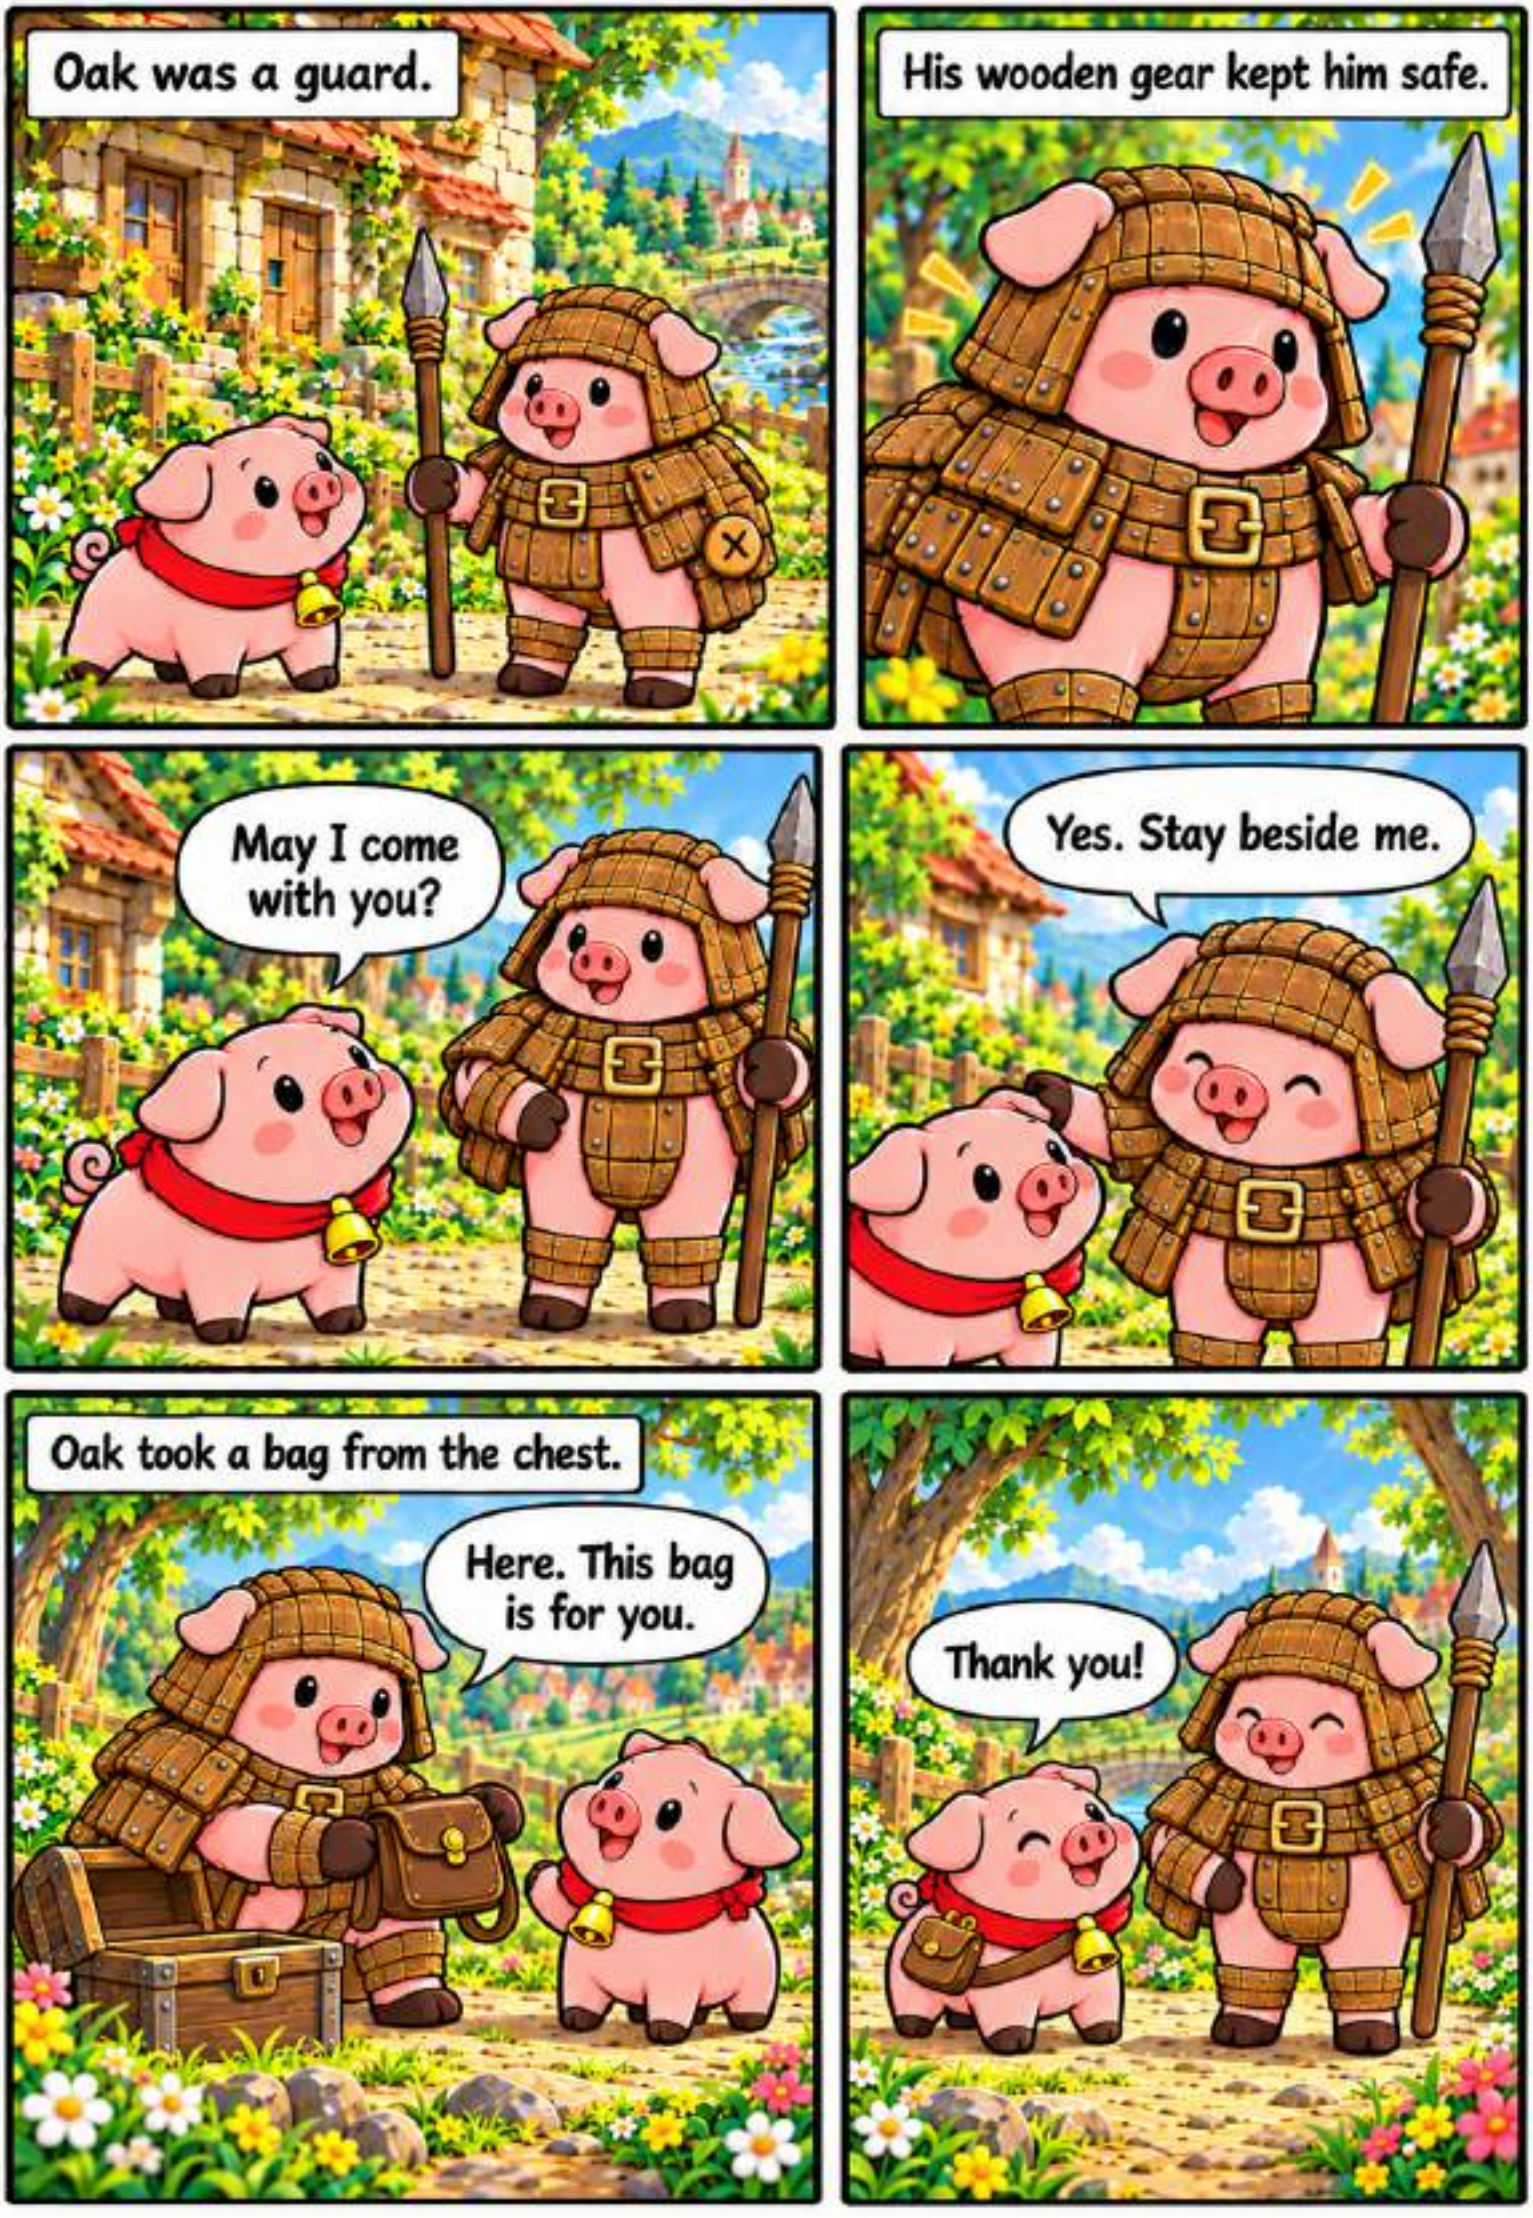
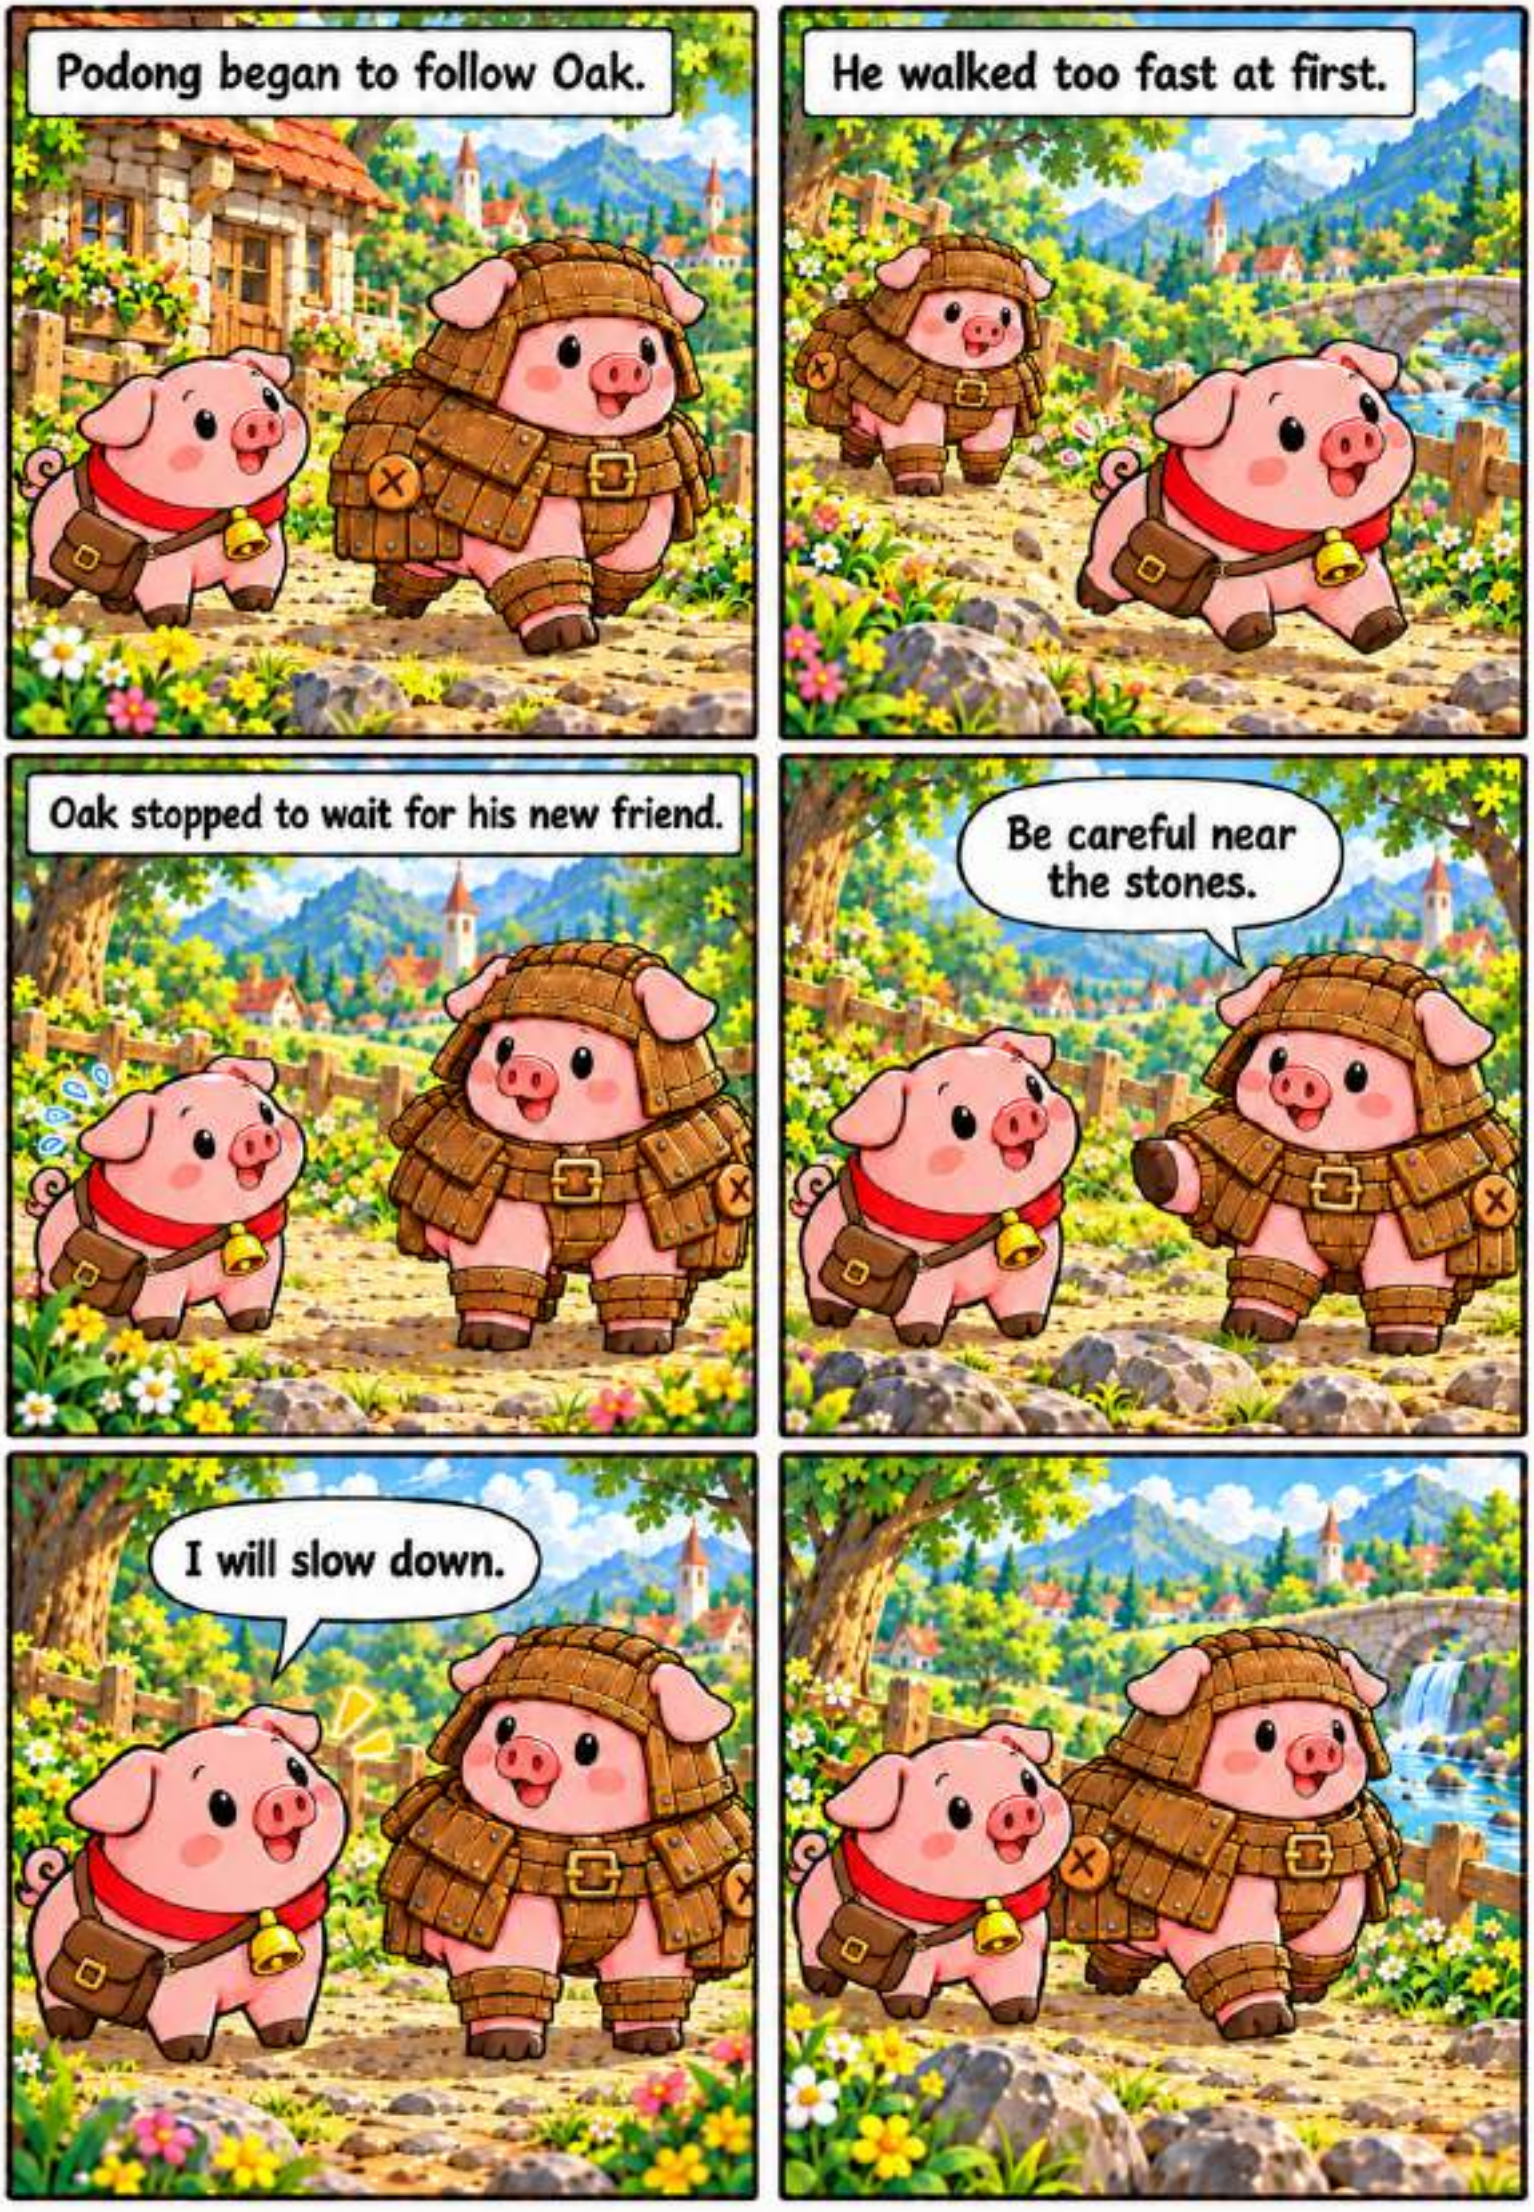
KEY EXPRESSIONS

YOUR QUEST

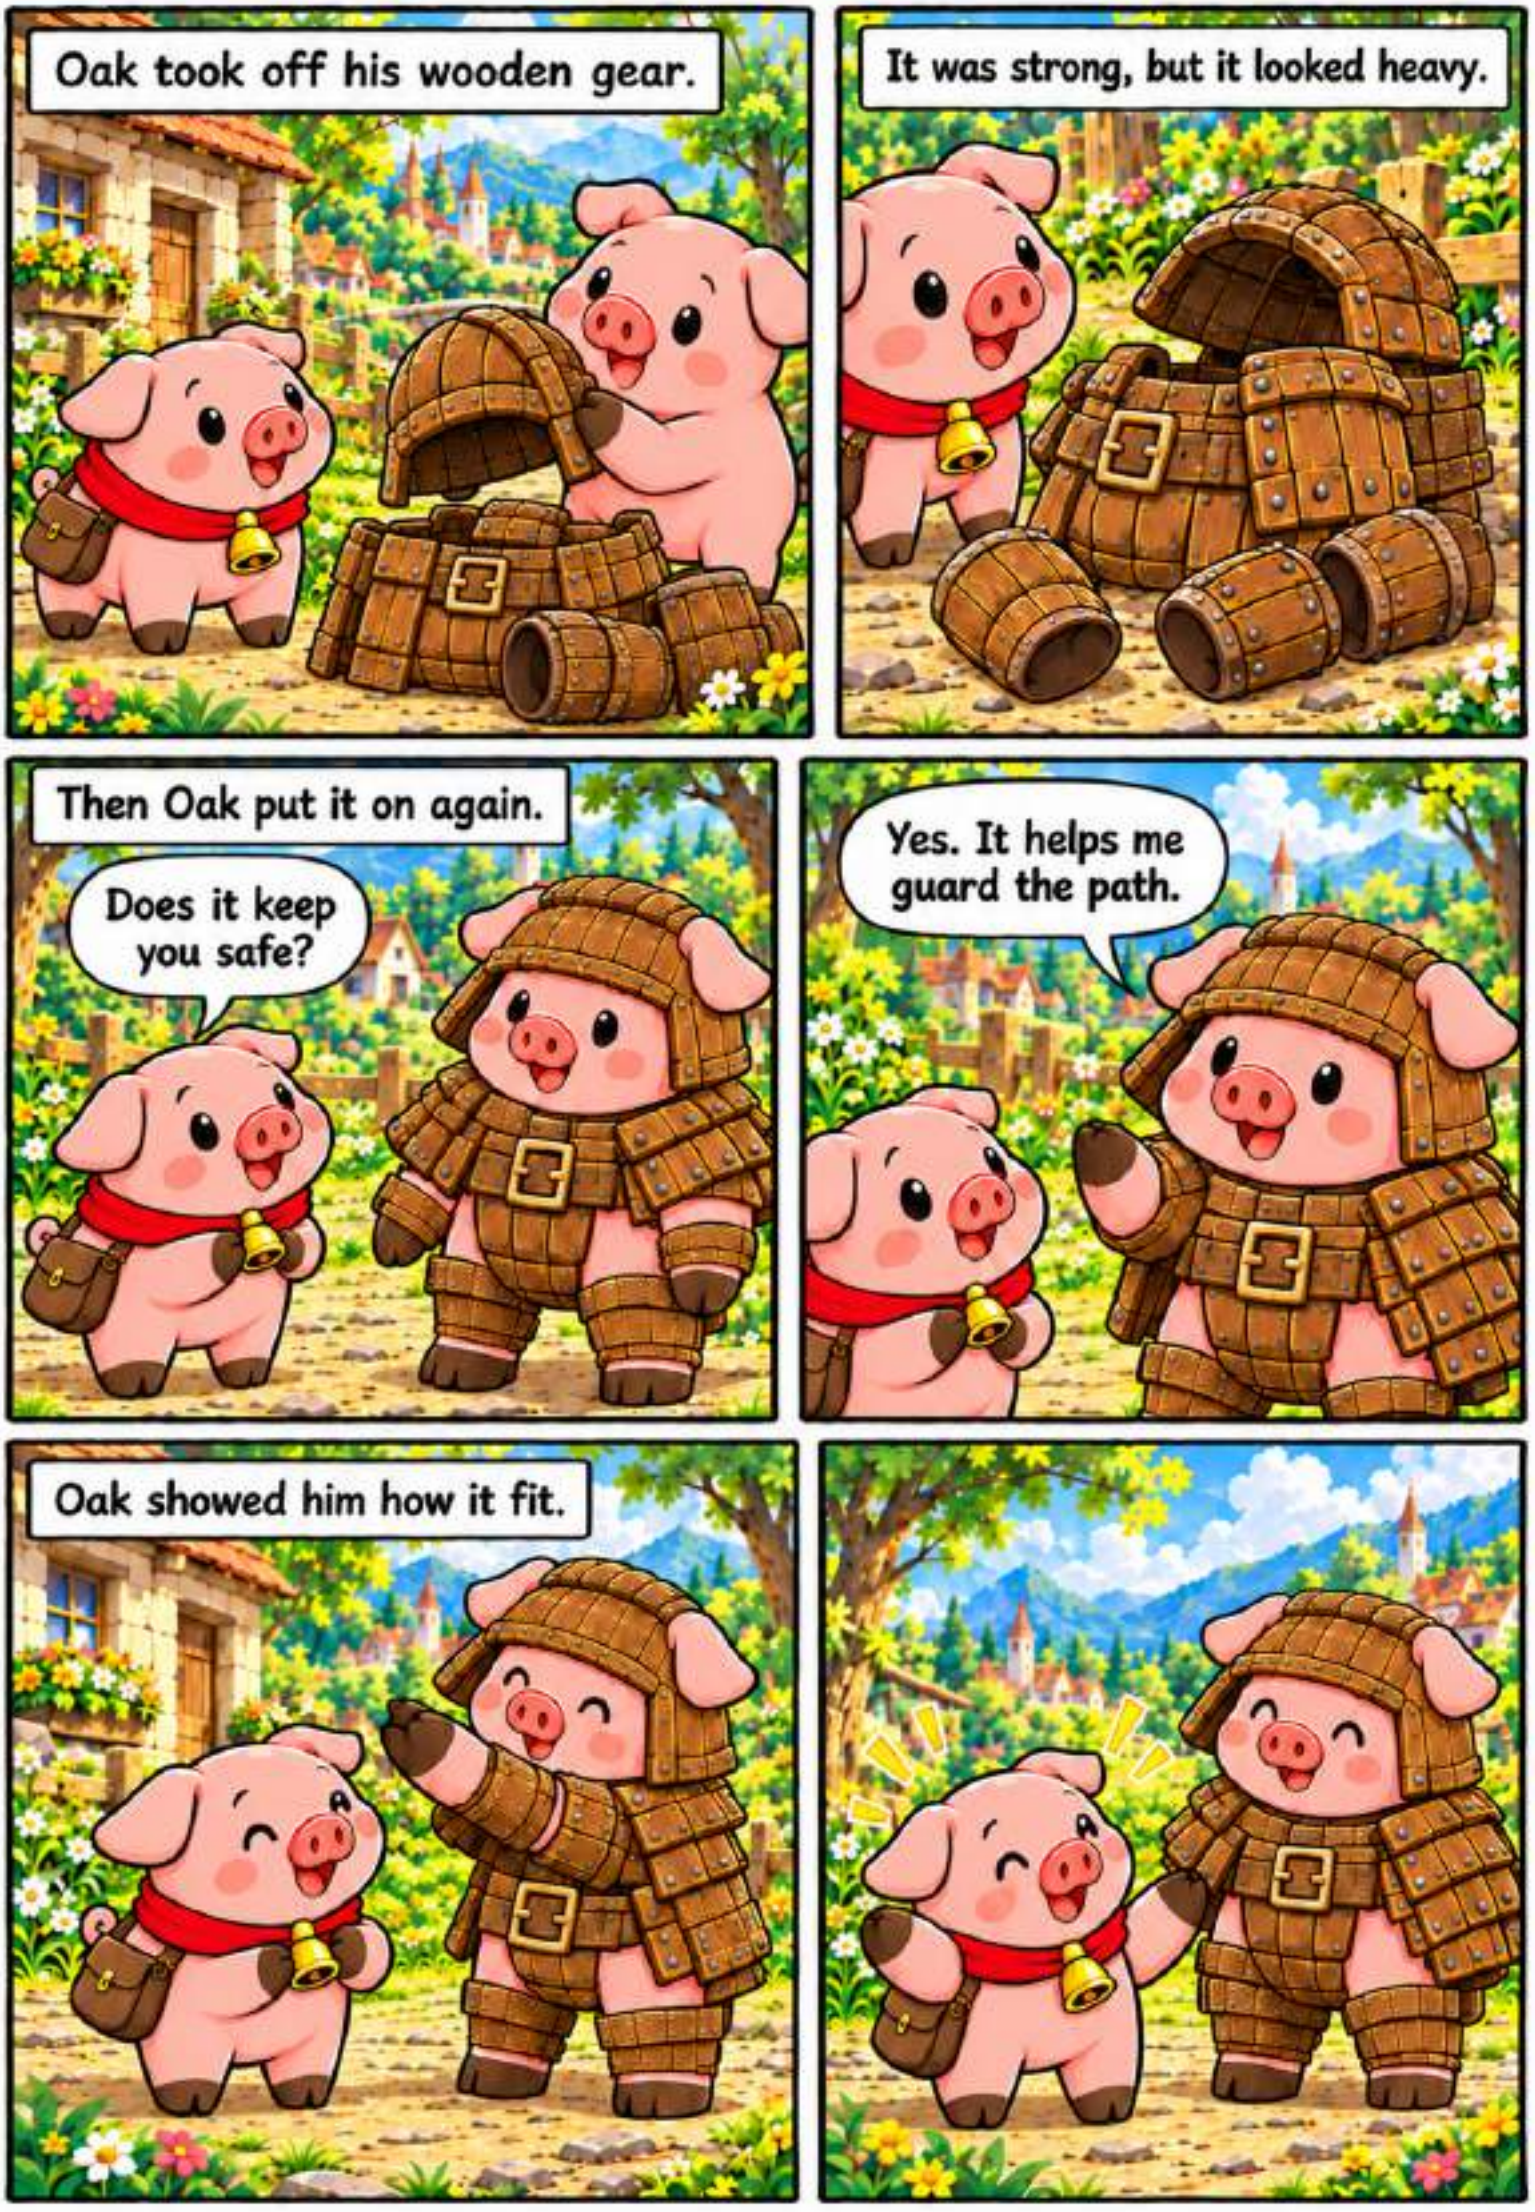
Get to know your guide.



Oak was a guard.
His wooden gear kept him safe.
May I come with you?
Yes. Stay beside me.
Oak took a bag from the chest.
Here. This bag is for you.
Thank you!

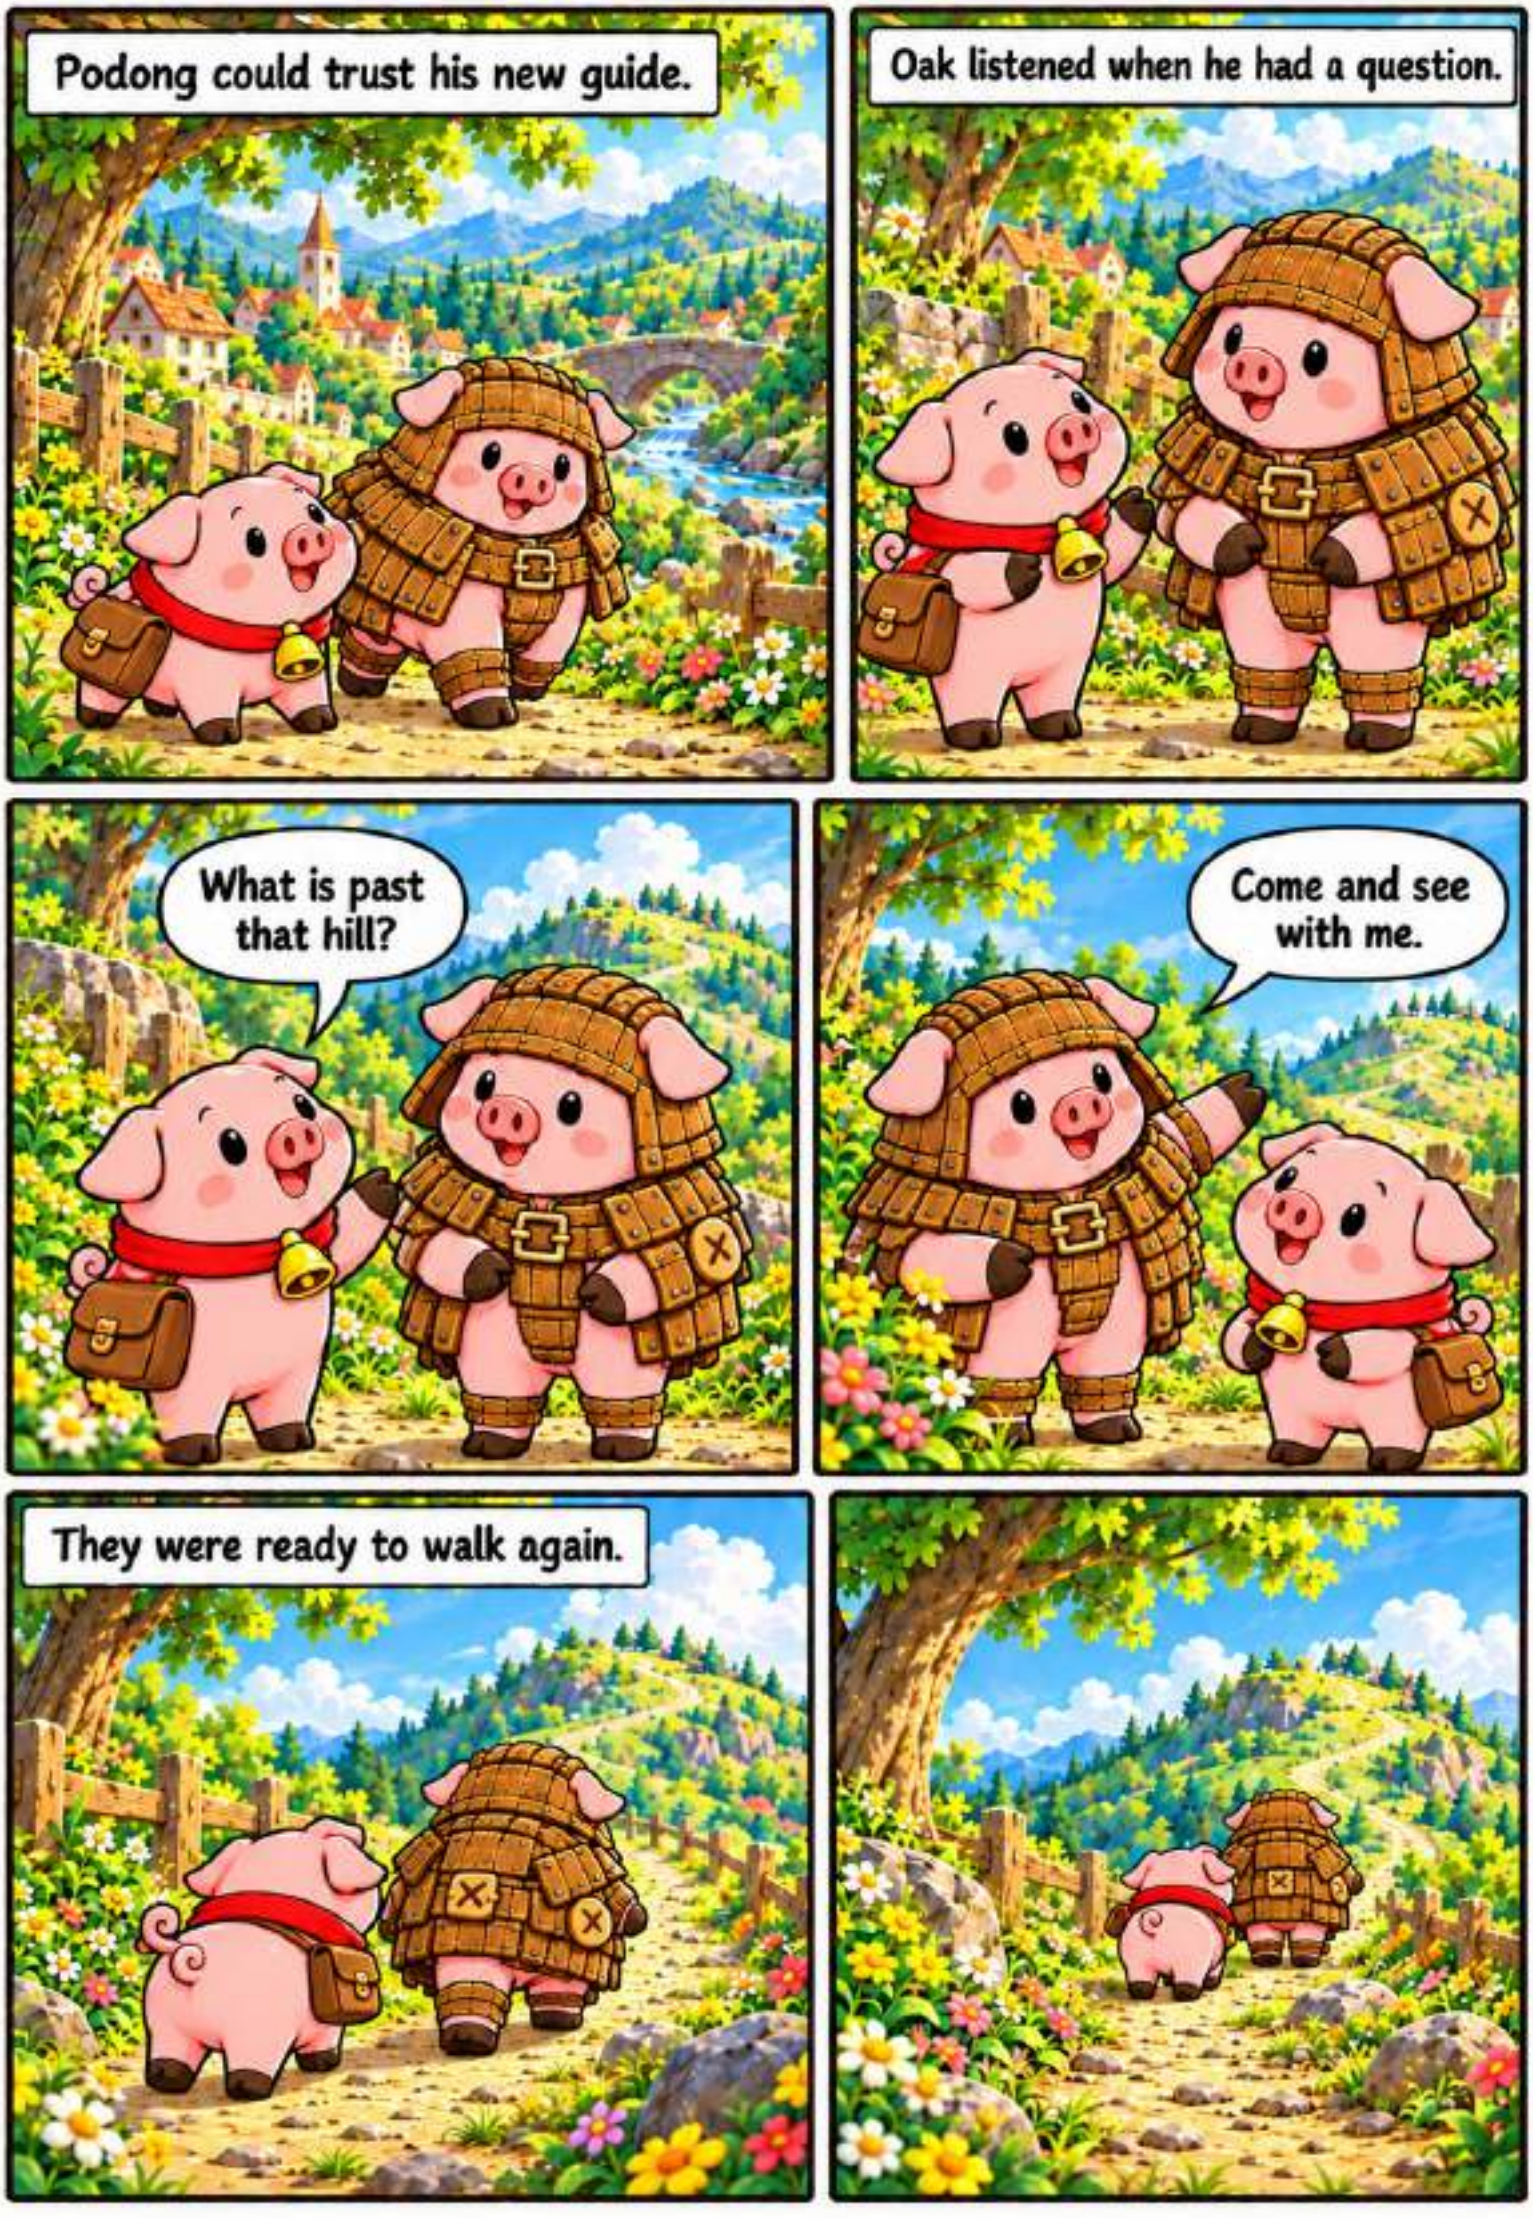


Podong began to follow Oak.
He walked too fast at first.
Oak stopped to wait for his new friend.
Be careful near the stones.
I will slow down.



Oak took off his wooden gear.
It was strong, but it looked heavy.
Then Oak put it on again.
Does it keep you safe?
Yes. It helps me guard the path.
Oak showed him how it fit.

They sat beside a tree.
Oak had some water to share.
Would you like some water?
Yes, please. Have an apple.
Podong shared an apple from his bag.



Podong could trust his new guide.
Oak listened when he had a question.
What is past that hill?
Come and see with me.
They were ready to walk again.

Podong and Oak walked side by side.
The bell made a soft sound.
Stay beside me.
I am glad we are friends.
A small farm came into view.

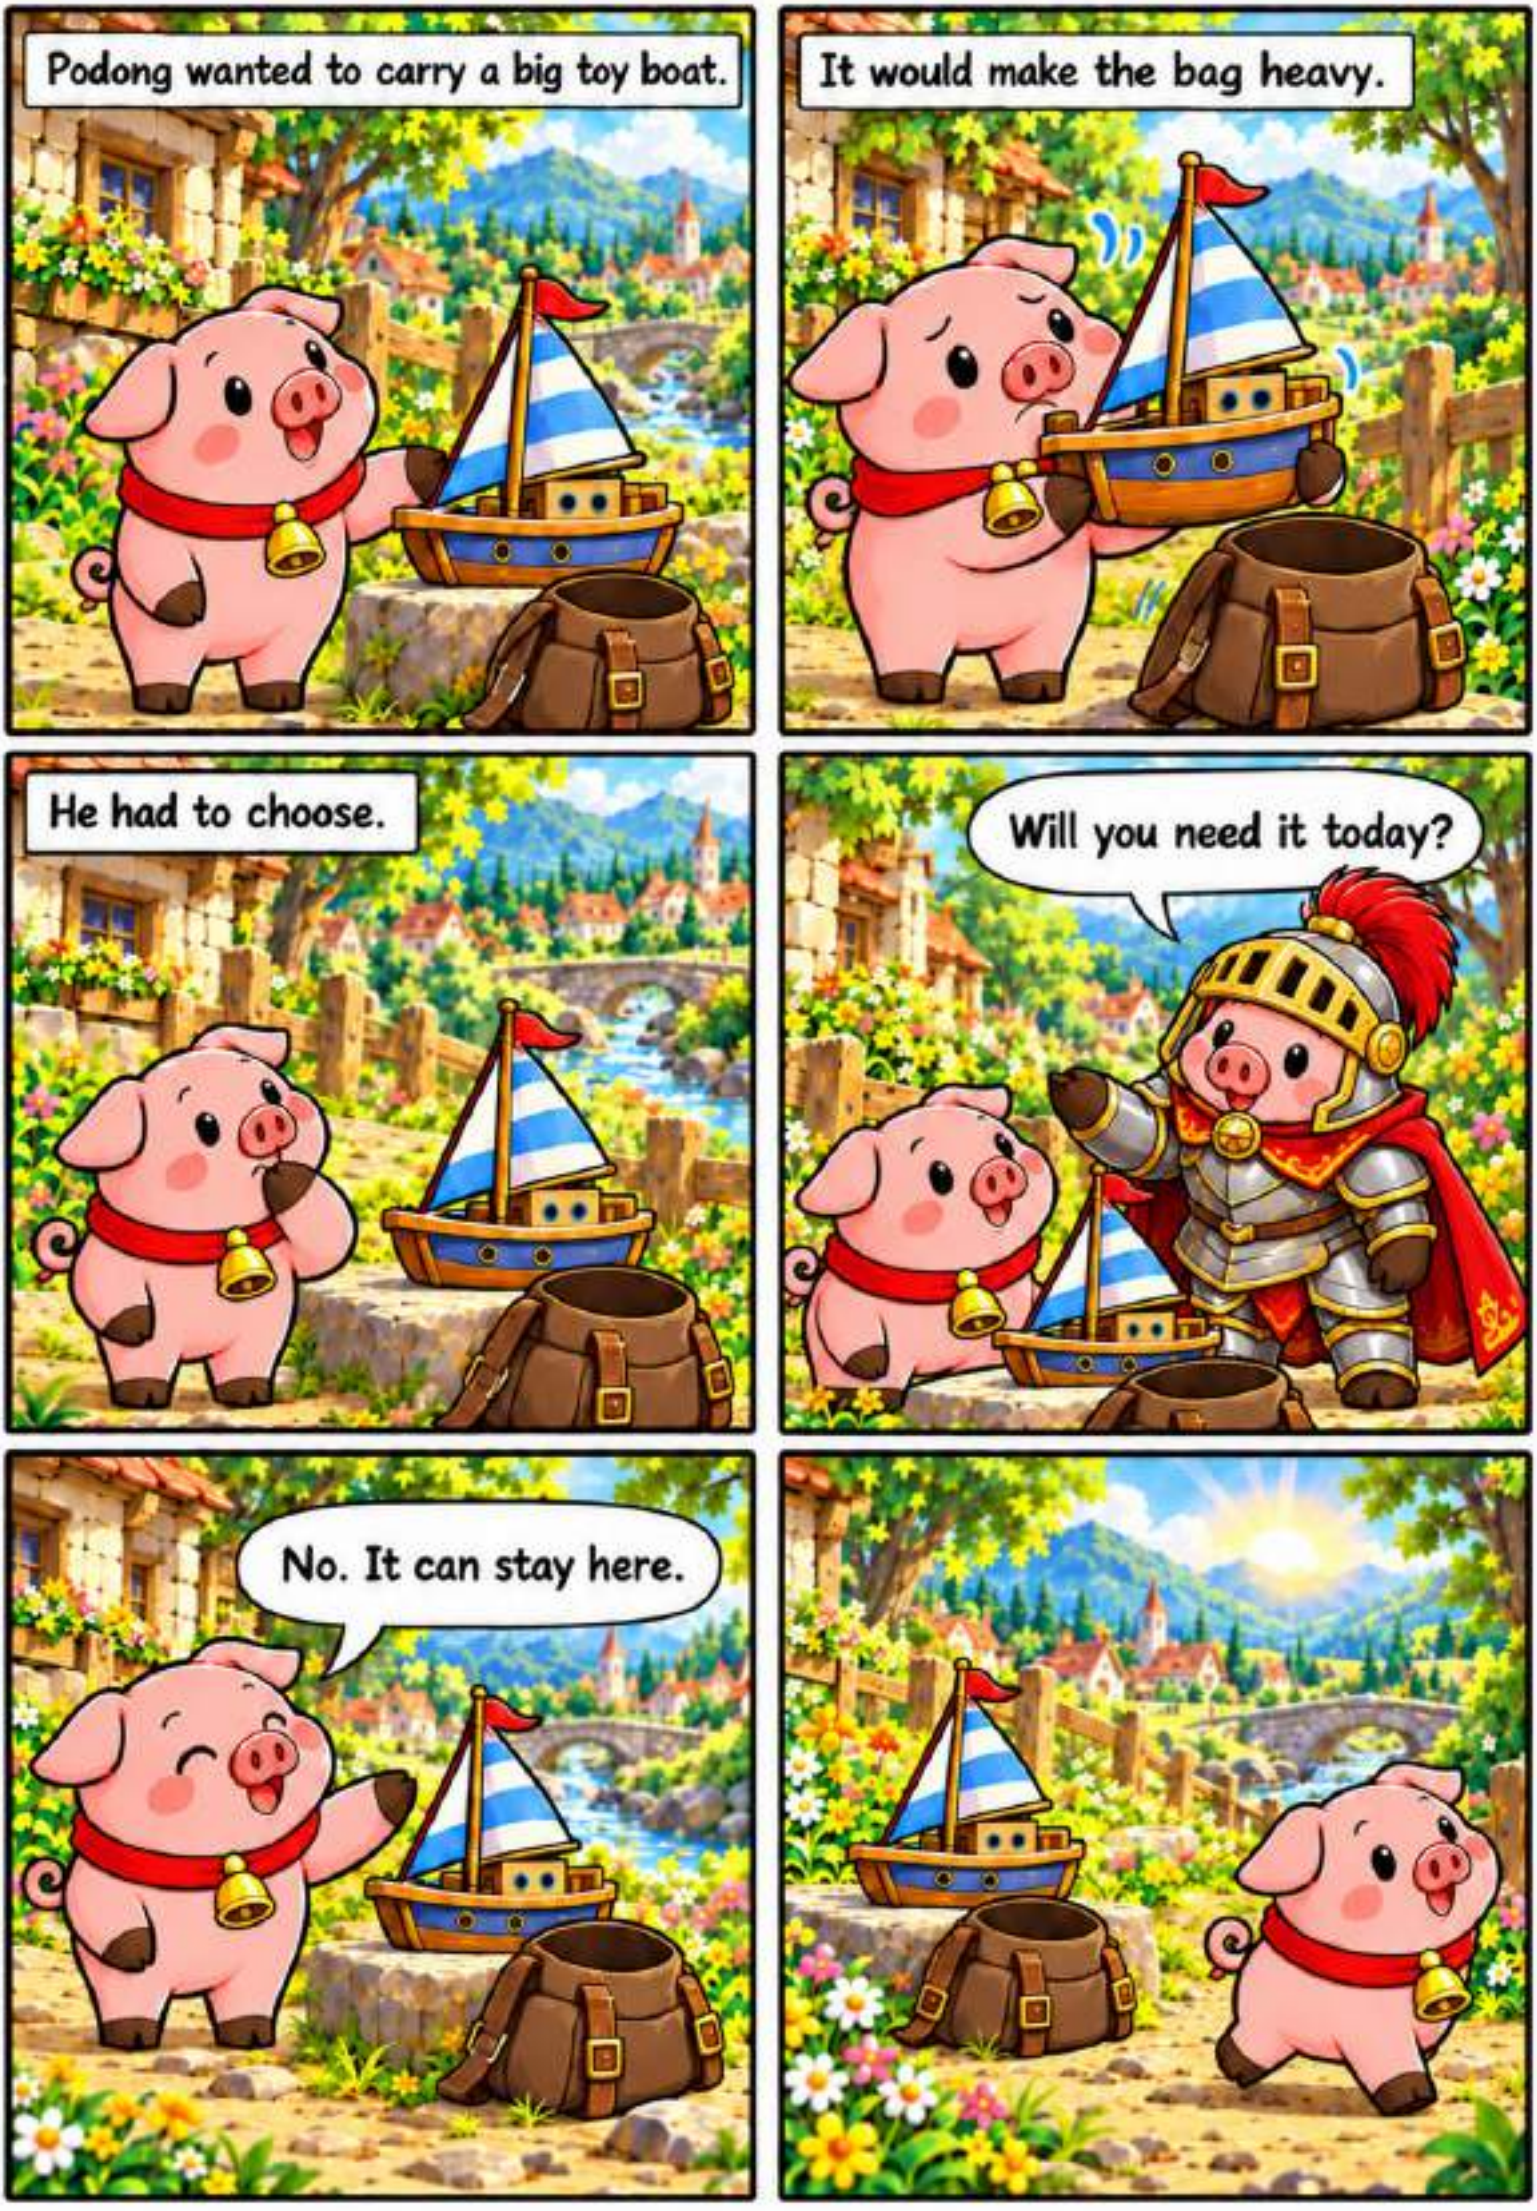
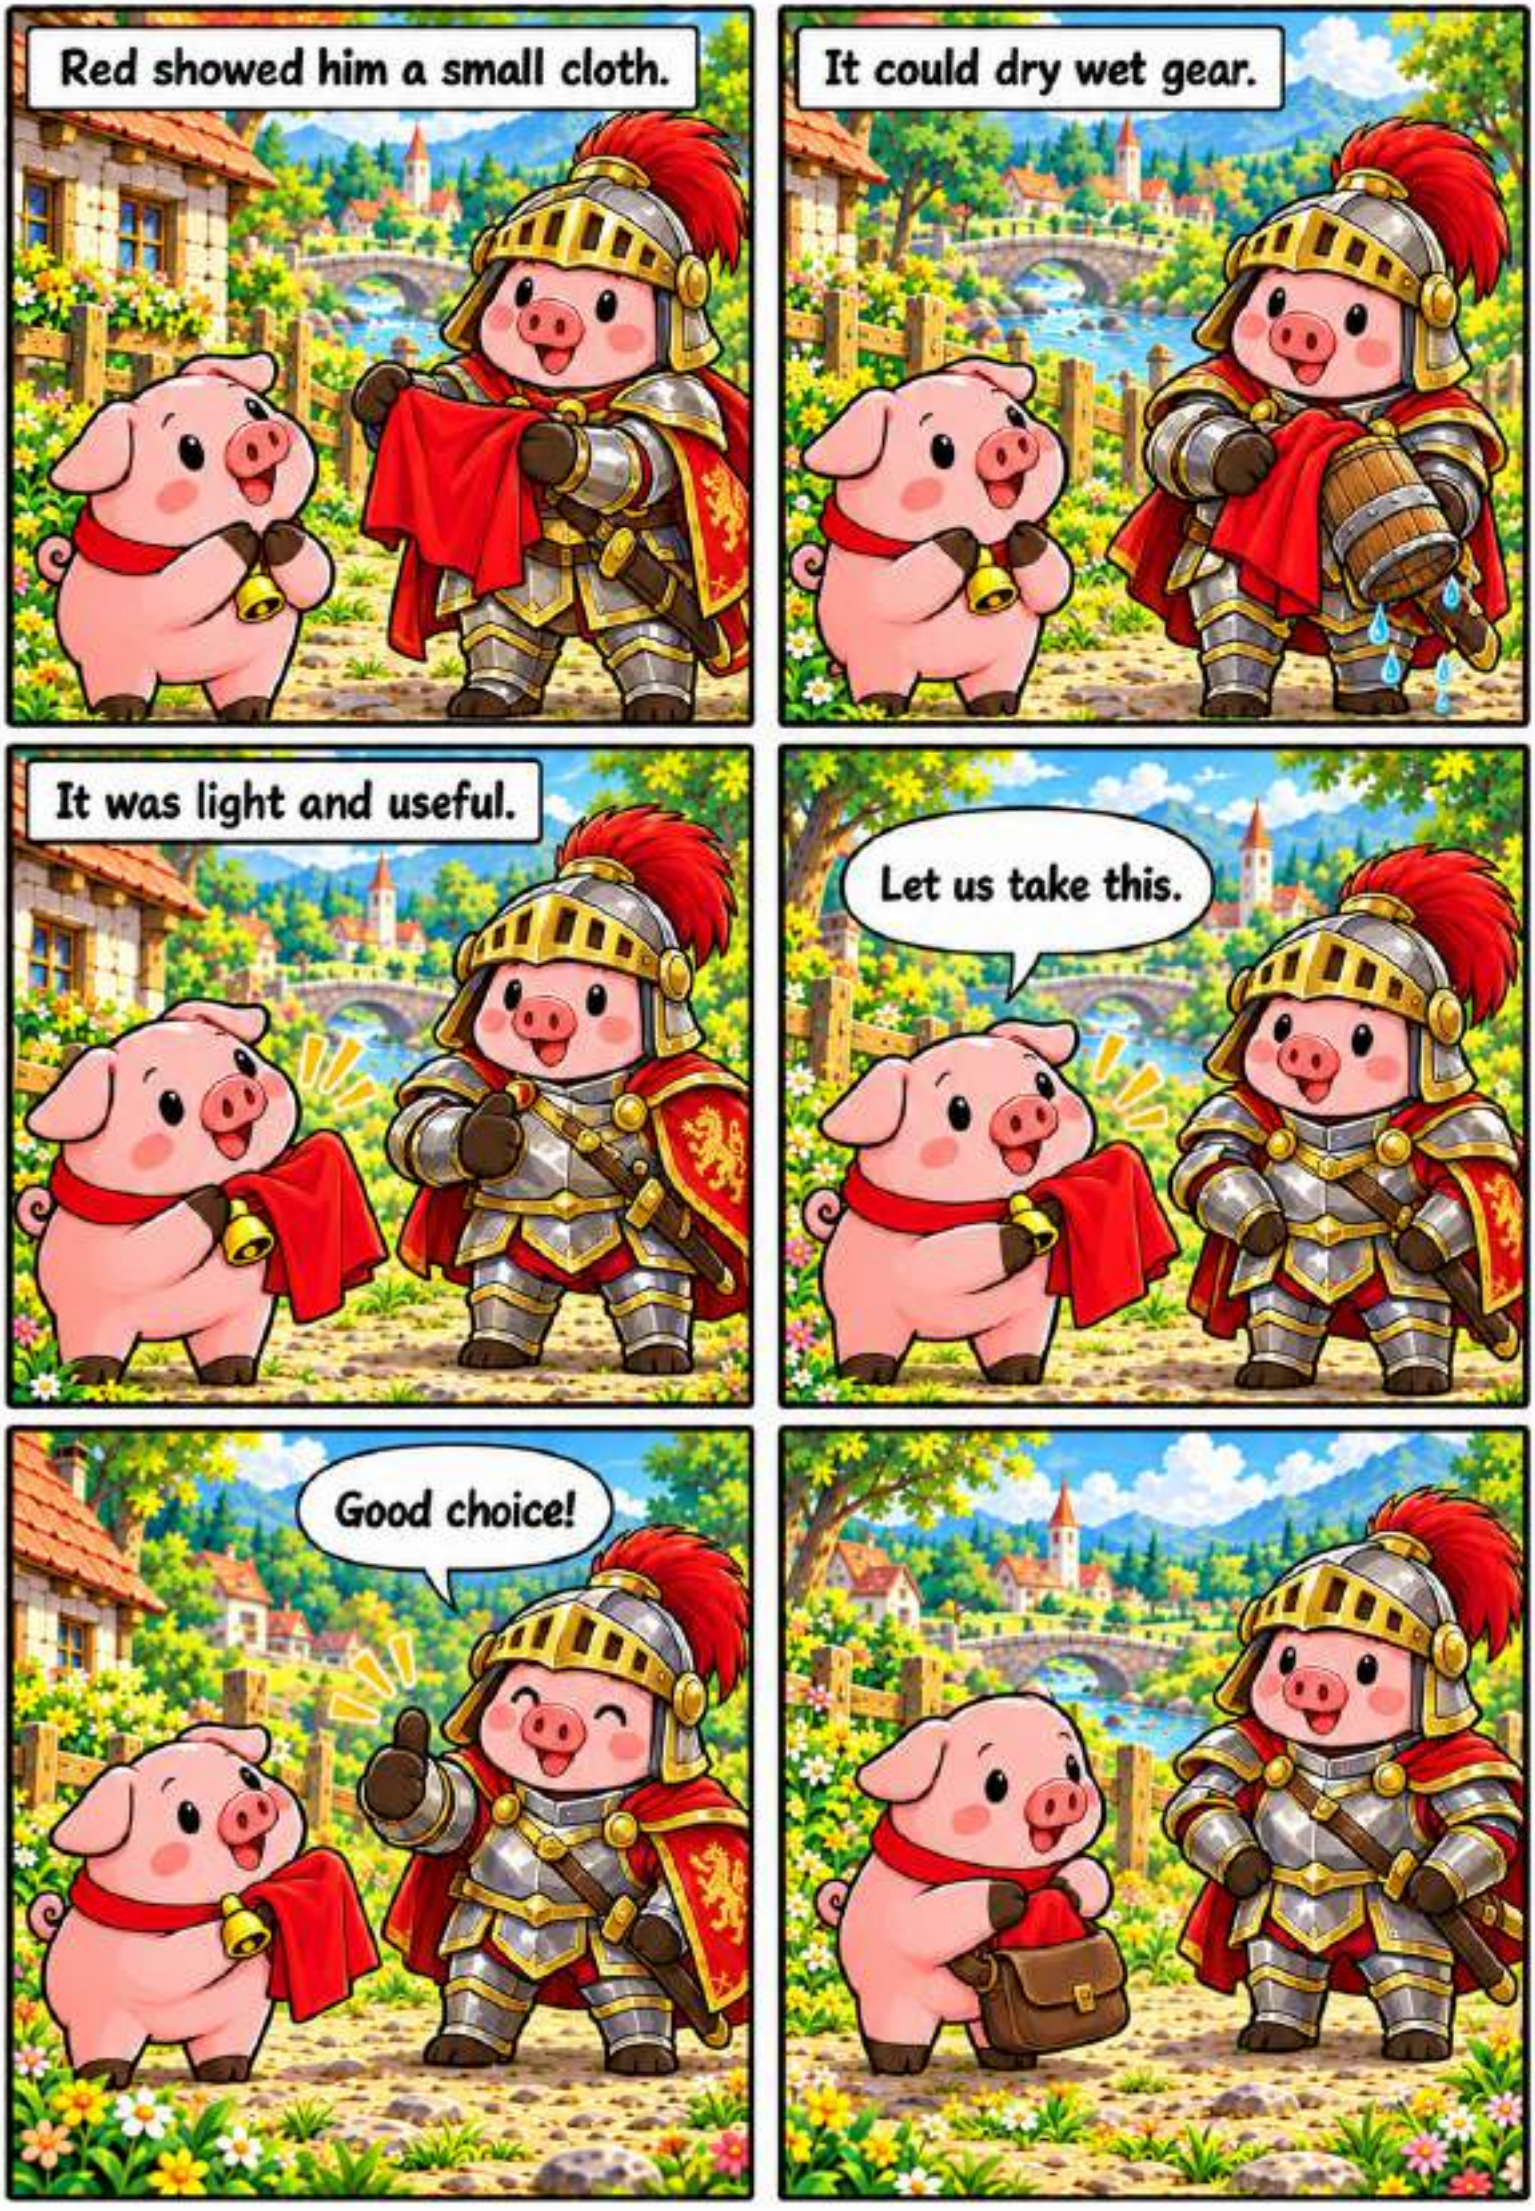
Podong looked in his bag.
It was almost empty.
Red, a knight, came to help him pack.
What do we need?
Let us make a list.

They would need food and water.
Two apples were enough for now.
Let us take this water.
We can share the apples.
Podong put them in the bag.

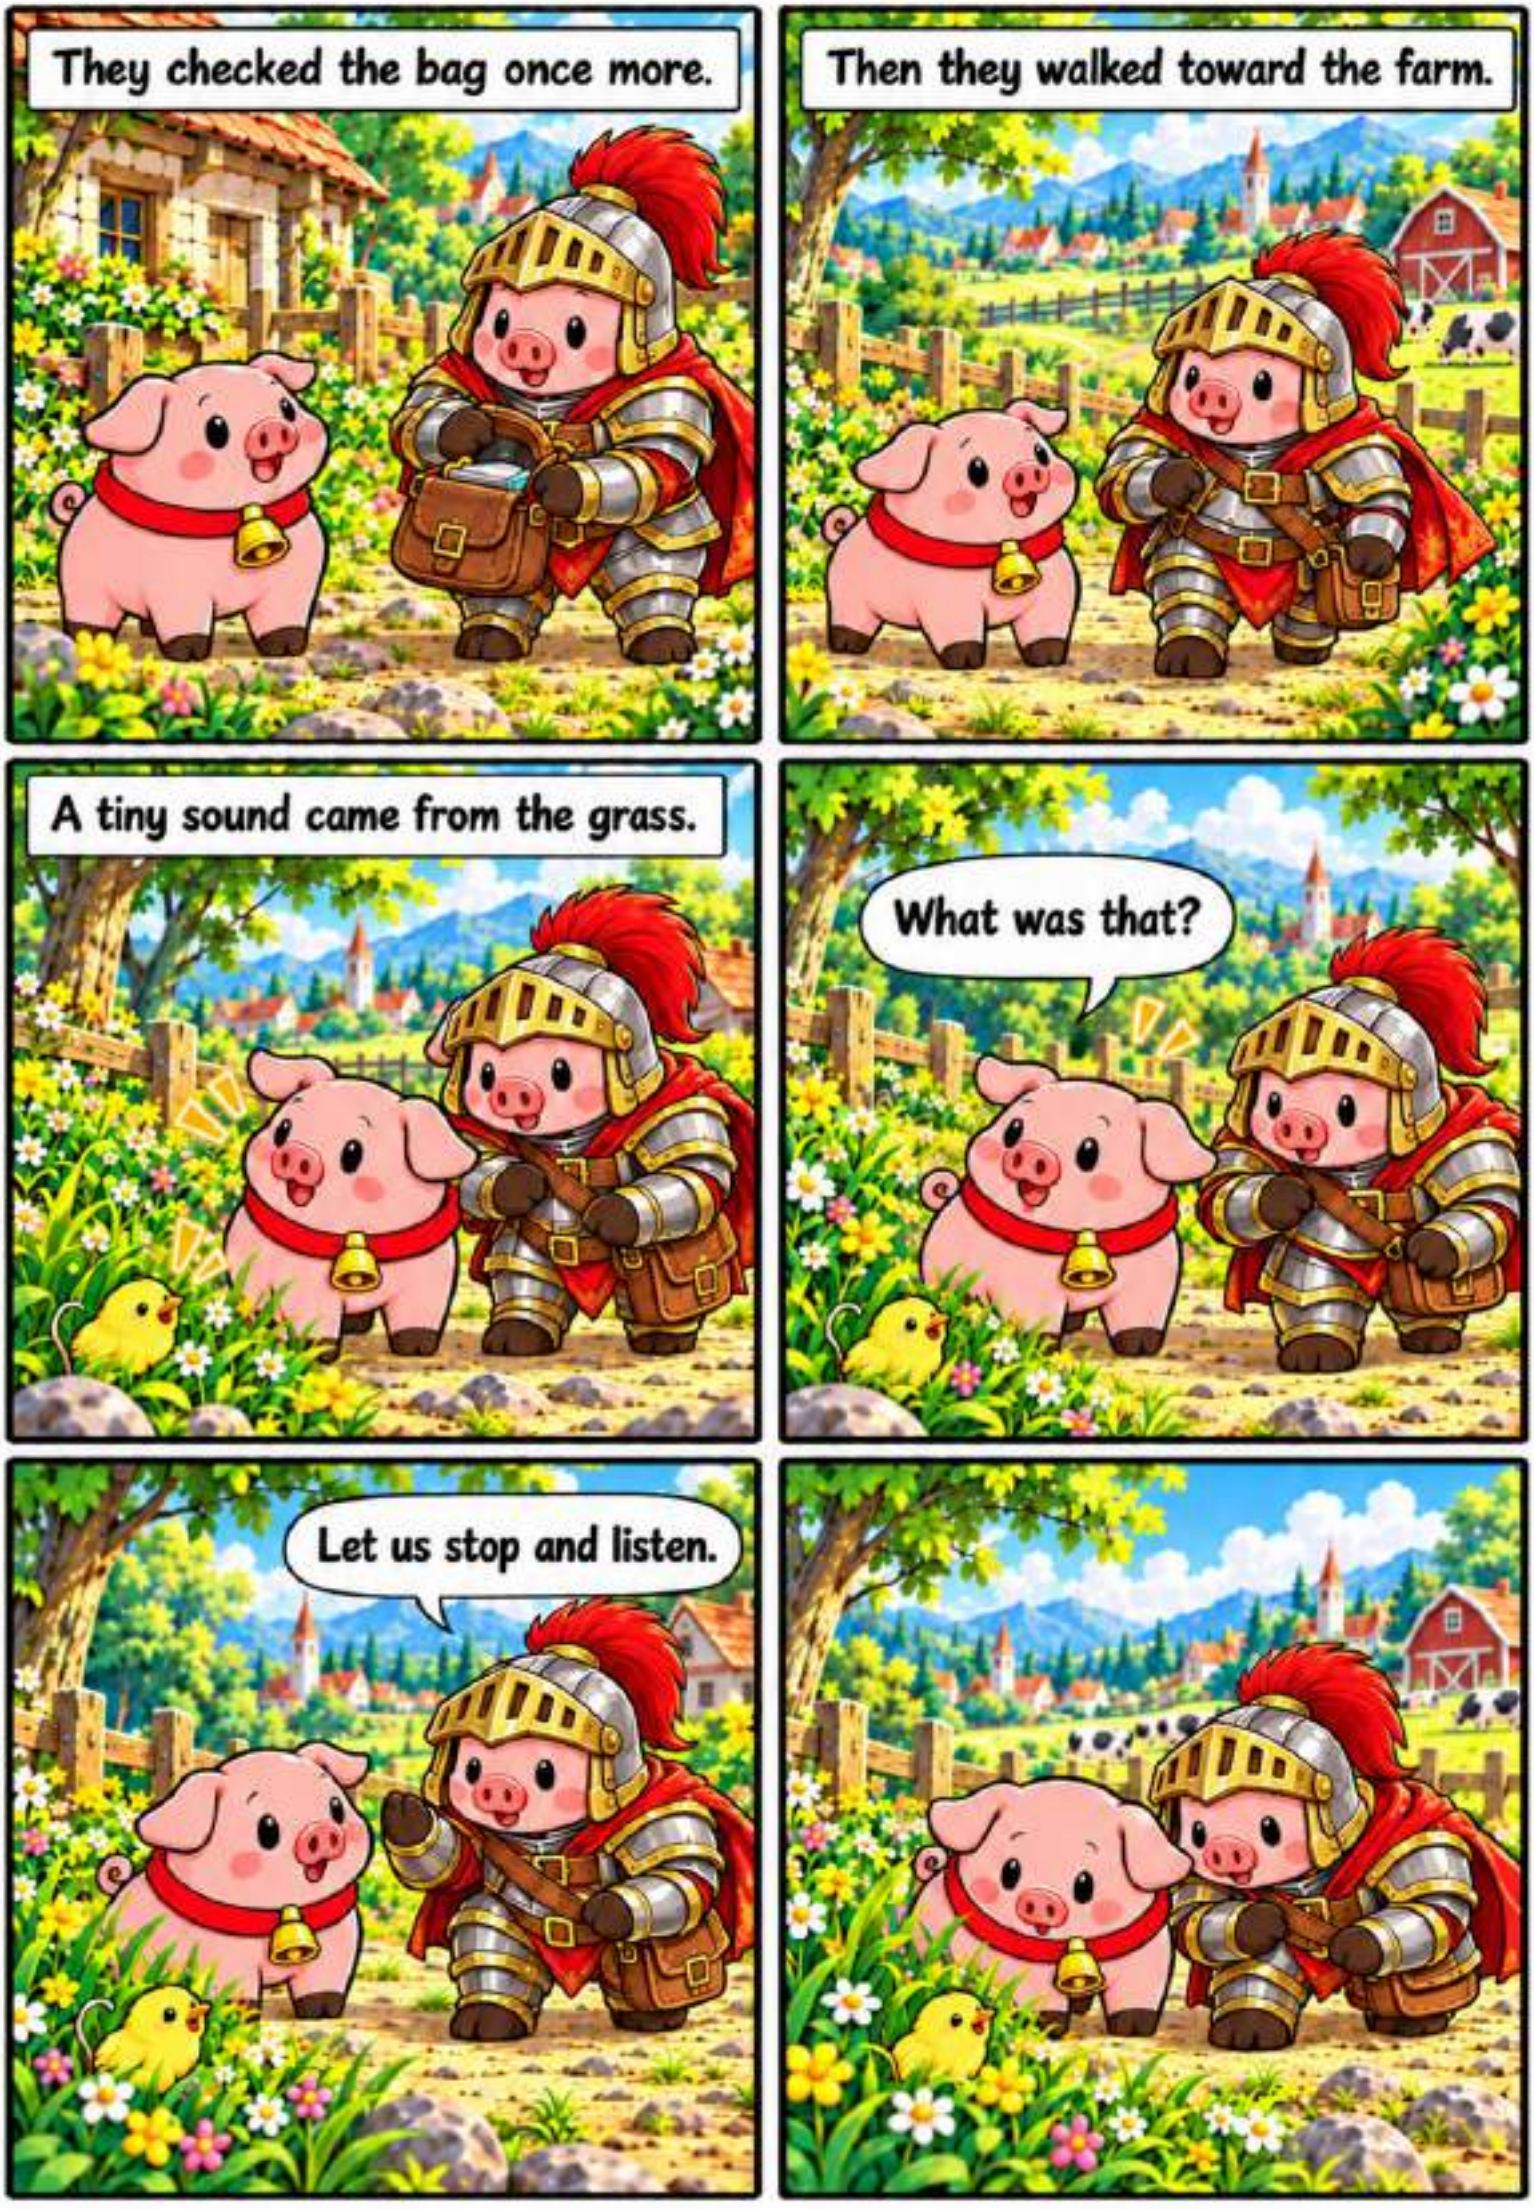


Podong wanted to carry a big toy boat.
It would make the bag heavy.
He had to choose.
Will you need it today?
No. It can stay here.



Red showed him a small cloth.
It could dry wet gear.
It was light and useful.
Let us take this.
Good choice!

Podong could carry the bag with ease.
He had enough, but not too much.
Is your bag too heavy?
No. It feels light.
The bag was ready.



They checked the bag once more.
Then they walked toward the farm.
A tiny sound came from the grass.
What was that?
Let us stop and listen.

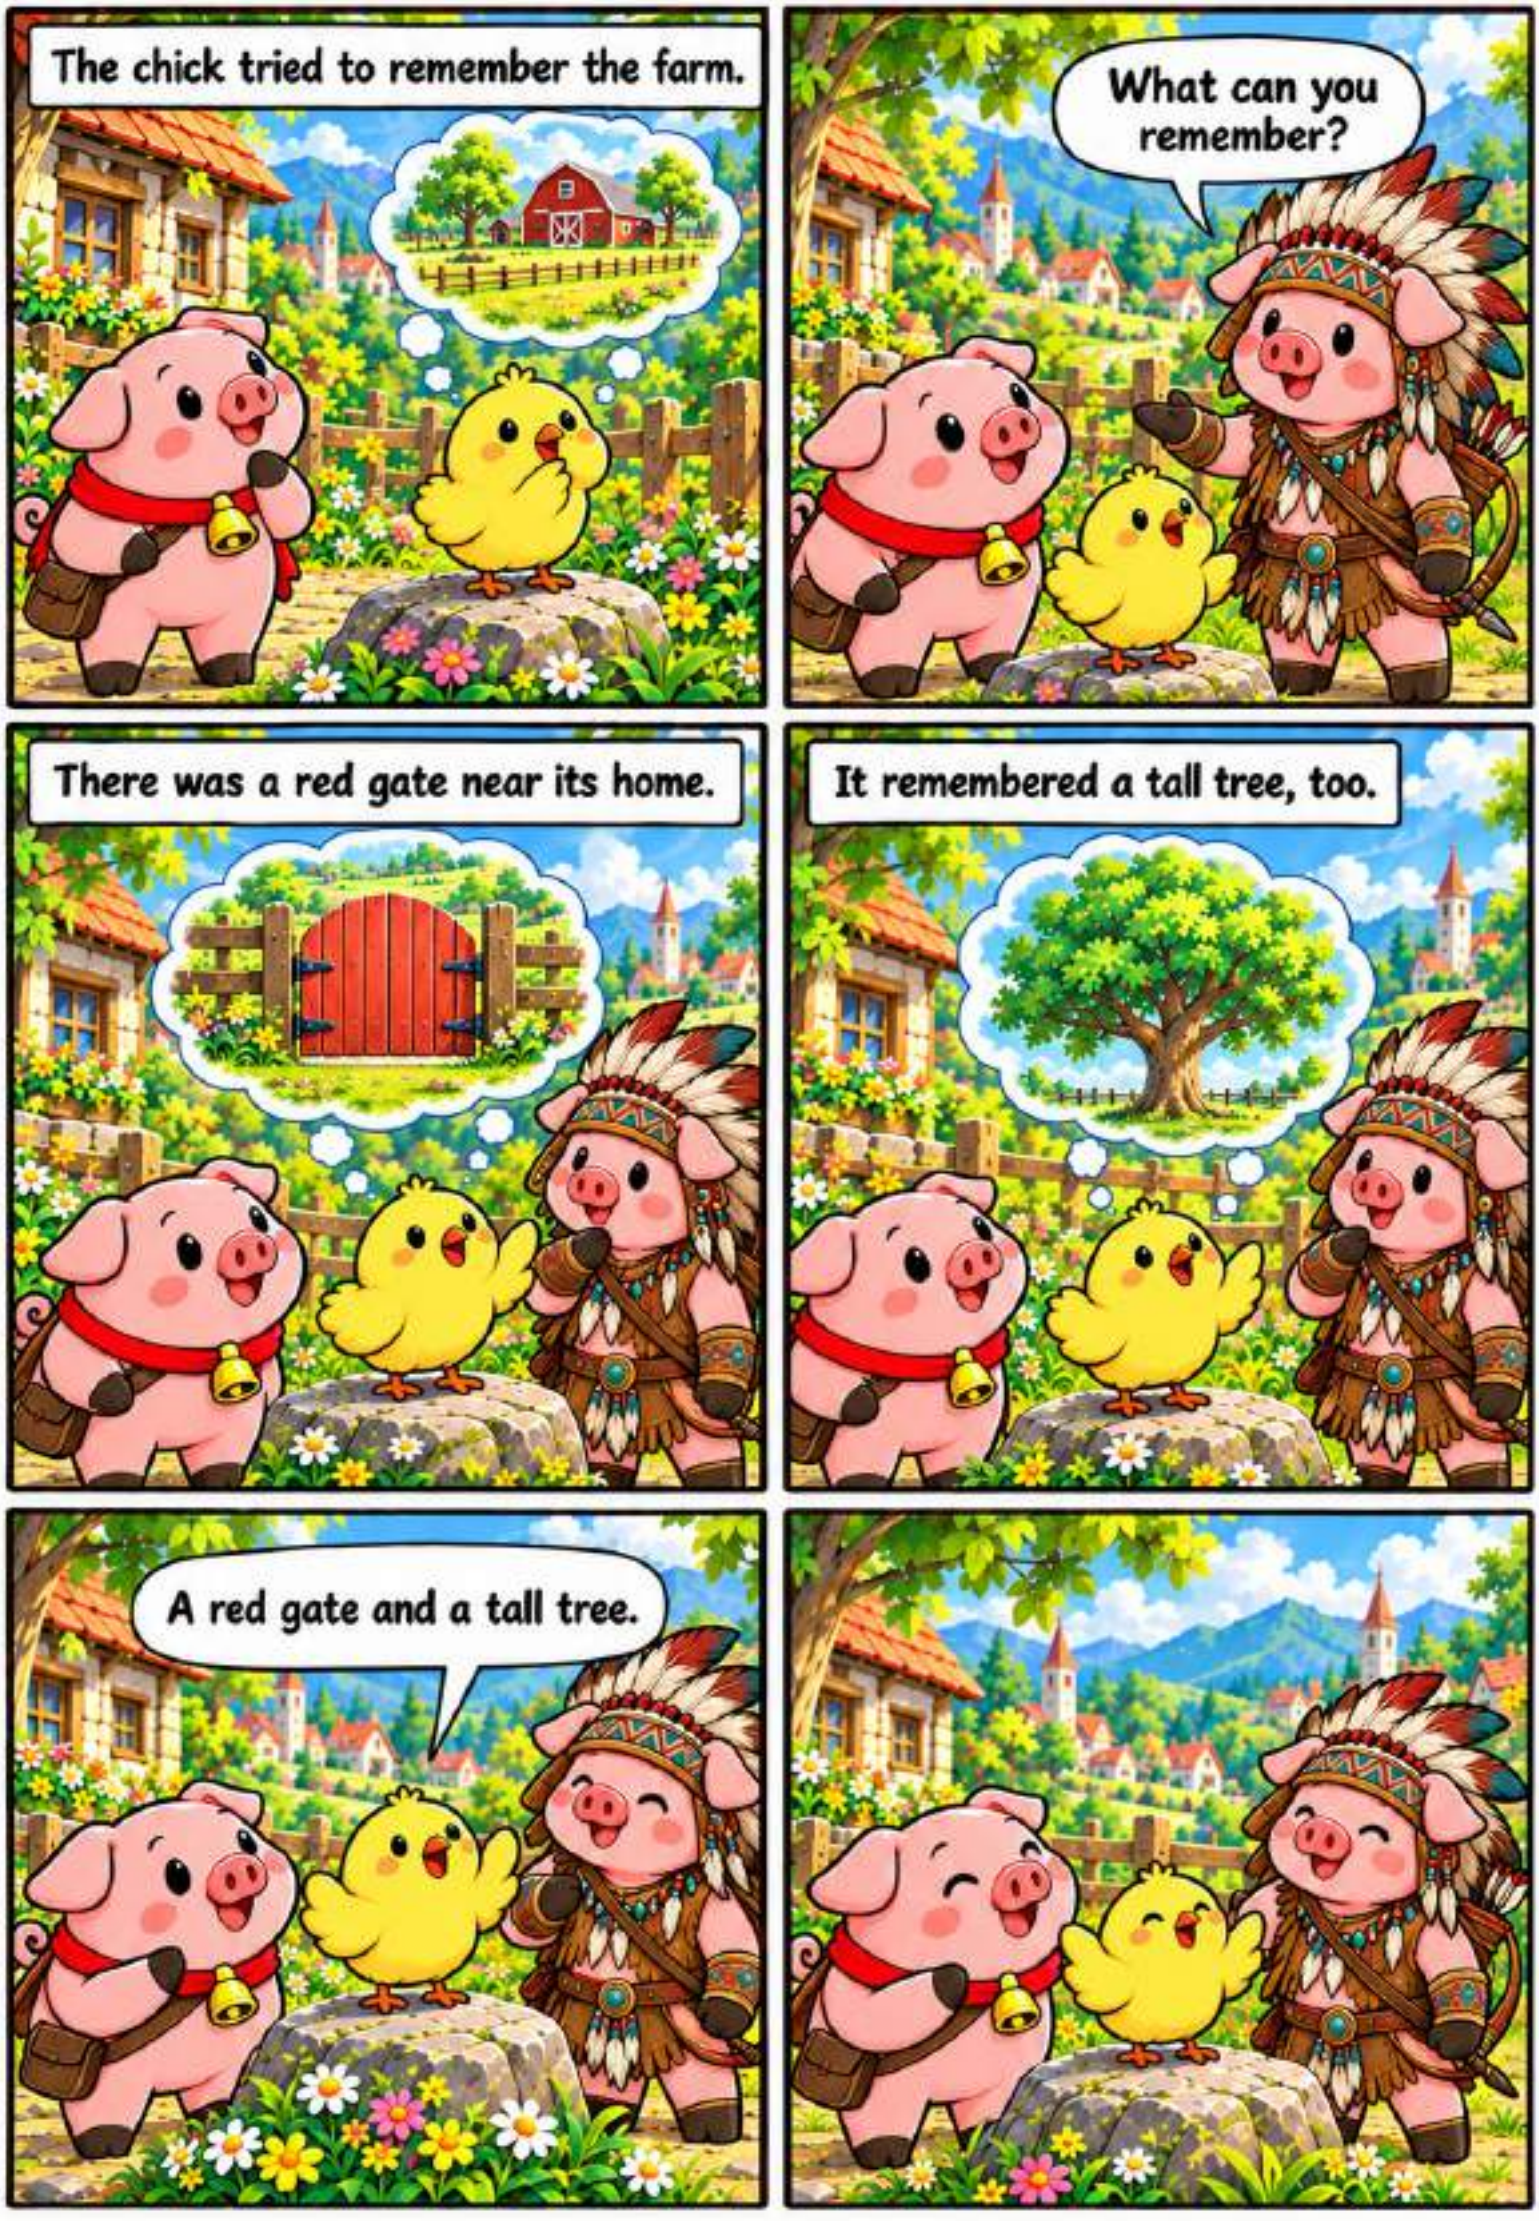
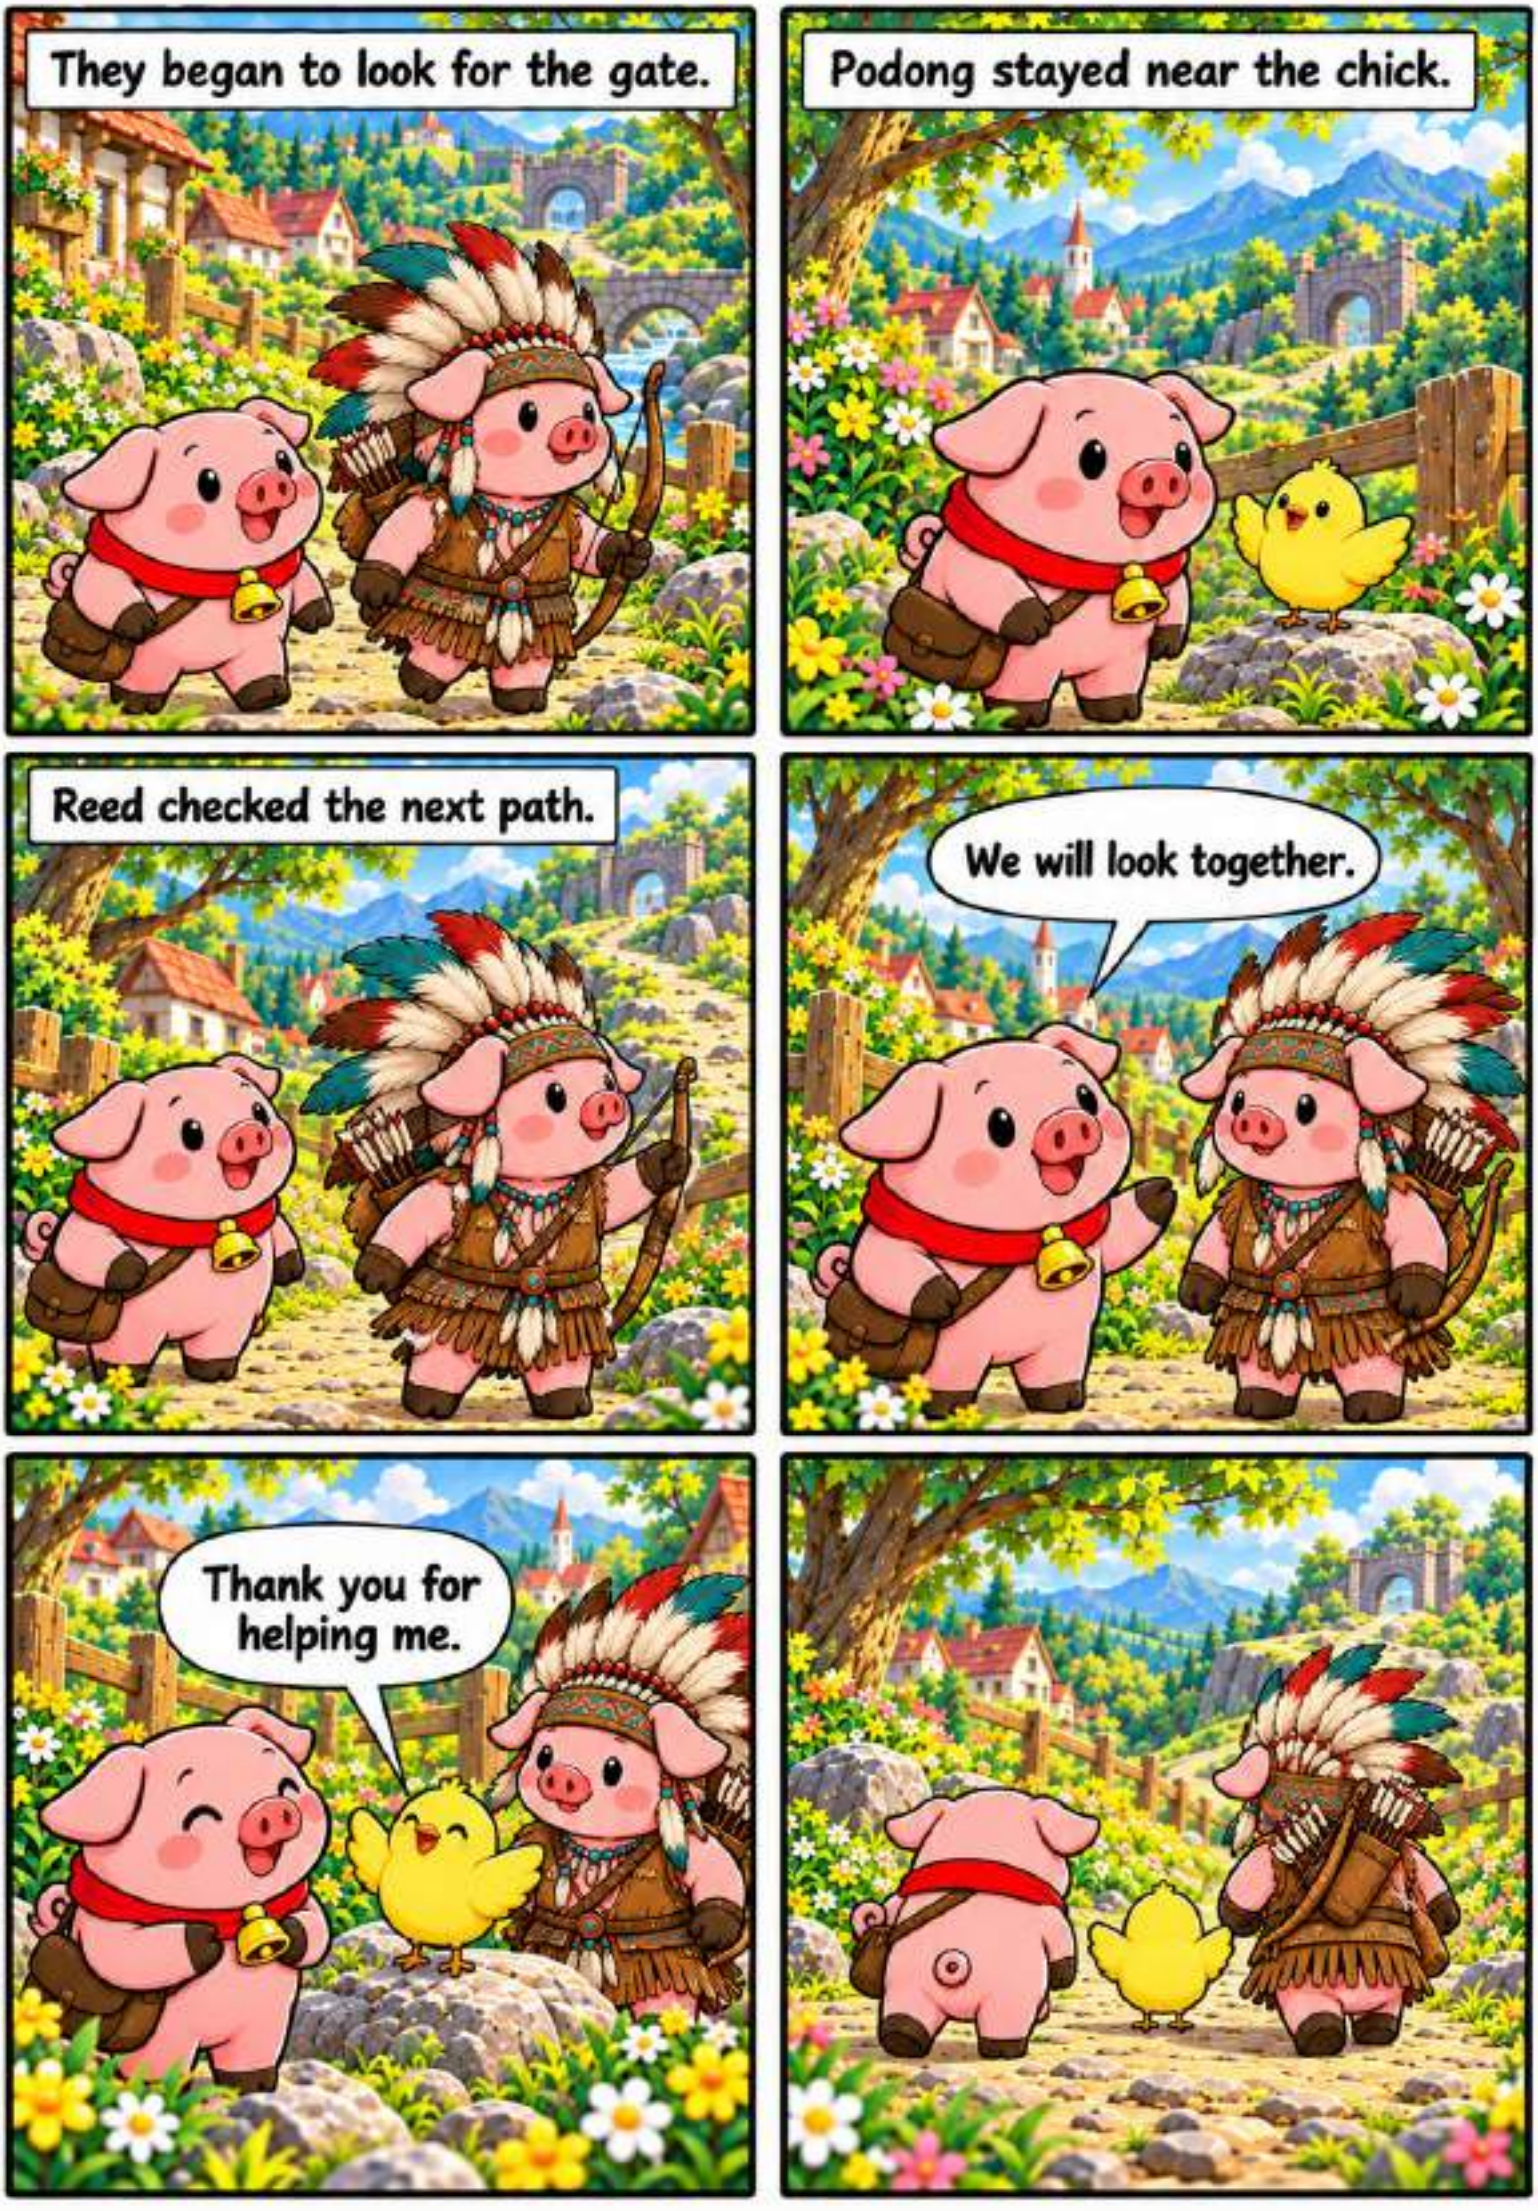
Podong heard a quiet peep.
Reed, an archer, stopped to listen.
A little chick stood near the grass.
Are you lost?
I cannot find my home.

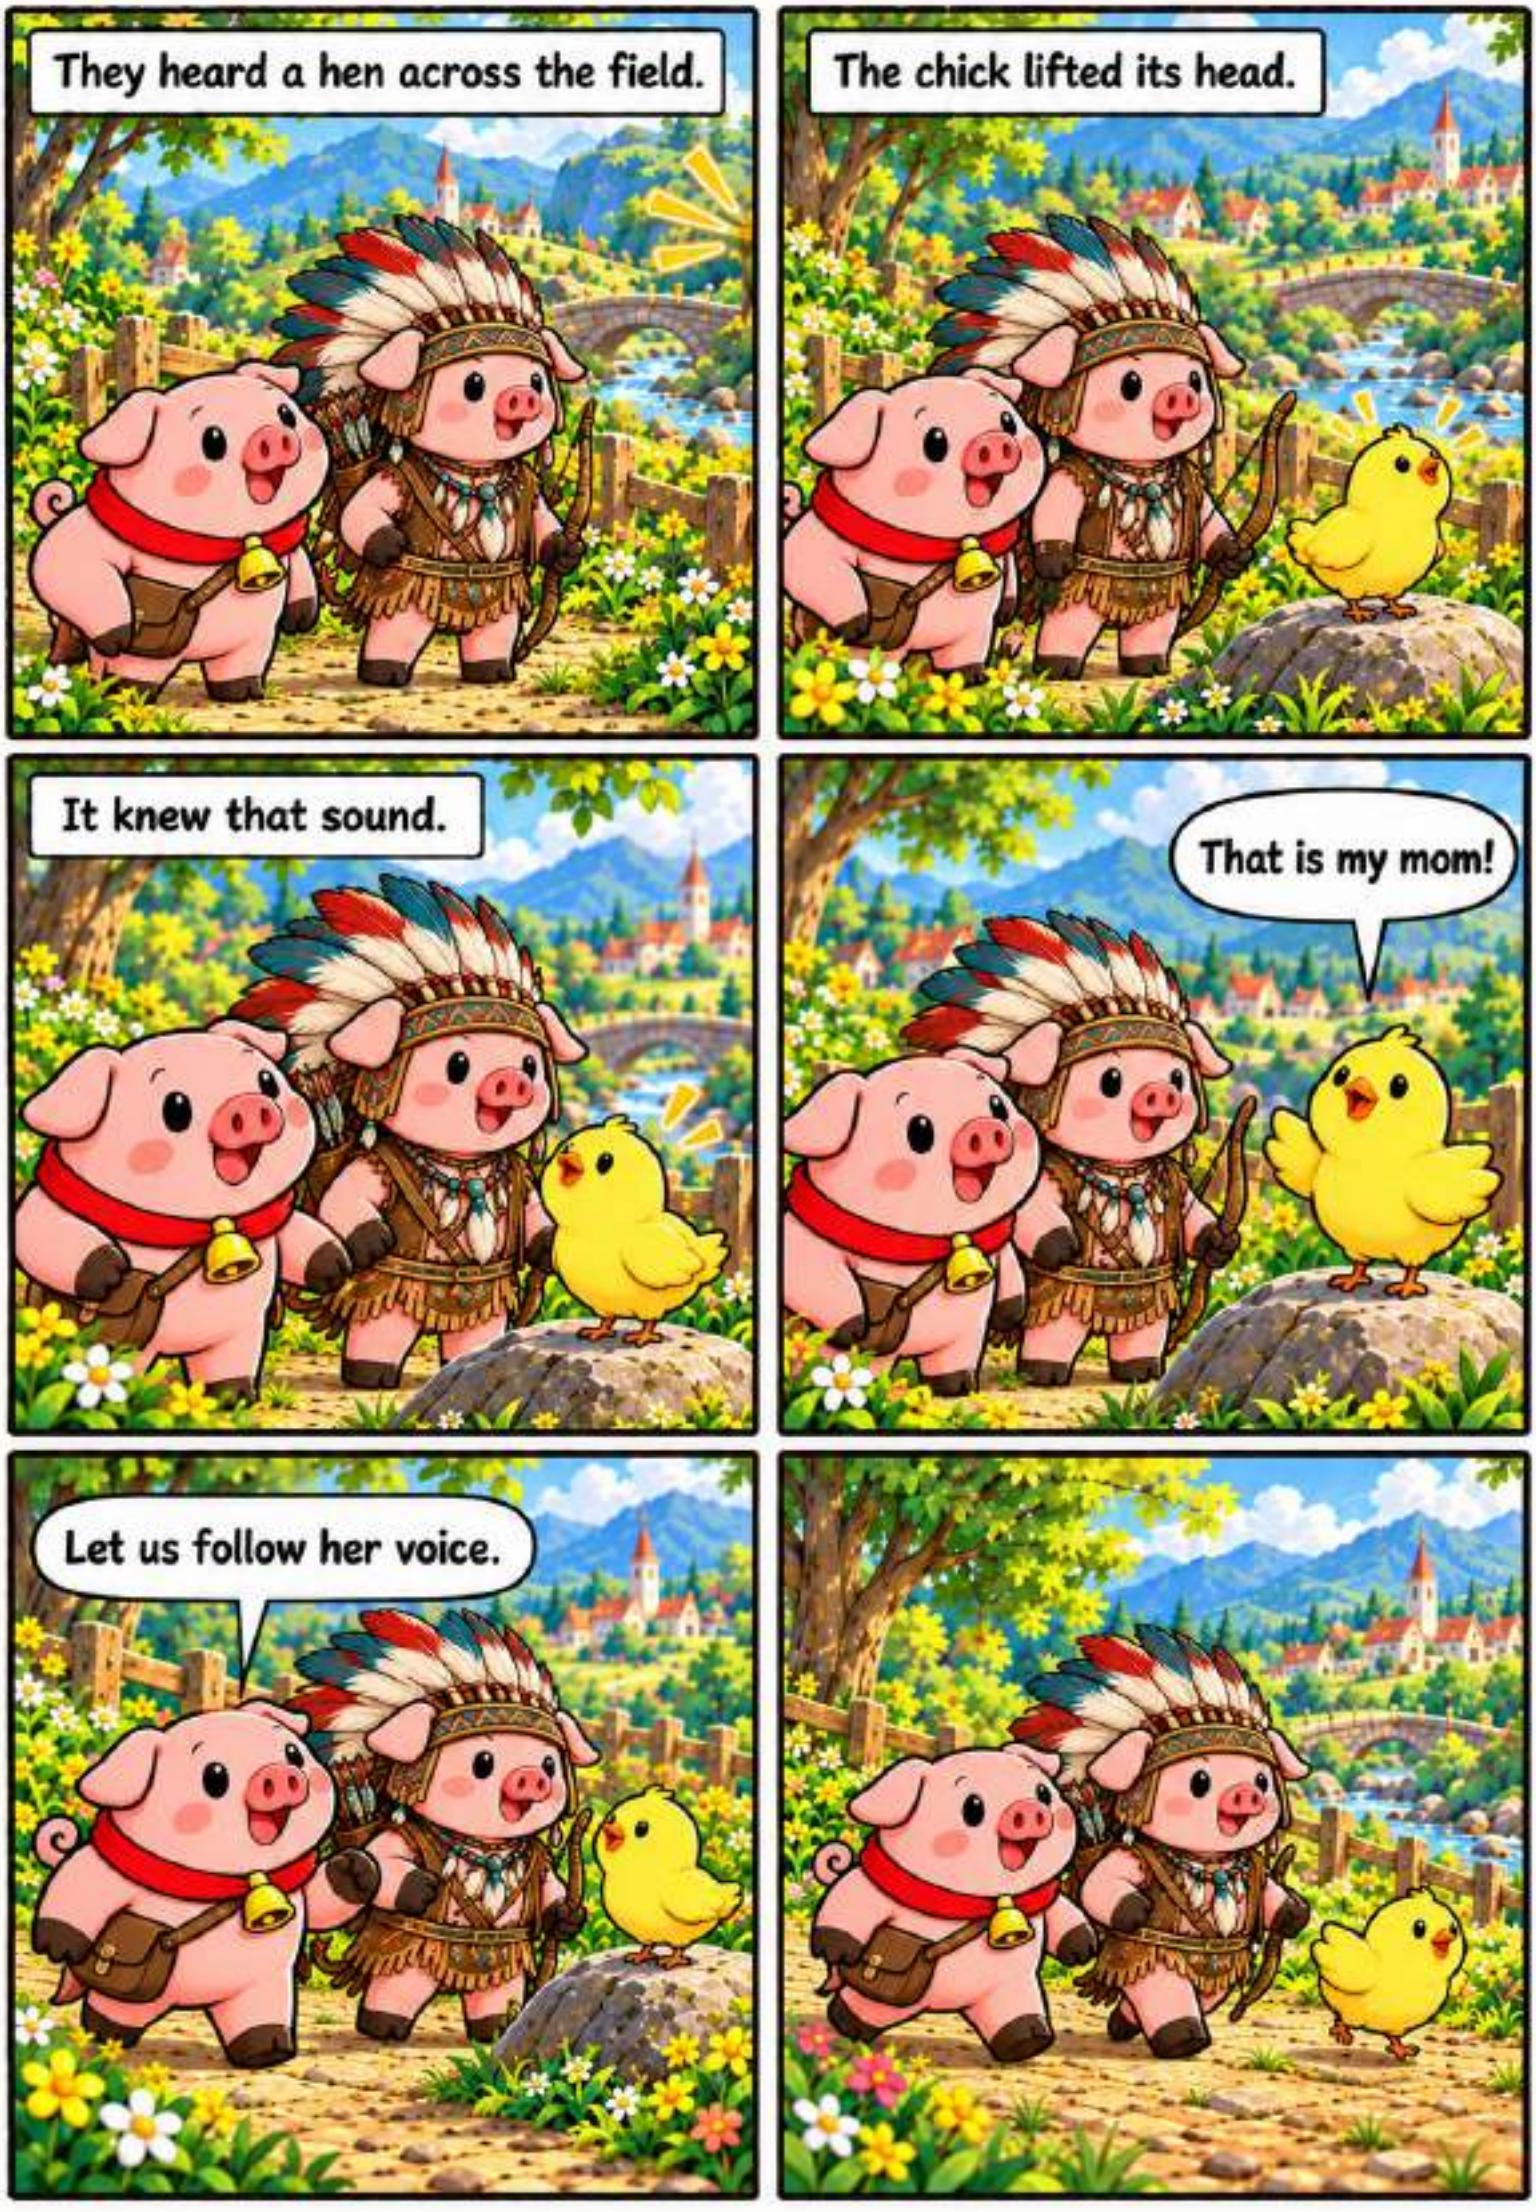
The chick looked worried.
Podong sat down to seem less big.
He spoke in a soft voice.
Do not worry.
You are safe with us.



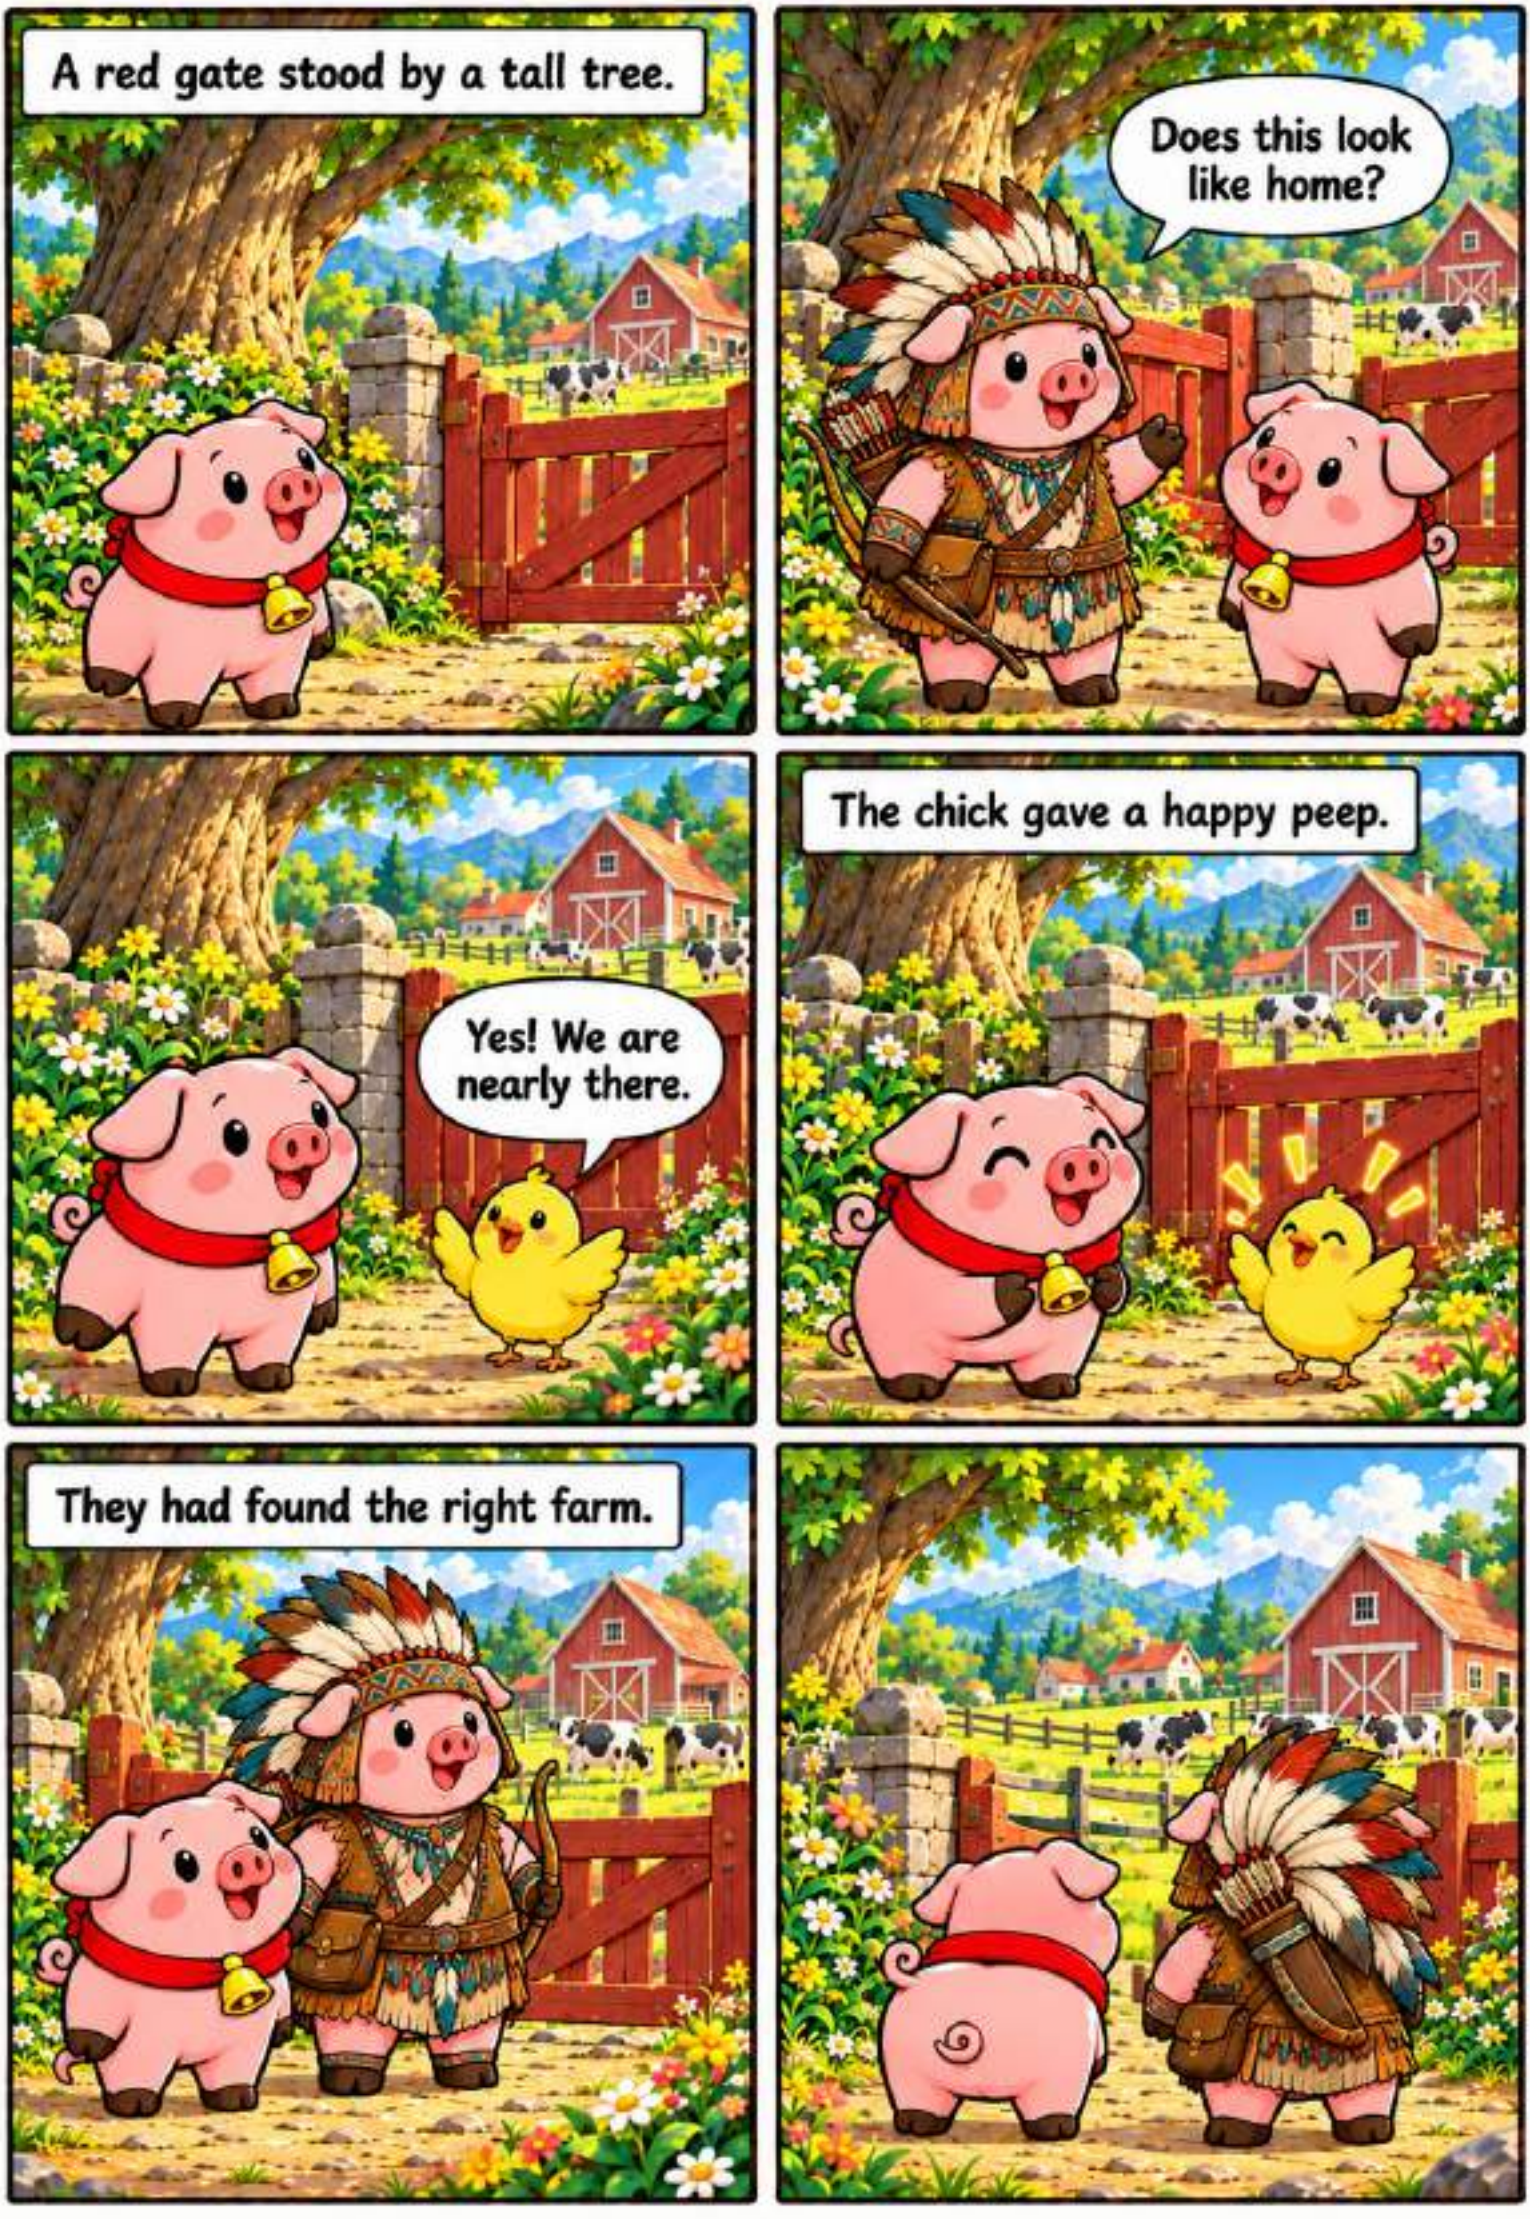
The chick tried to remember the farm.
What can you remember?
There was a red gate near its home.
It remembered a tall tree, too.
A red gate and a tall tree.



They began to look for the gate.
Podong stayed near the chick.
Reed checked the next path.
We will look together.
Thank you for helping me.



They heard a hen across the field.
The chick lifted its head.
It knew that sound.
That is my mom!
Let us follow her voice.



A red gate stood by a tall tree.
Does this look like home?
Yes! We are nearly there.
The chick gave a happy peep.
They had found the right farm.

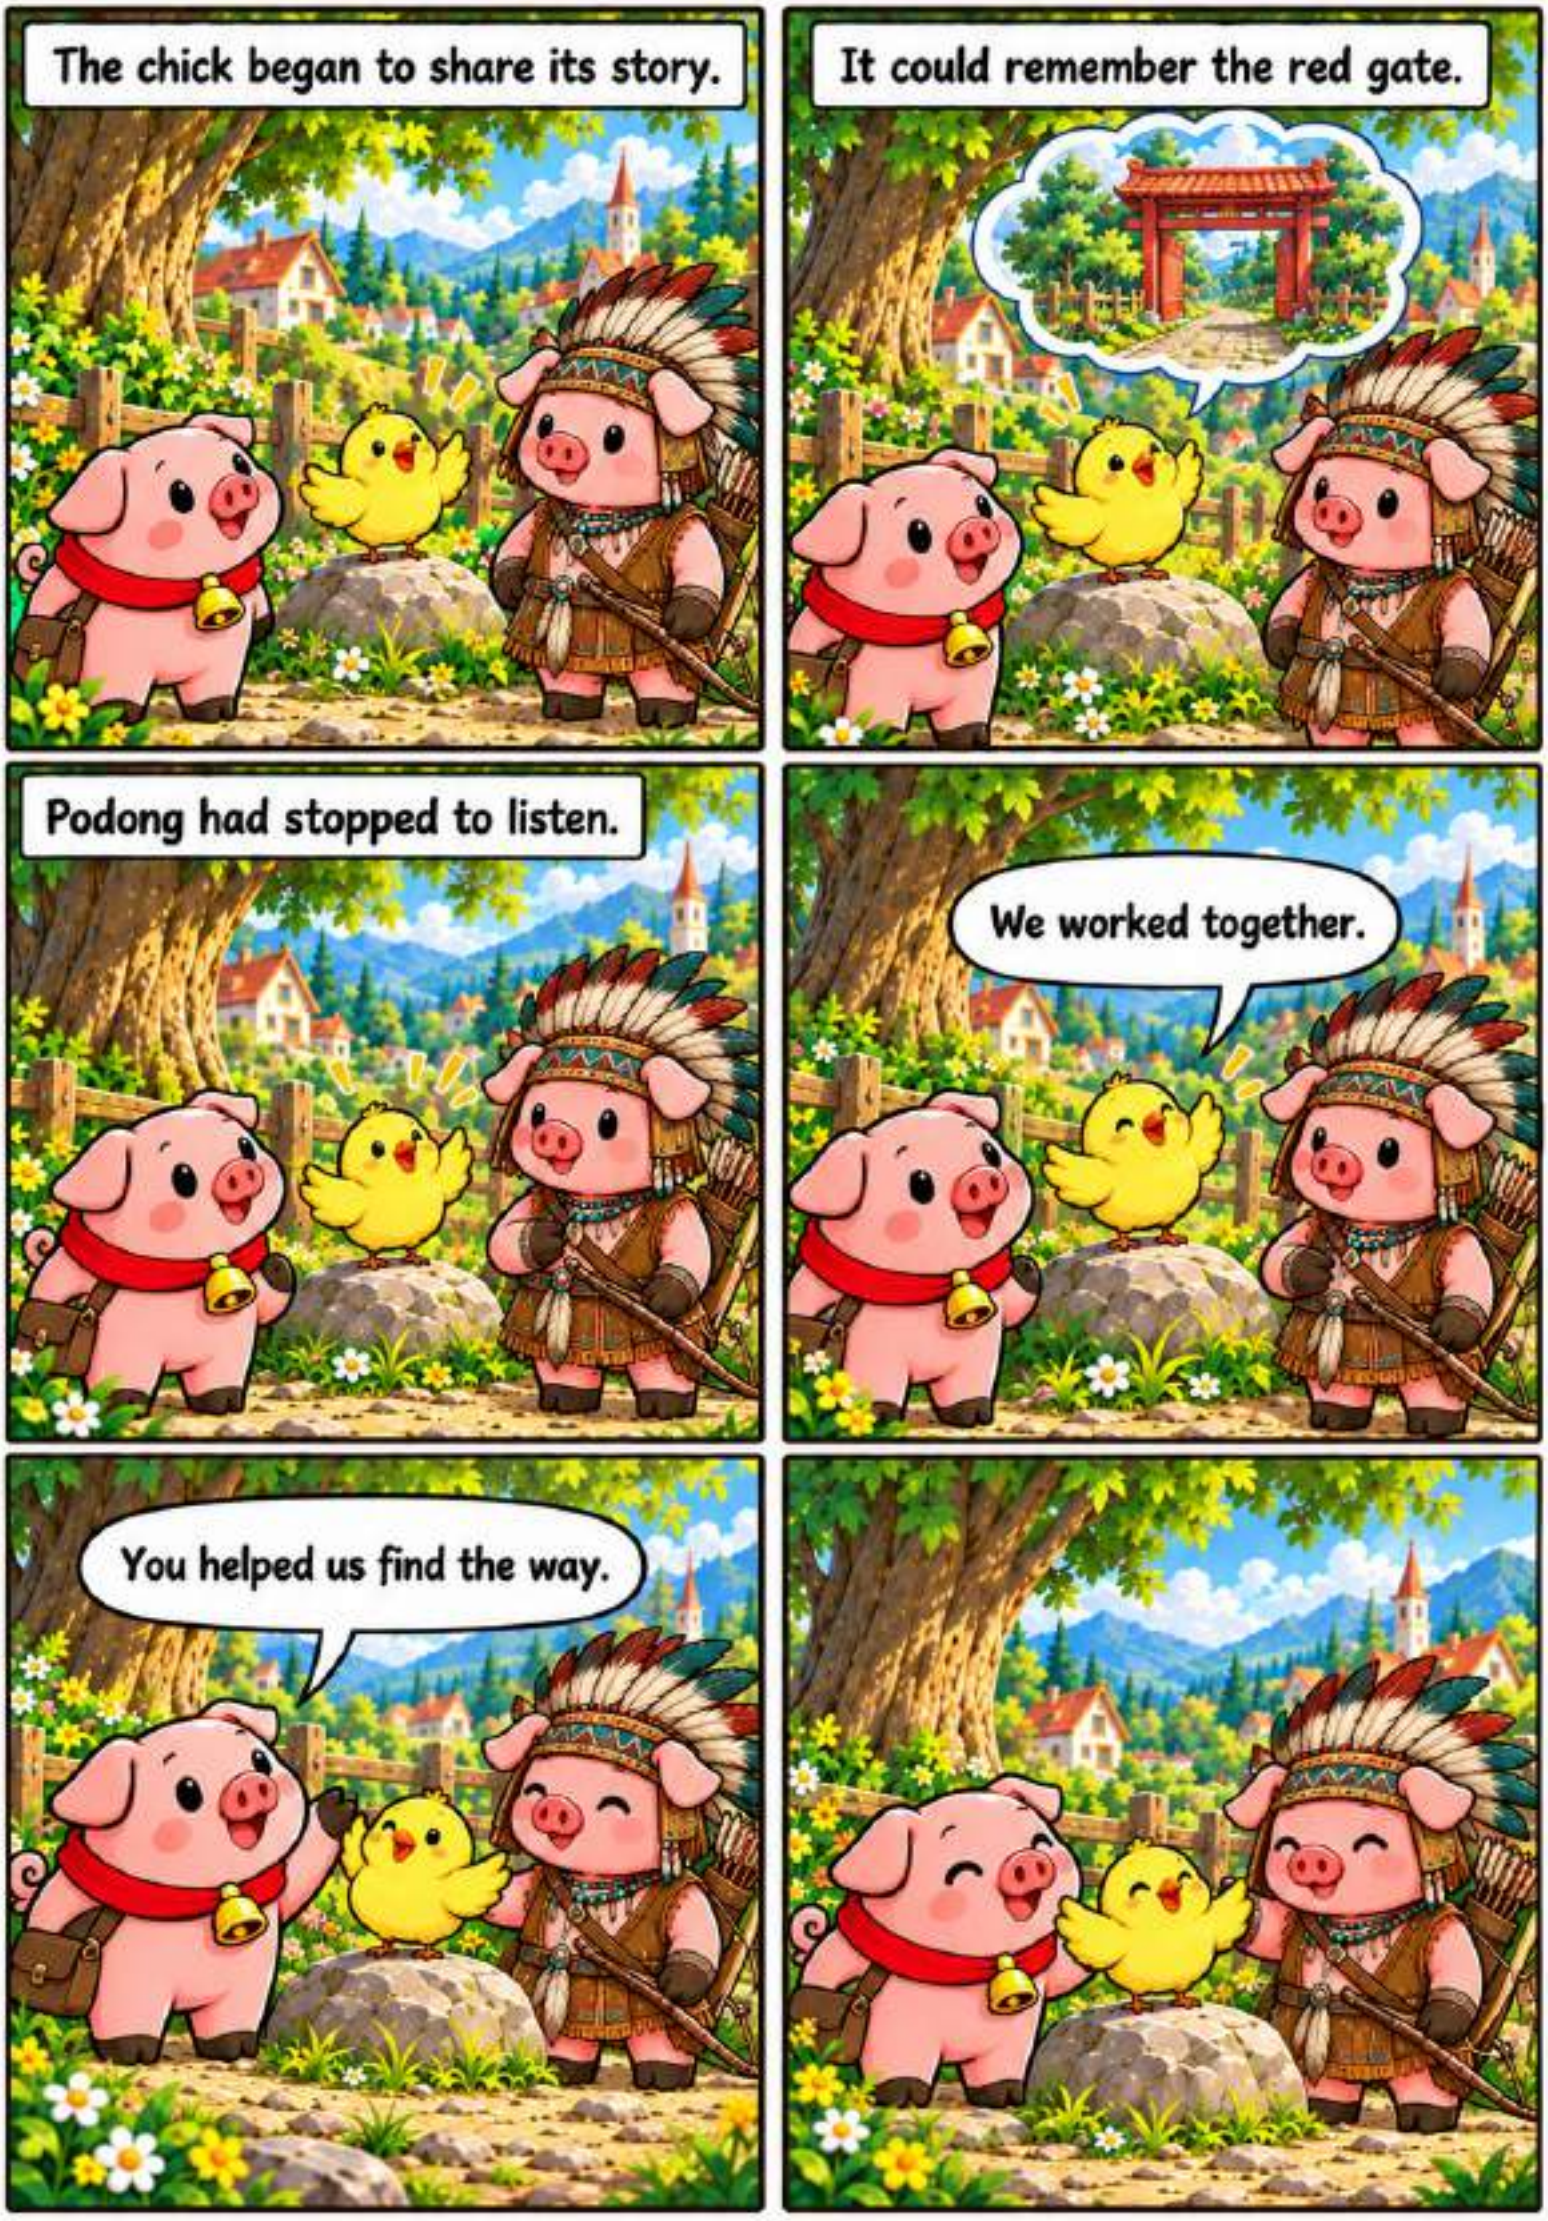
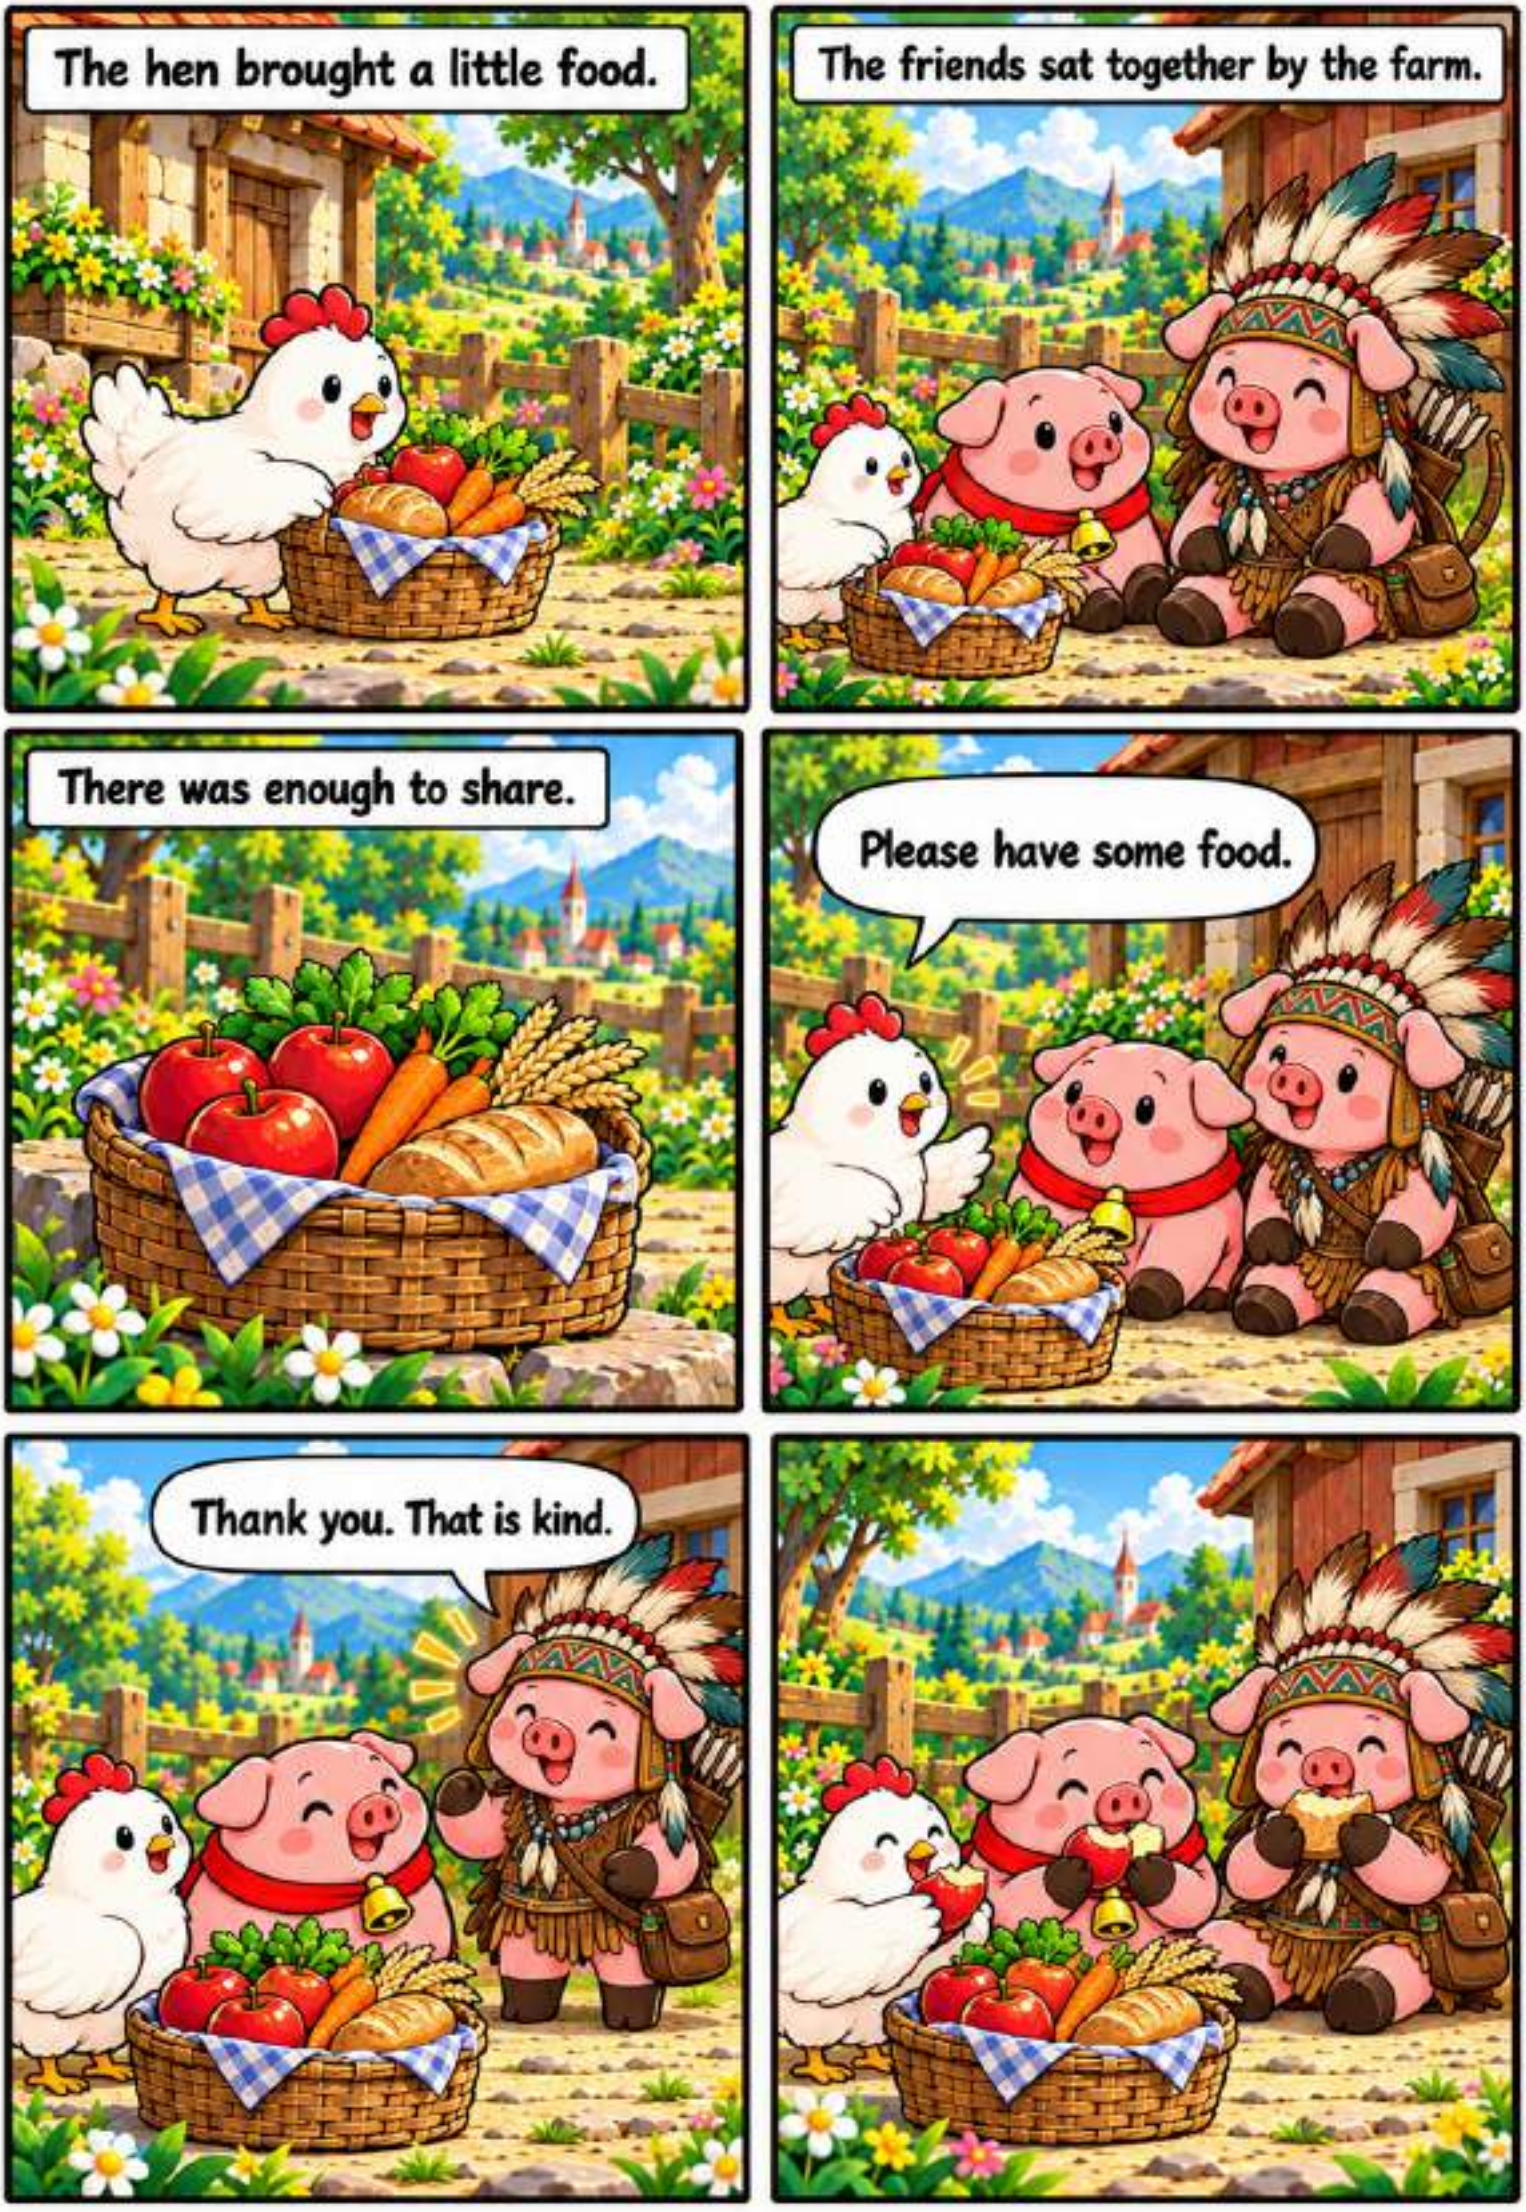
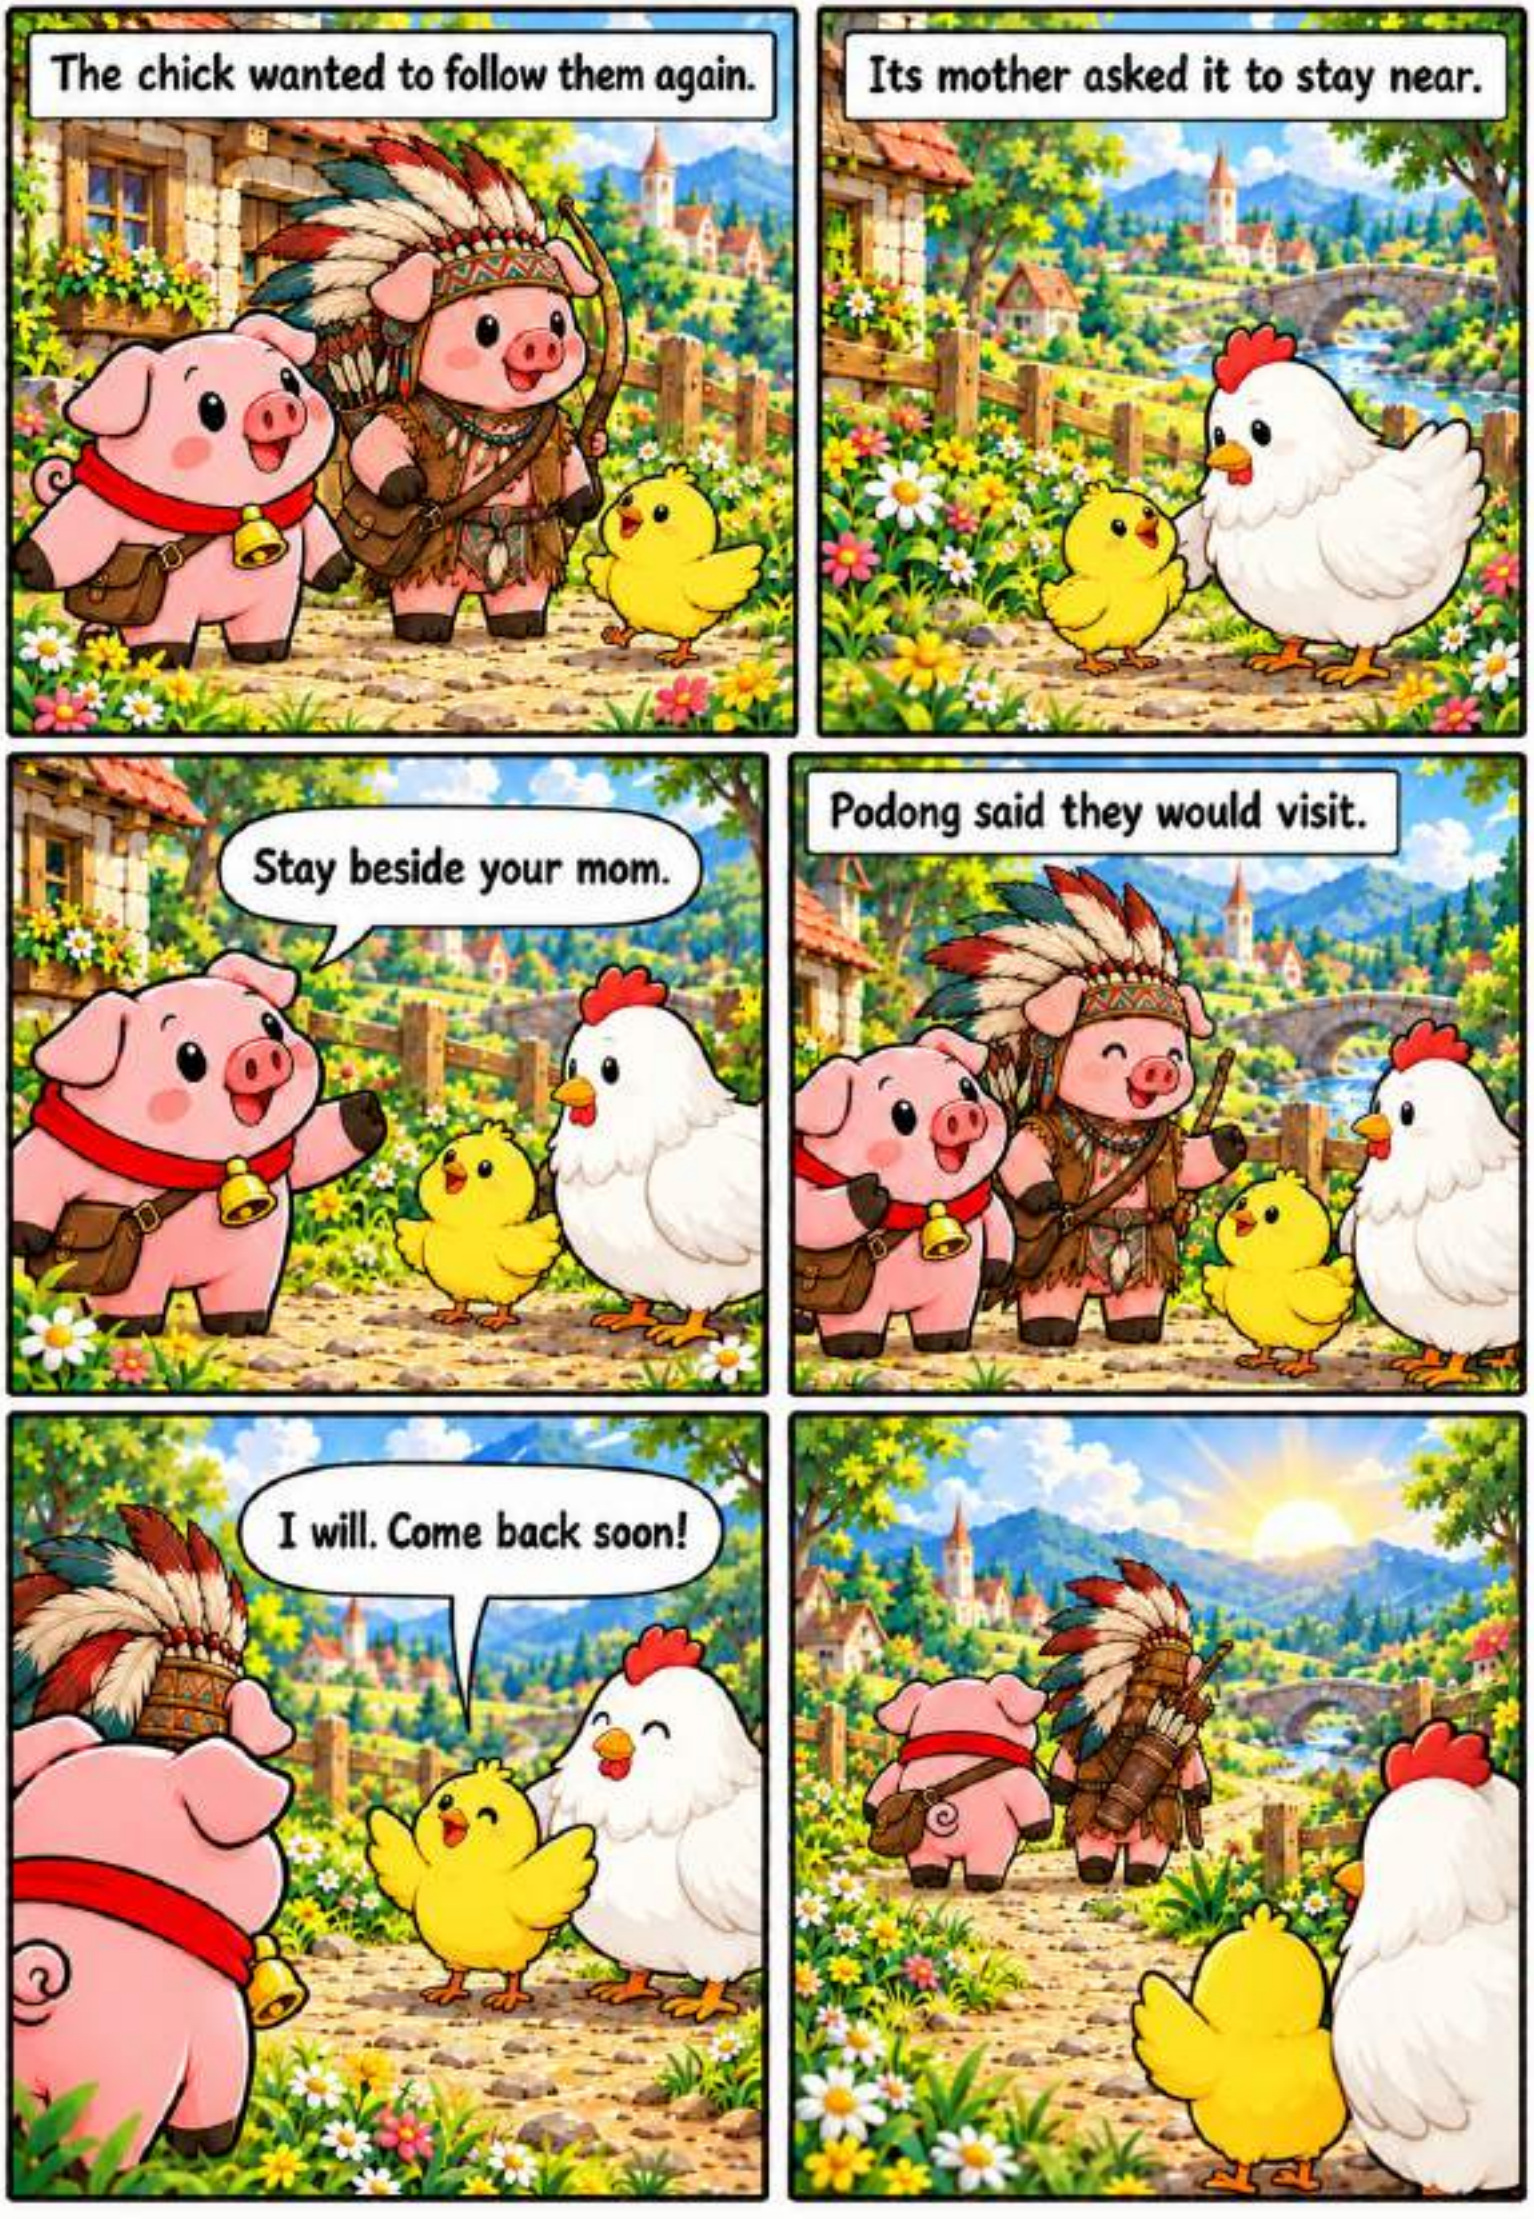
It was safe at home at last.
They helped me find you.
Thank you for your help.
Podong felt proud as he watched.



The chick began to share its story.
It could remember the red gate.
Podong had stopped to listen.
We worked together.
You helped us find the way.



The hen brought a little food.
The friends sat together by the farm.
There was enough to share.
Please have some food.
Thank you. That is kind.



The chick wanted to follow them again.
Its mother asked it to stay near.
Stay beside your mom.
Podong said they would visit.
I will. Come back soon!

They had used their skills together.

YOUR QUEST

Find a fair way to share.

Plum, a wizard, met Podong in the field.
Podong was hungry.
Would you like some water?
Yes, please.
Plum was thirsty after the walk.

A small mouse sat by an empty bowl.
It looked hungry, too.
I have no food.
Let us share.

Plum cut the apple in half.
Podong offered one half to the mouse.
Would you like this half?
Yes! Thank you.
Before they ate, Podong thought of Plum.

Plum had shared his water.
Podong wanted him to have some apple, too.
Let us share with you, too.
That is a kind idea.
They cut the two halves into pieces to share.

They did not drink all the water.
They would save some for the path.
A little rest helped them feel ready.
We may need this later.
I will save some, too.

The mouse felt happy and full.
It waved as the friends left.
Podong knew that sharing felt good.
Thank you for being kind.
I am glad we could help.

A soft sound came from the grass.
Podong stopped again.
Plum turned to listen.
What can you hear?
I hear a little scratch.

Podong could only guess what was there.
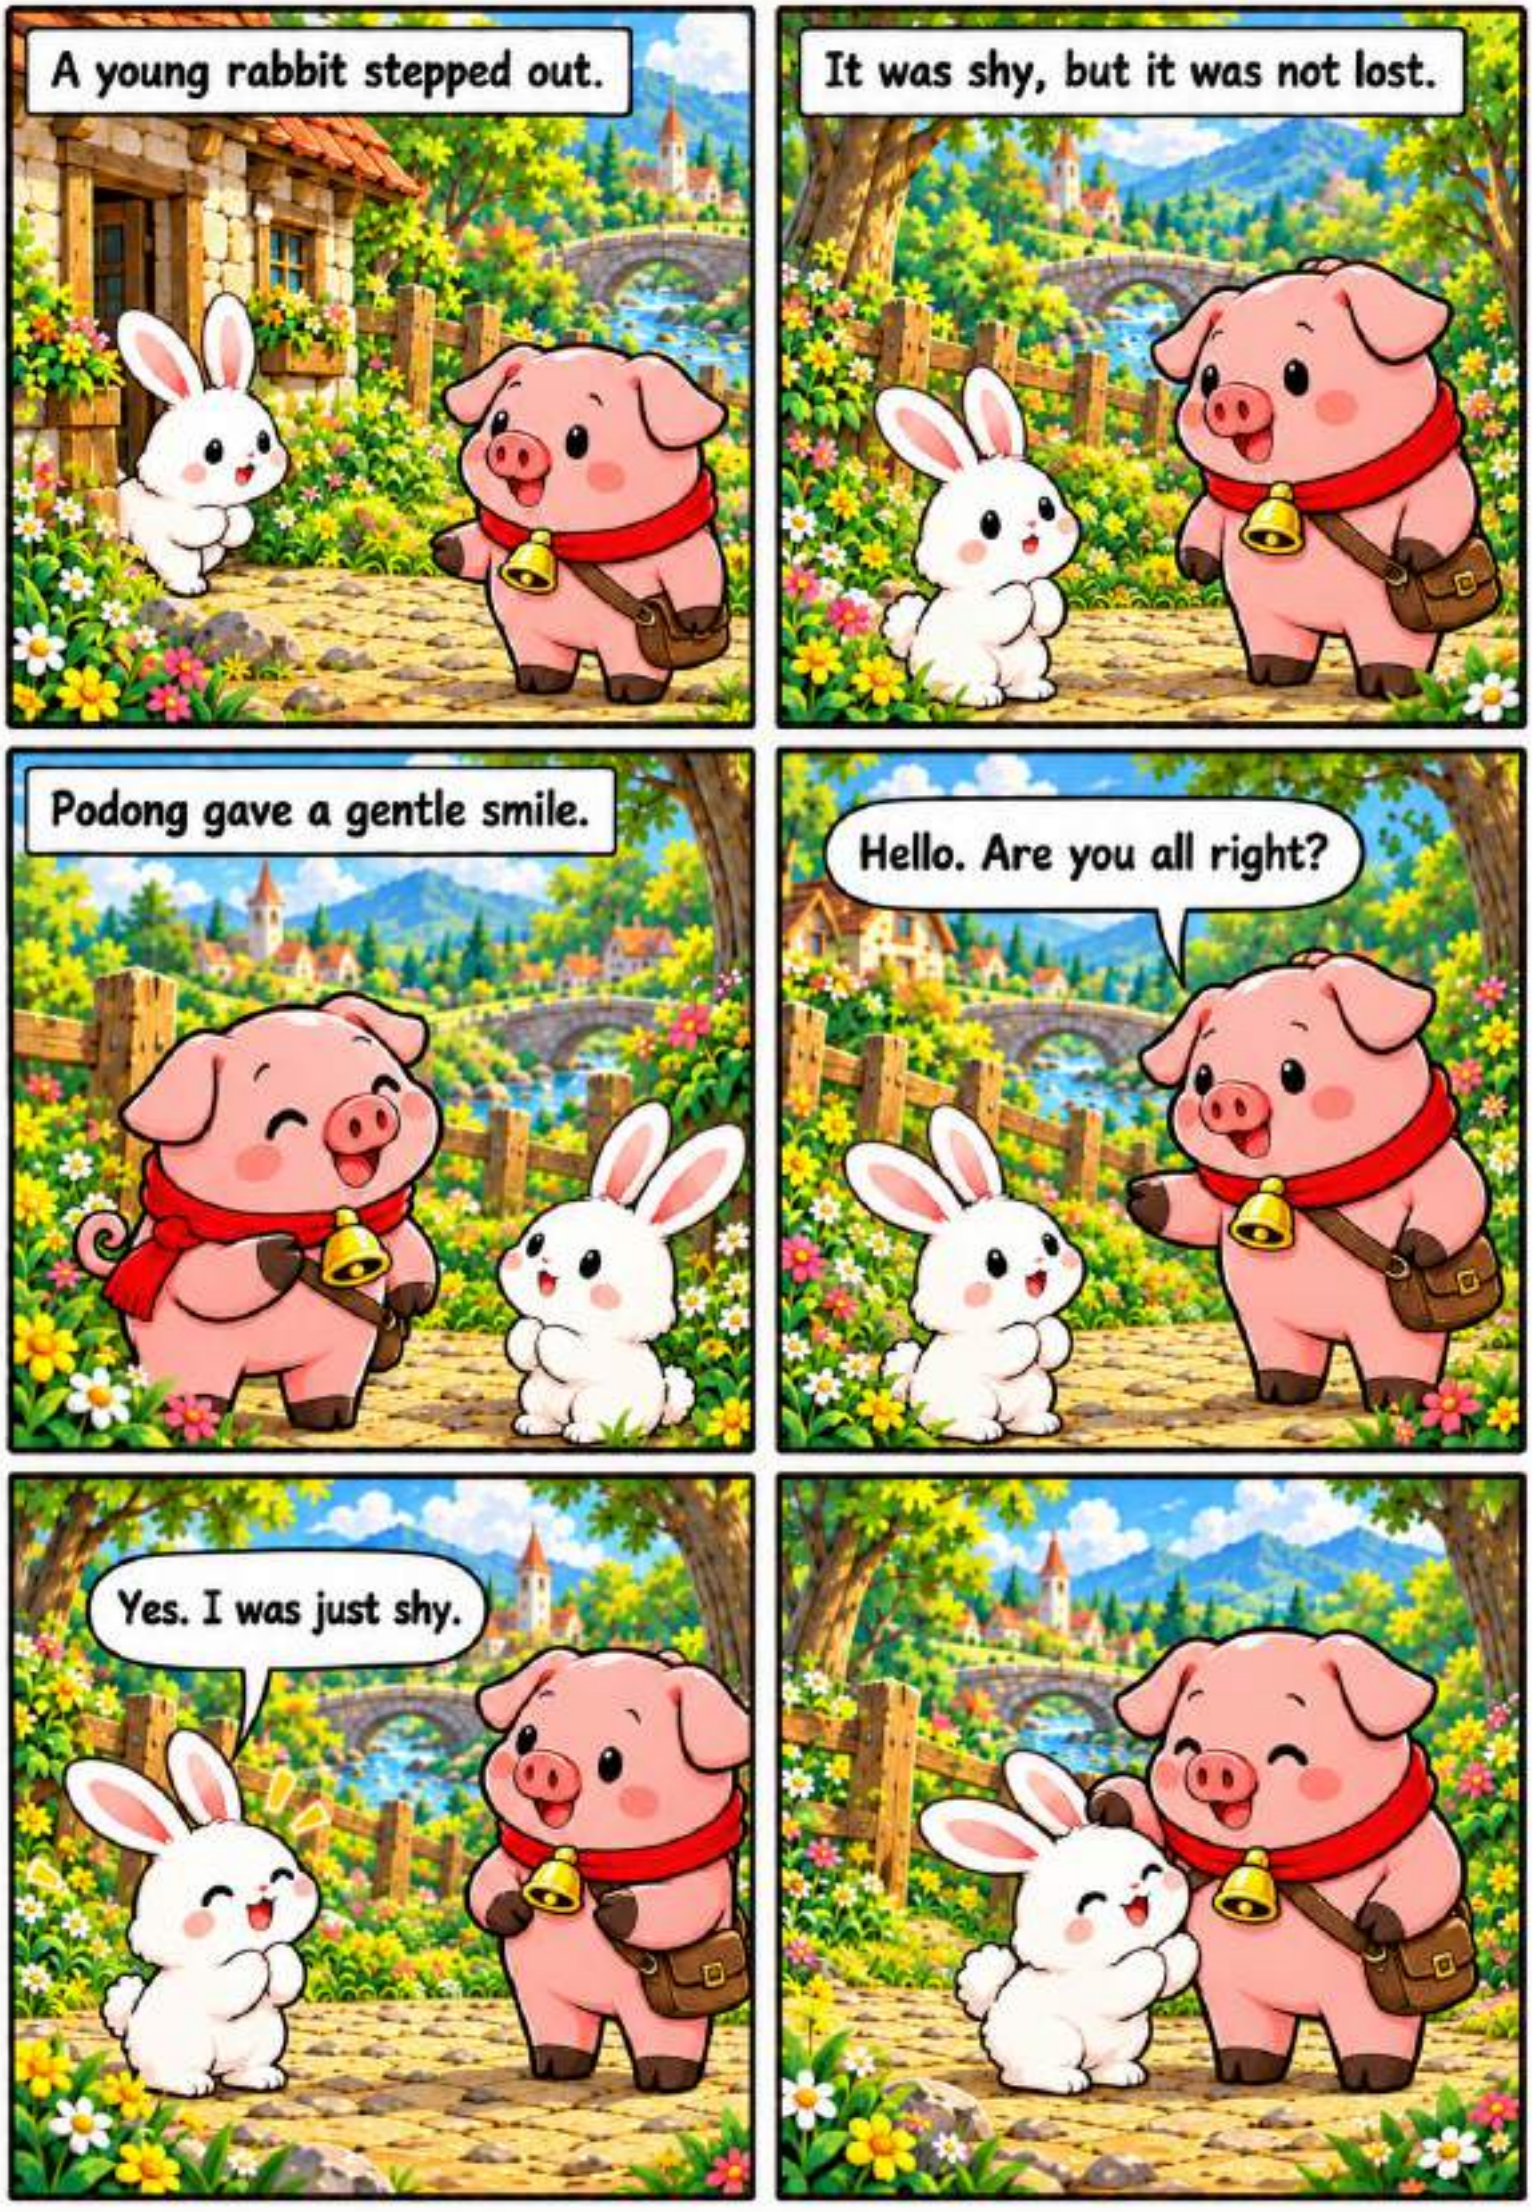
Was it a mouse?
Was it a bird?
Maybe it is a bird.
Let us find out.

They looked behind the leaves.
Two long ears moved close to the ground.
Someone was trying to hide.
I notice two ears.
Keep your voice soft.



A young rabbit stepped out.
It was shy, but it was not lost.
Podong gave a gentle smile.
Hello. Are you all right?
Yes. I was just shy.

The rabbit had heard the bell.
It wanted to see who made the sound.
Now it was glad to meet them.
Your bell has a nice sound.
Thank you. It was a gift.

The rabbit showed them a short path.
Plum thanked it for being a good guide.
Podong felt the bell bounce.

Podong thought of the shy rabbit.
Near the tall grass.

They began to search.
Podong checked his bag and scarf.
Did I drop it?
The bell was not in either place.
We can look along the path.

They did not run in every direction.
They would return to the grass first.
Then they could check the field.
Let us search one place at a time.
I can do that.

They went back along the same path.
Podong was still worried, but he had a plan.
He kept his eyes on the ground.
I will look near the stones.

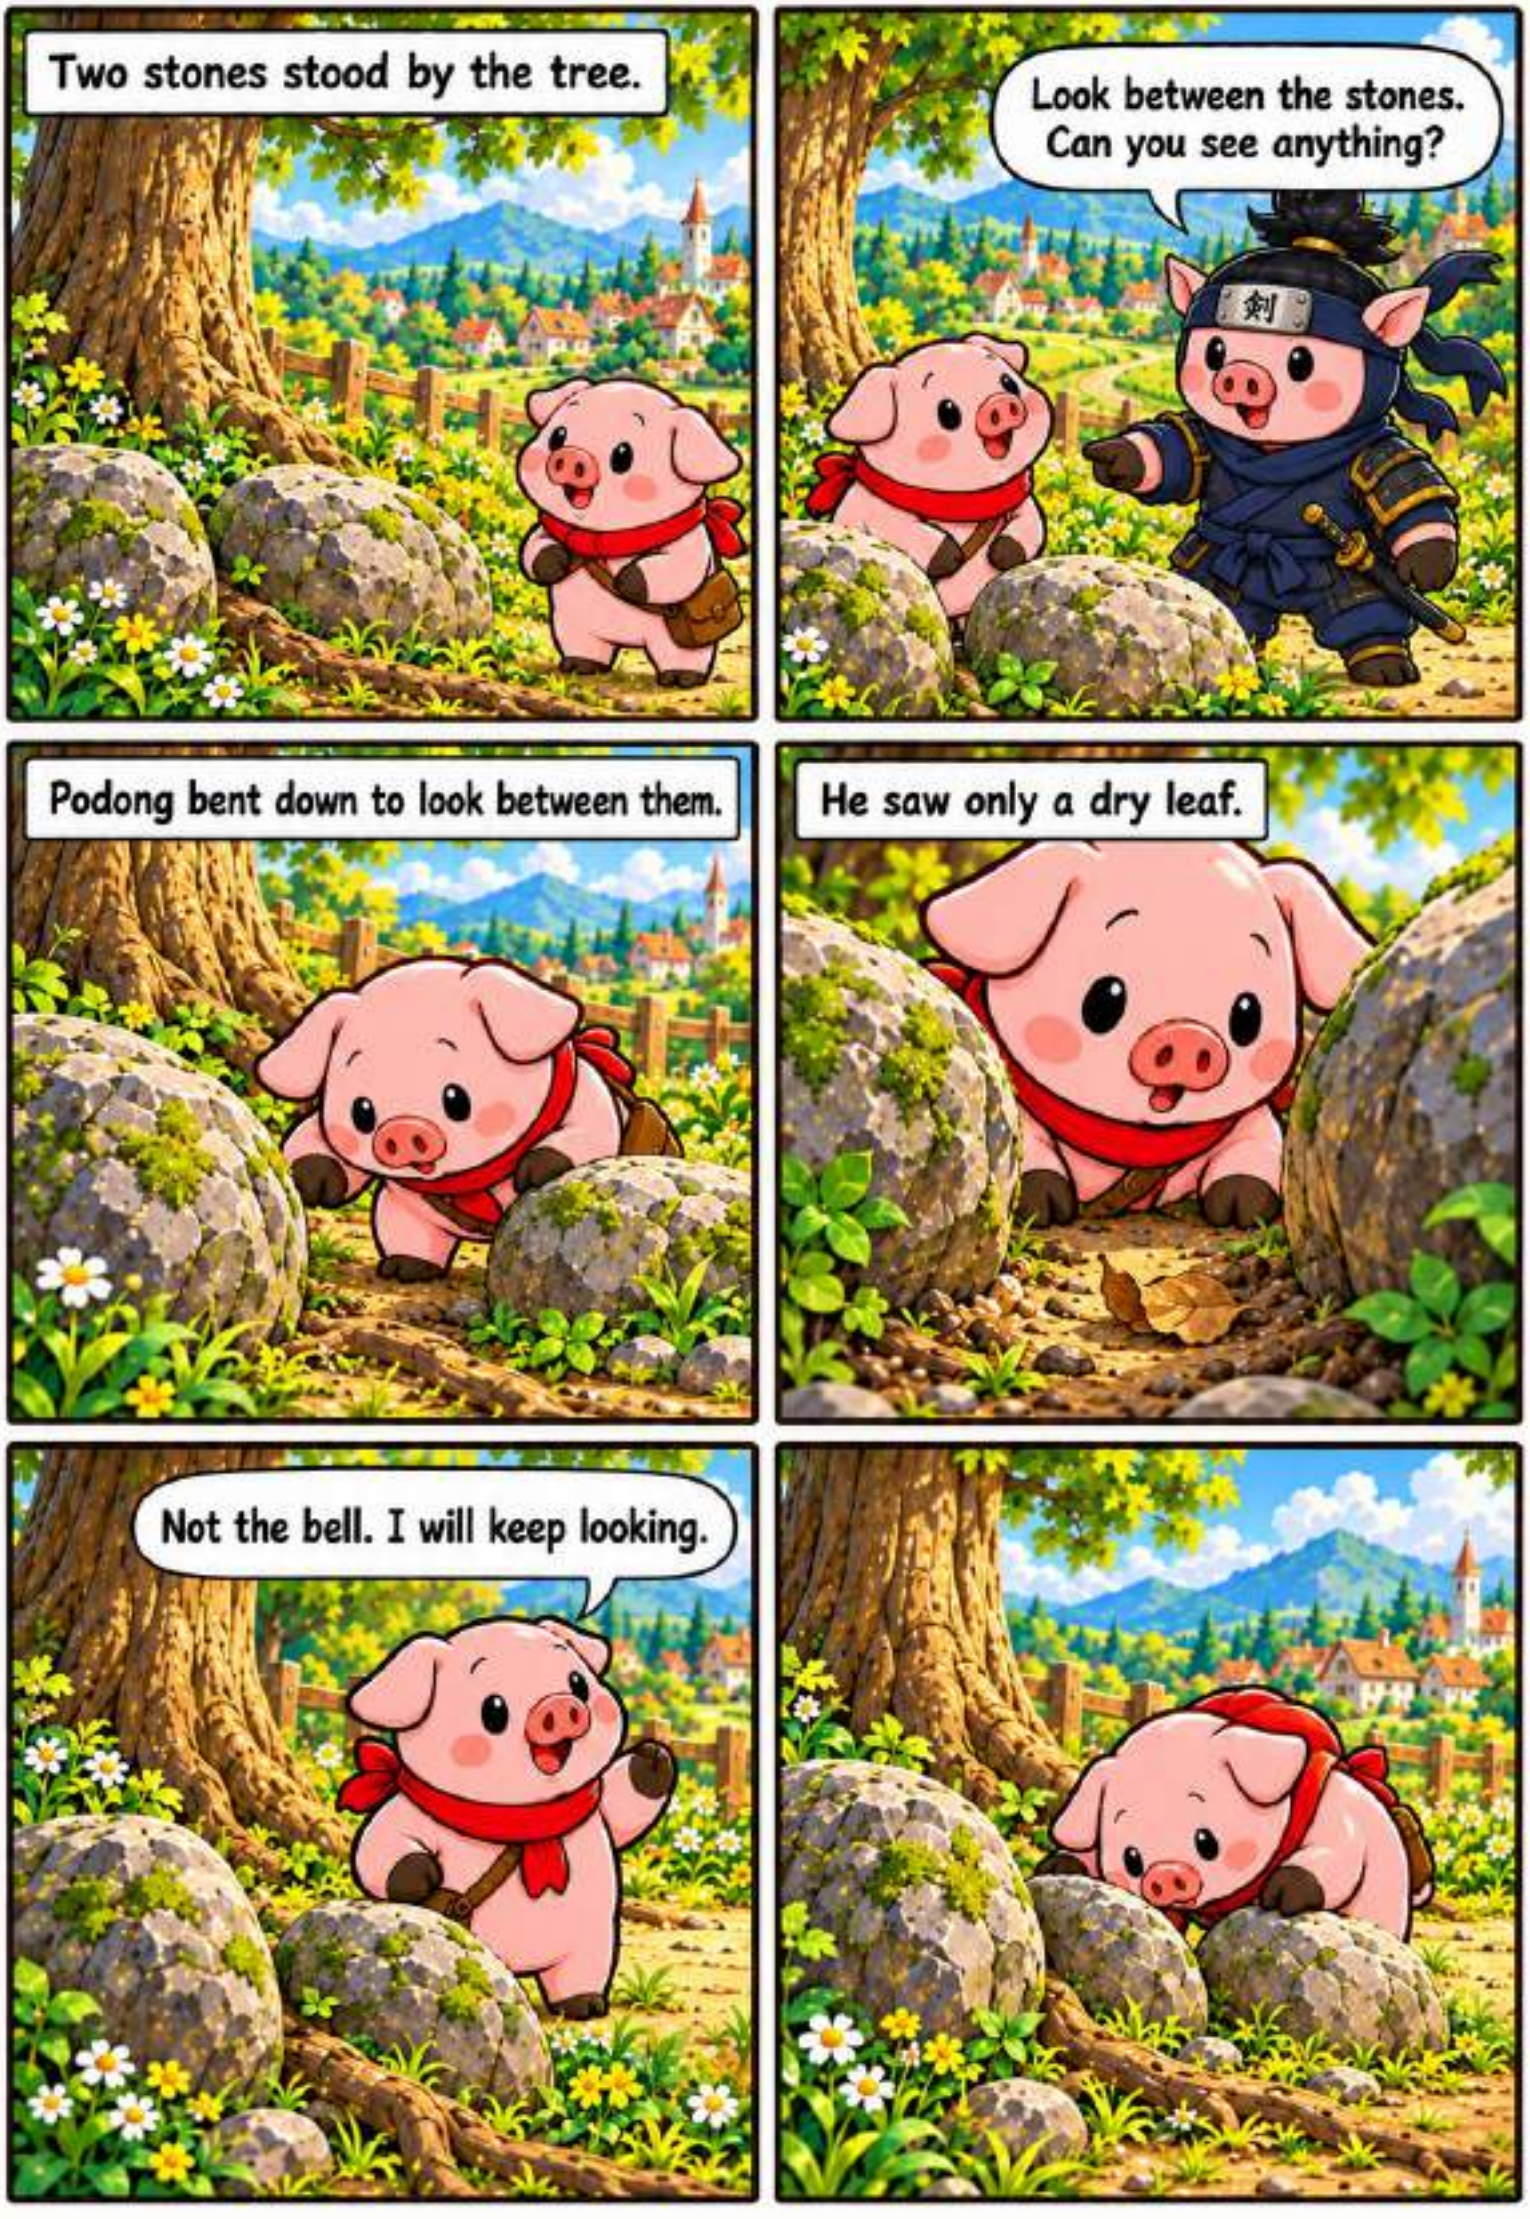
The rabbit pointed at a small track.

Something round had rolled across the dust.

It went toward a tree.

Did my bell roll here?

Let us follow the mark.



Two stones stood by the tree.
Look between the stones. Can you see anything?

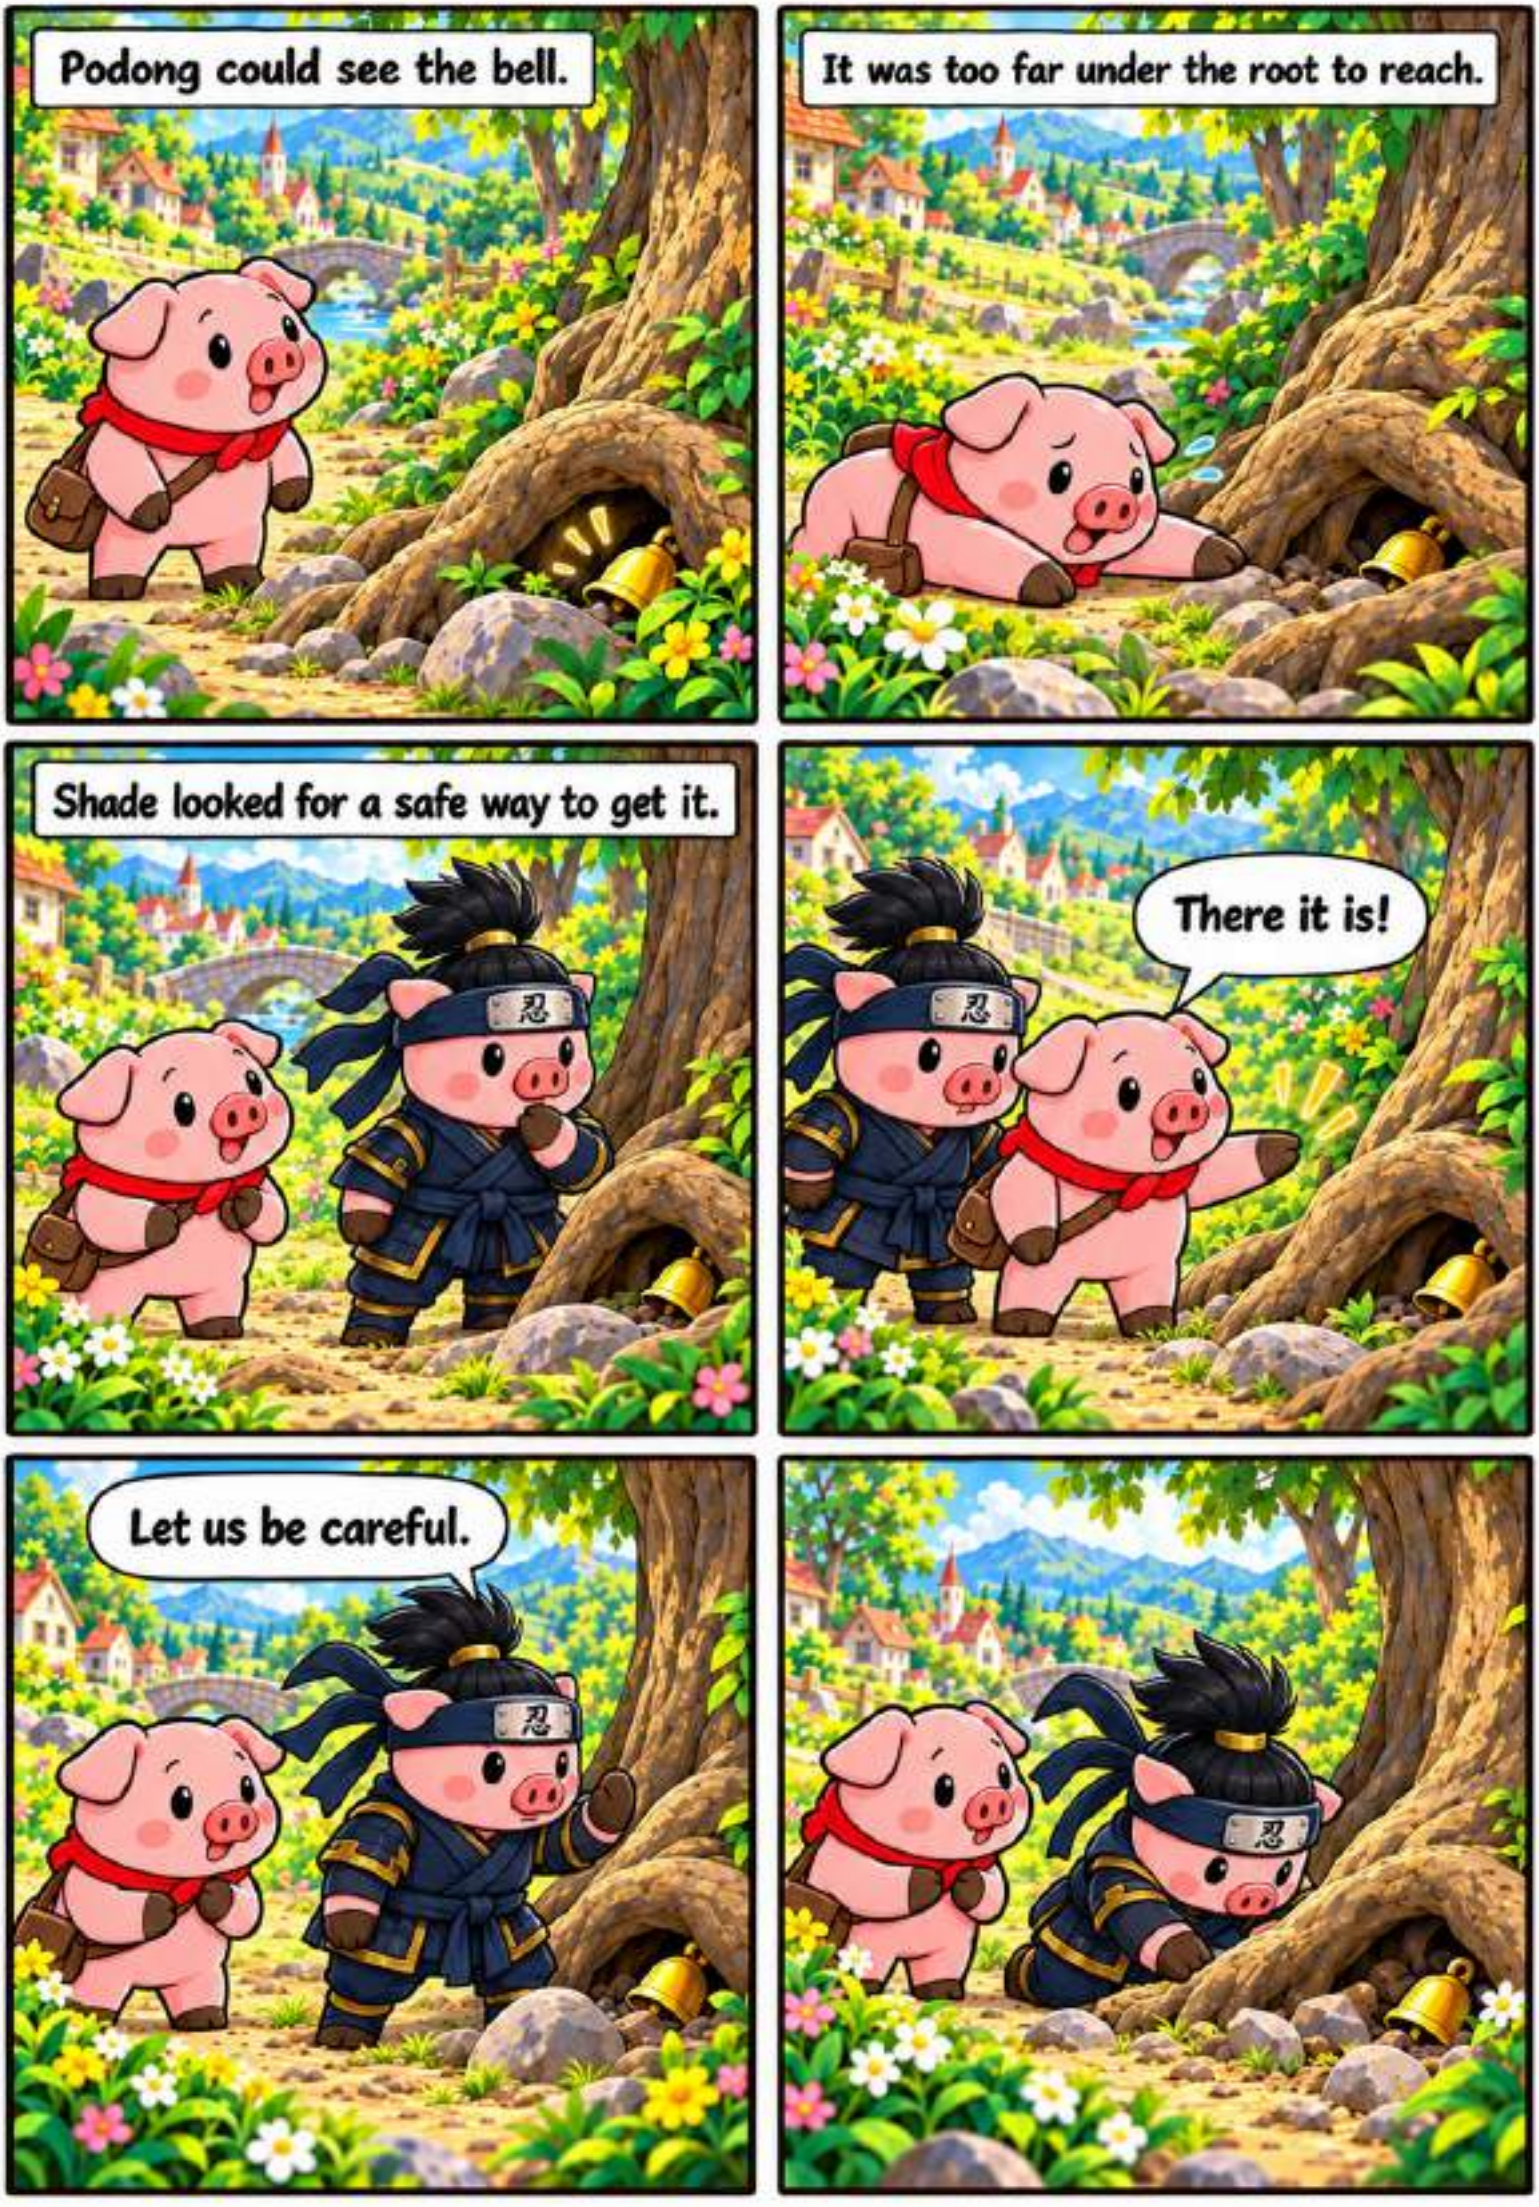
Podong bent down to look between them.
He saw only a dry leaf.
Not the bell. I will keep looking.

The rabbit noticed something shiny.
It was under a thick root.
Podong looked where it pointed.
Look under the tree.
I can spot something gold!



Podong could see the bell.
It was too far under the root to reach.
Shade looked for a safe way to get it.
There it is!
Let us be careful.

There was a small opening beside the root.
A little mouse could fit through it.

Shade held a small branch out of its way.
Podong waited and stayed calm.
Take your time.
I can see the bell.

The mouse pushed the bell into the light.
It was no longer missing.
Thank you for your help!
You helped me, too.
Podong gave a happy little jump.

Shade checked the knot on the scarf.
It had come loose.
Together, they tied it with more care.
This knot will hold better.
I will check it each day.

Each friend had helped the search.
The rabbit had found a clue.
The mouse had reached the bell.
We did it together.

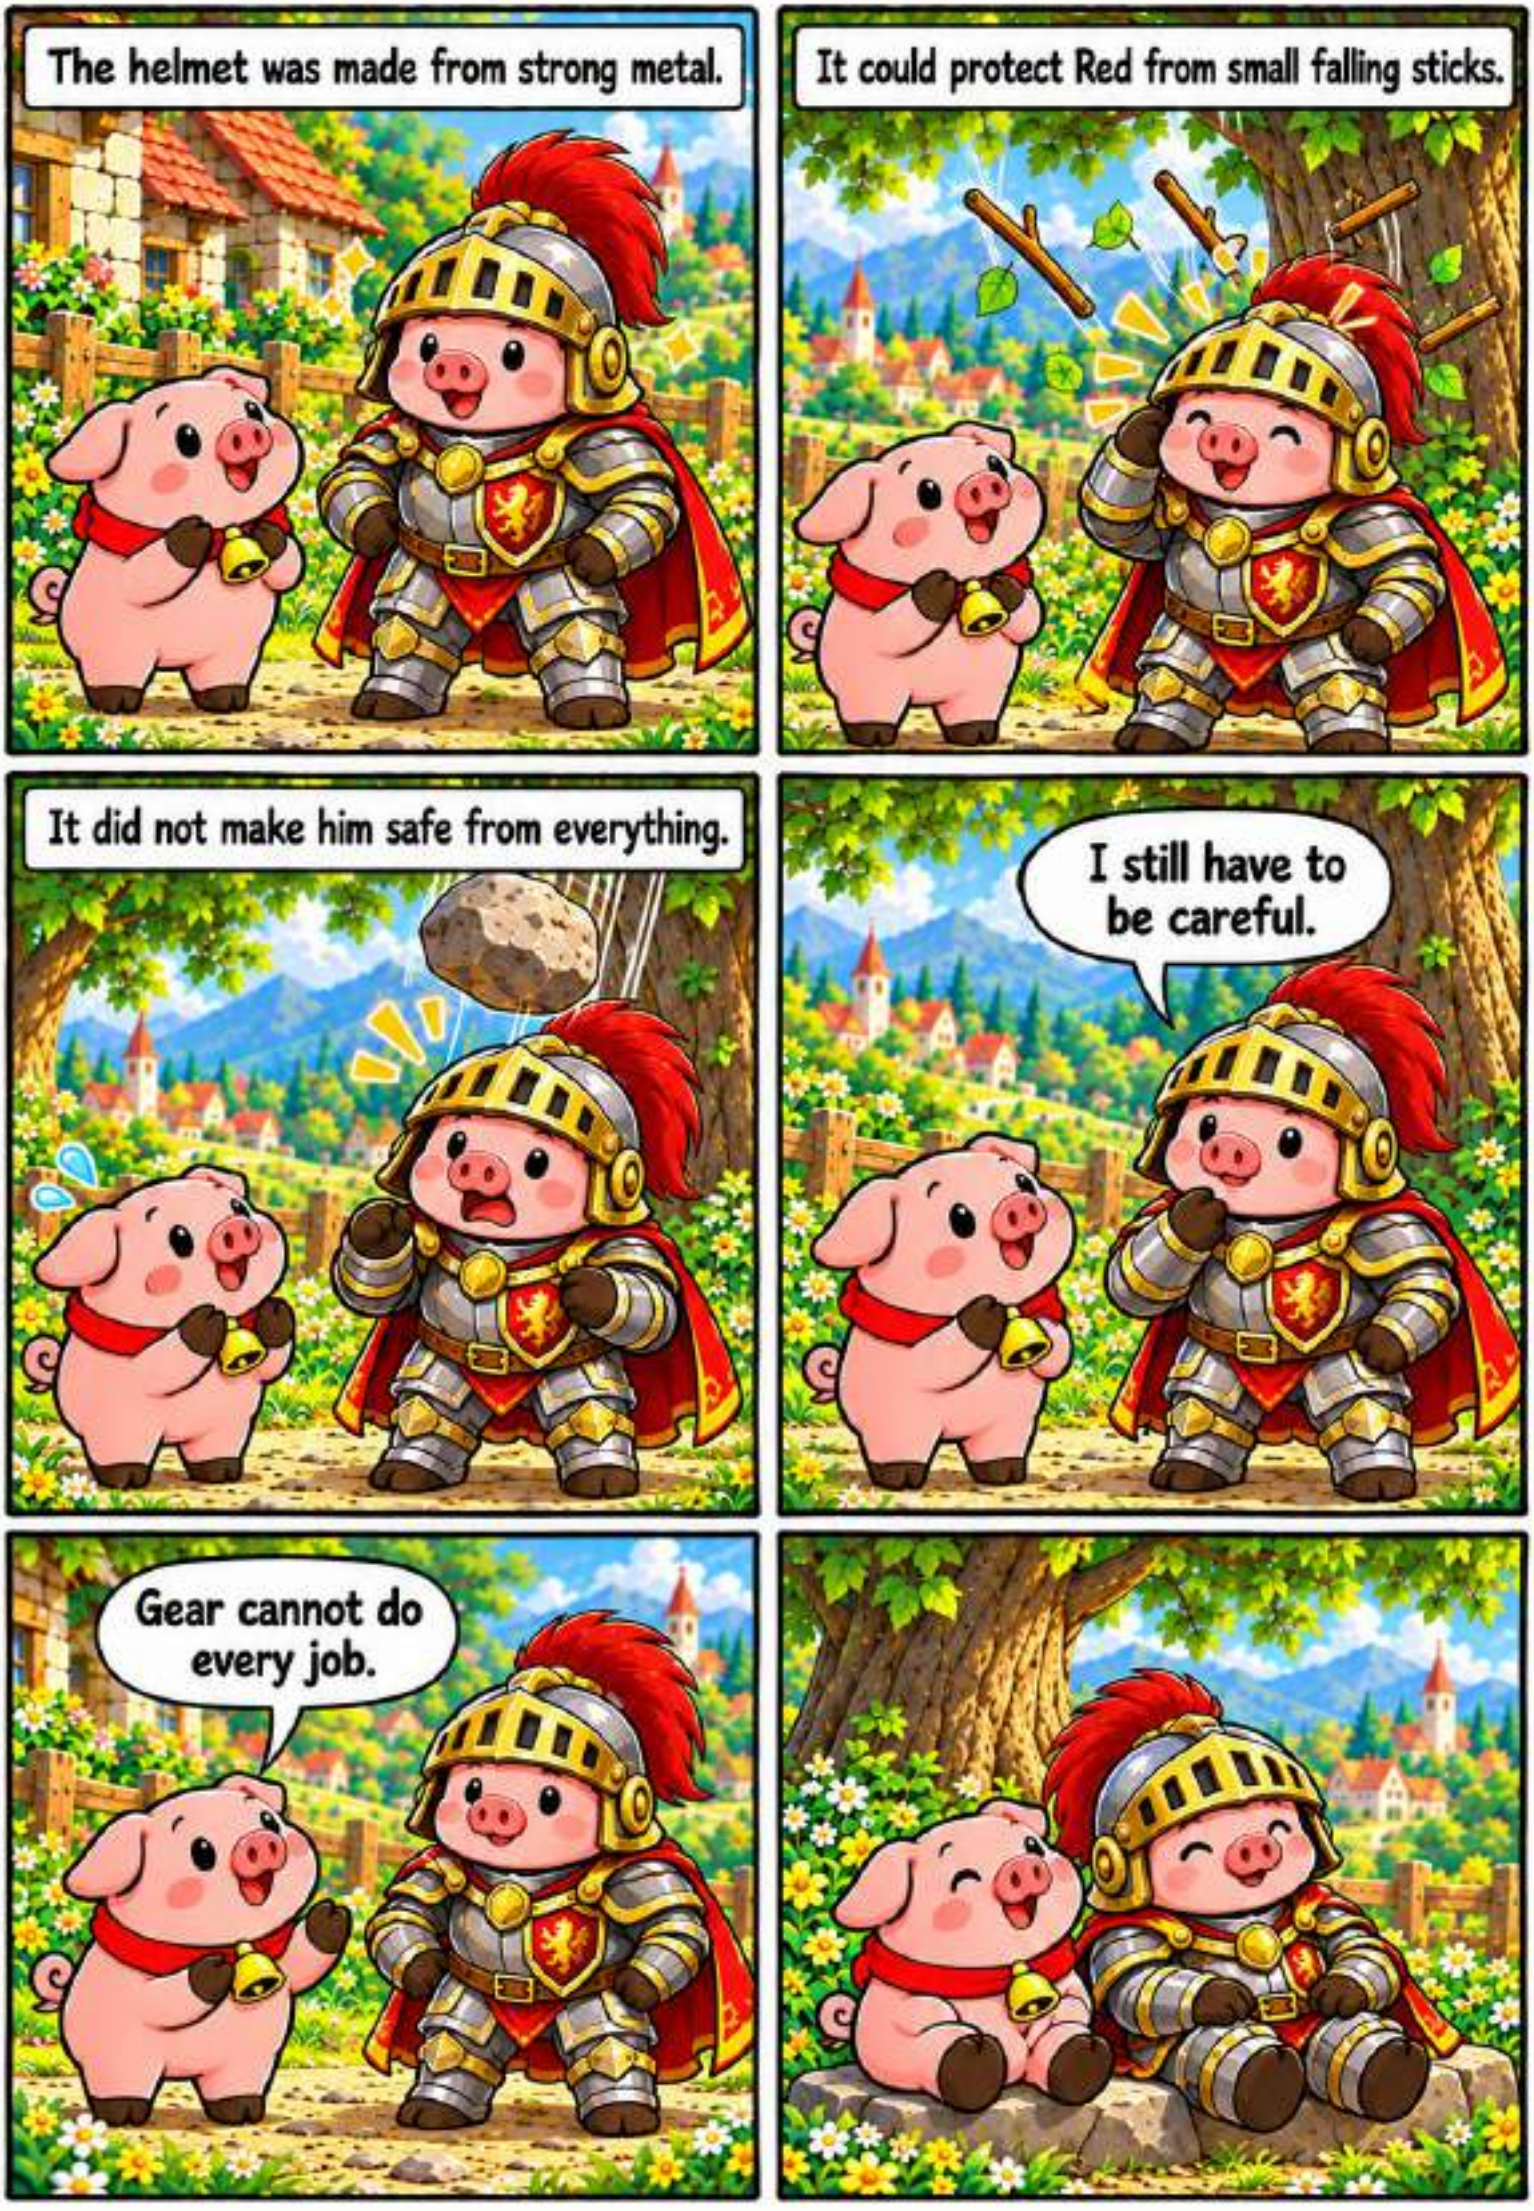
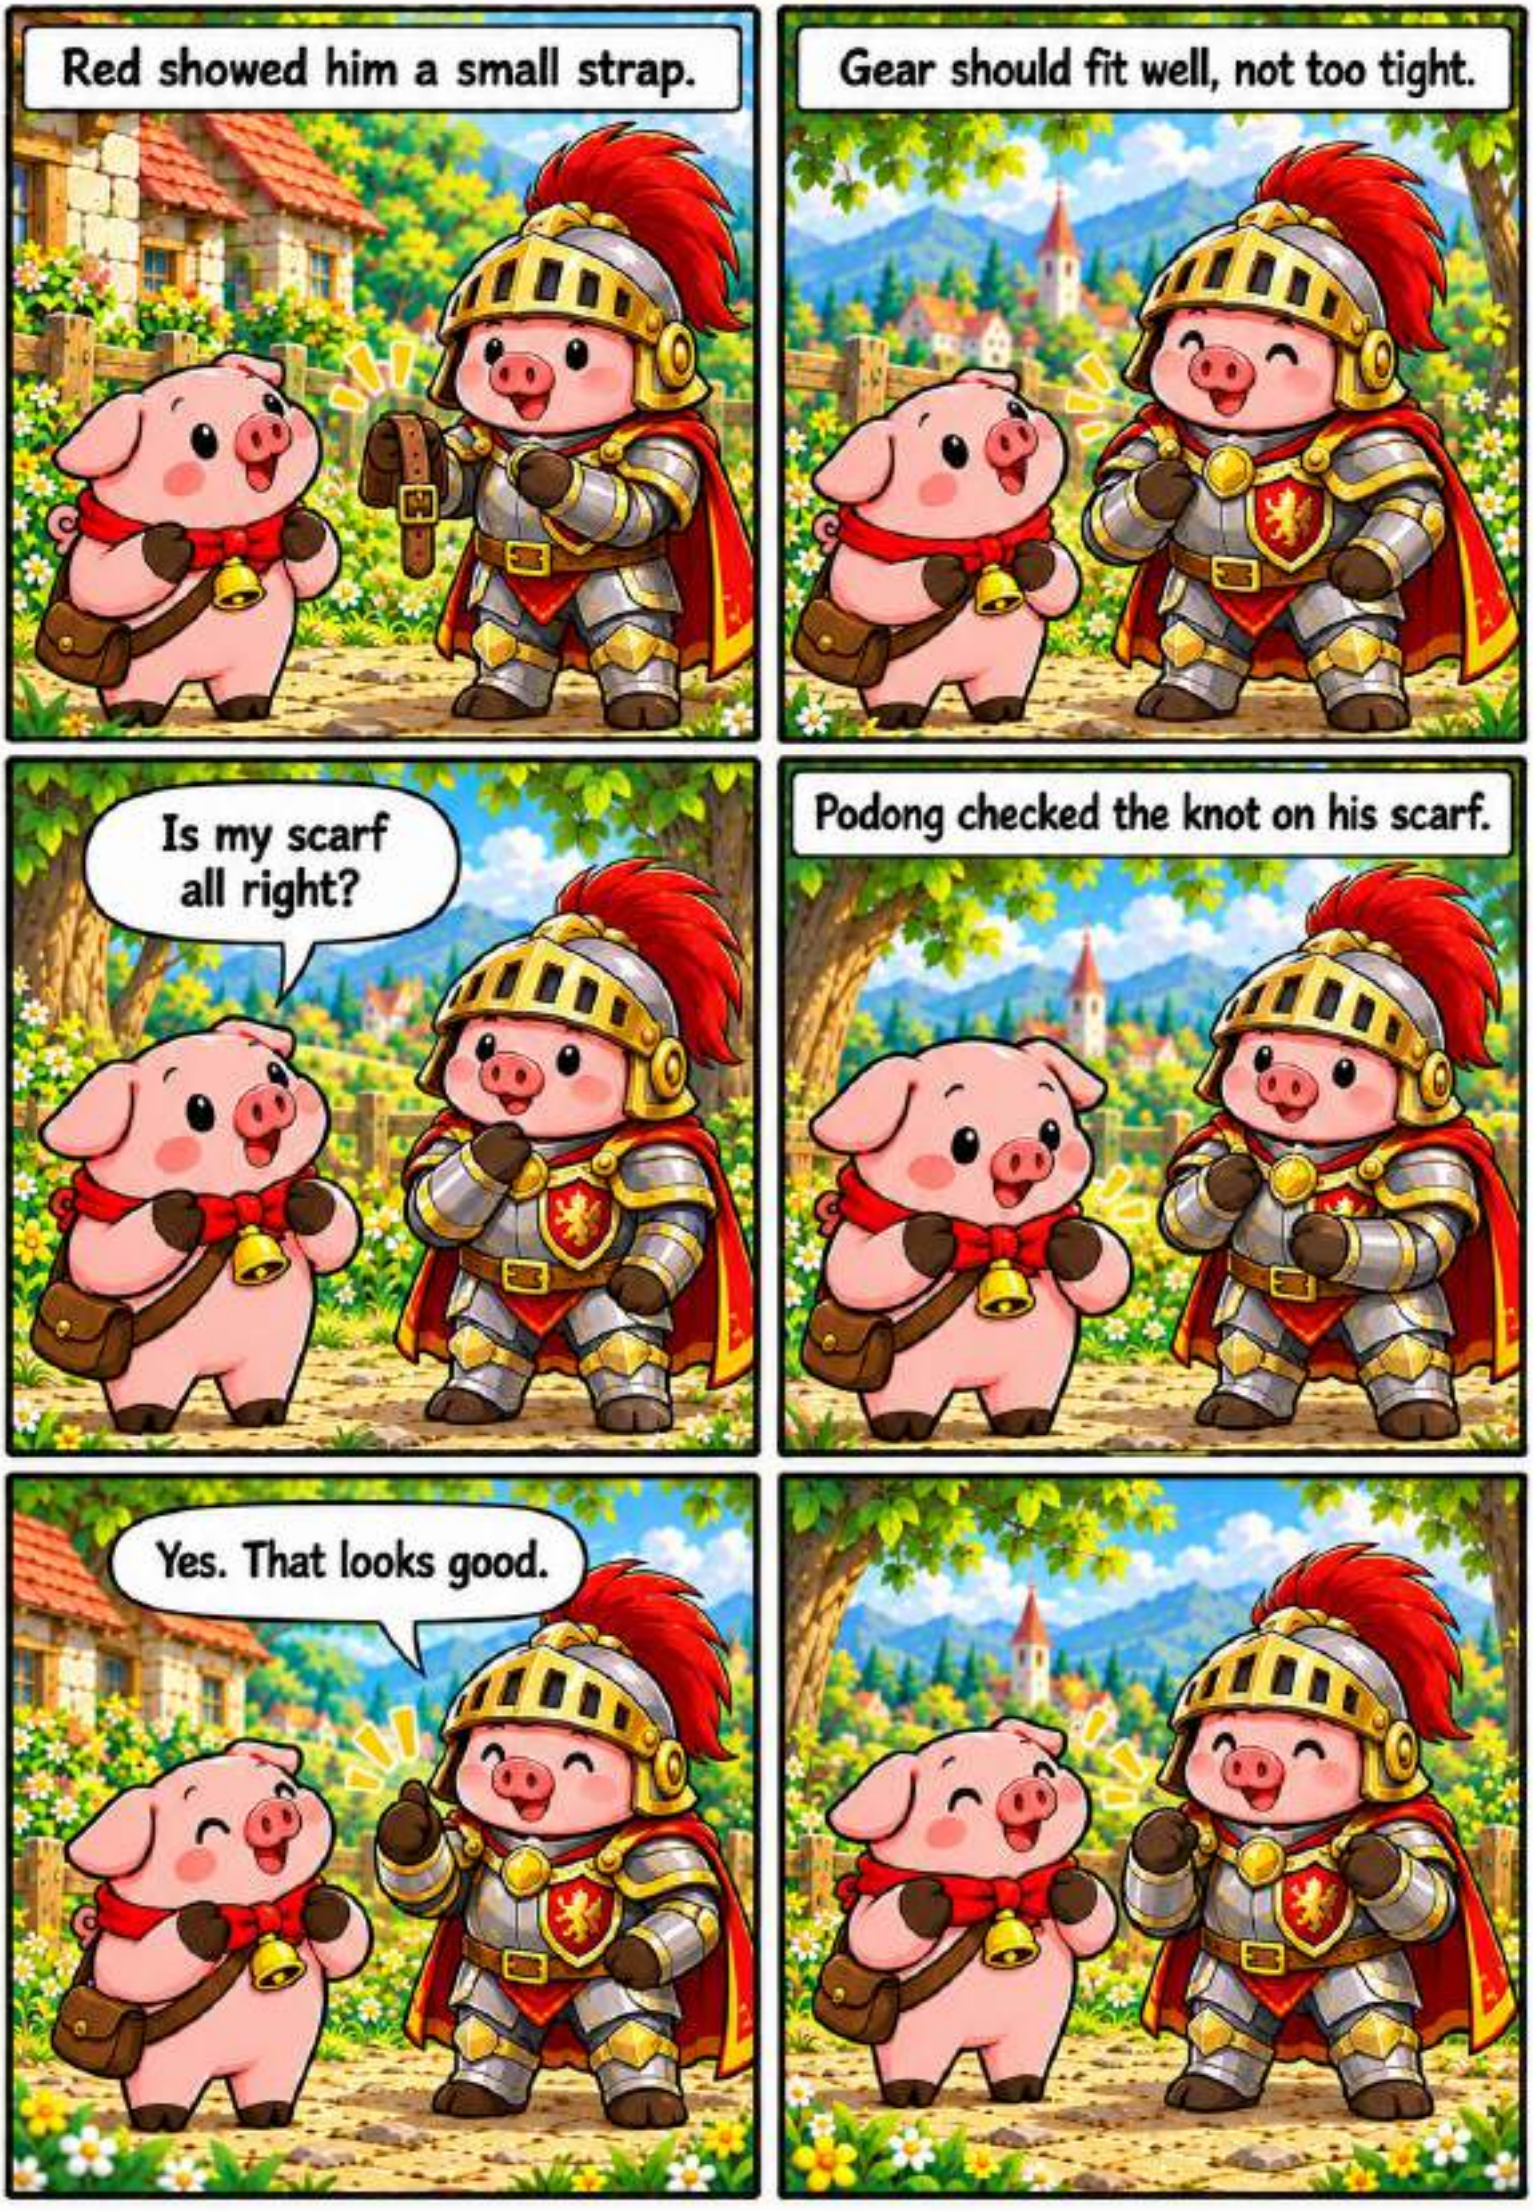
Red met Podong again and set his helmet down.
Podong looked at its smooth metal edge.
He had many questions.
What is it for?
It helps keep me safe.



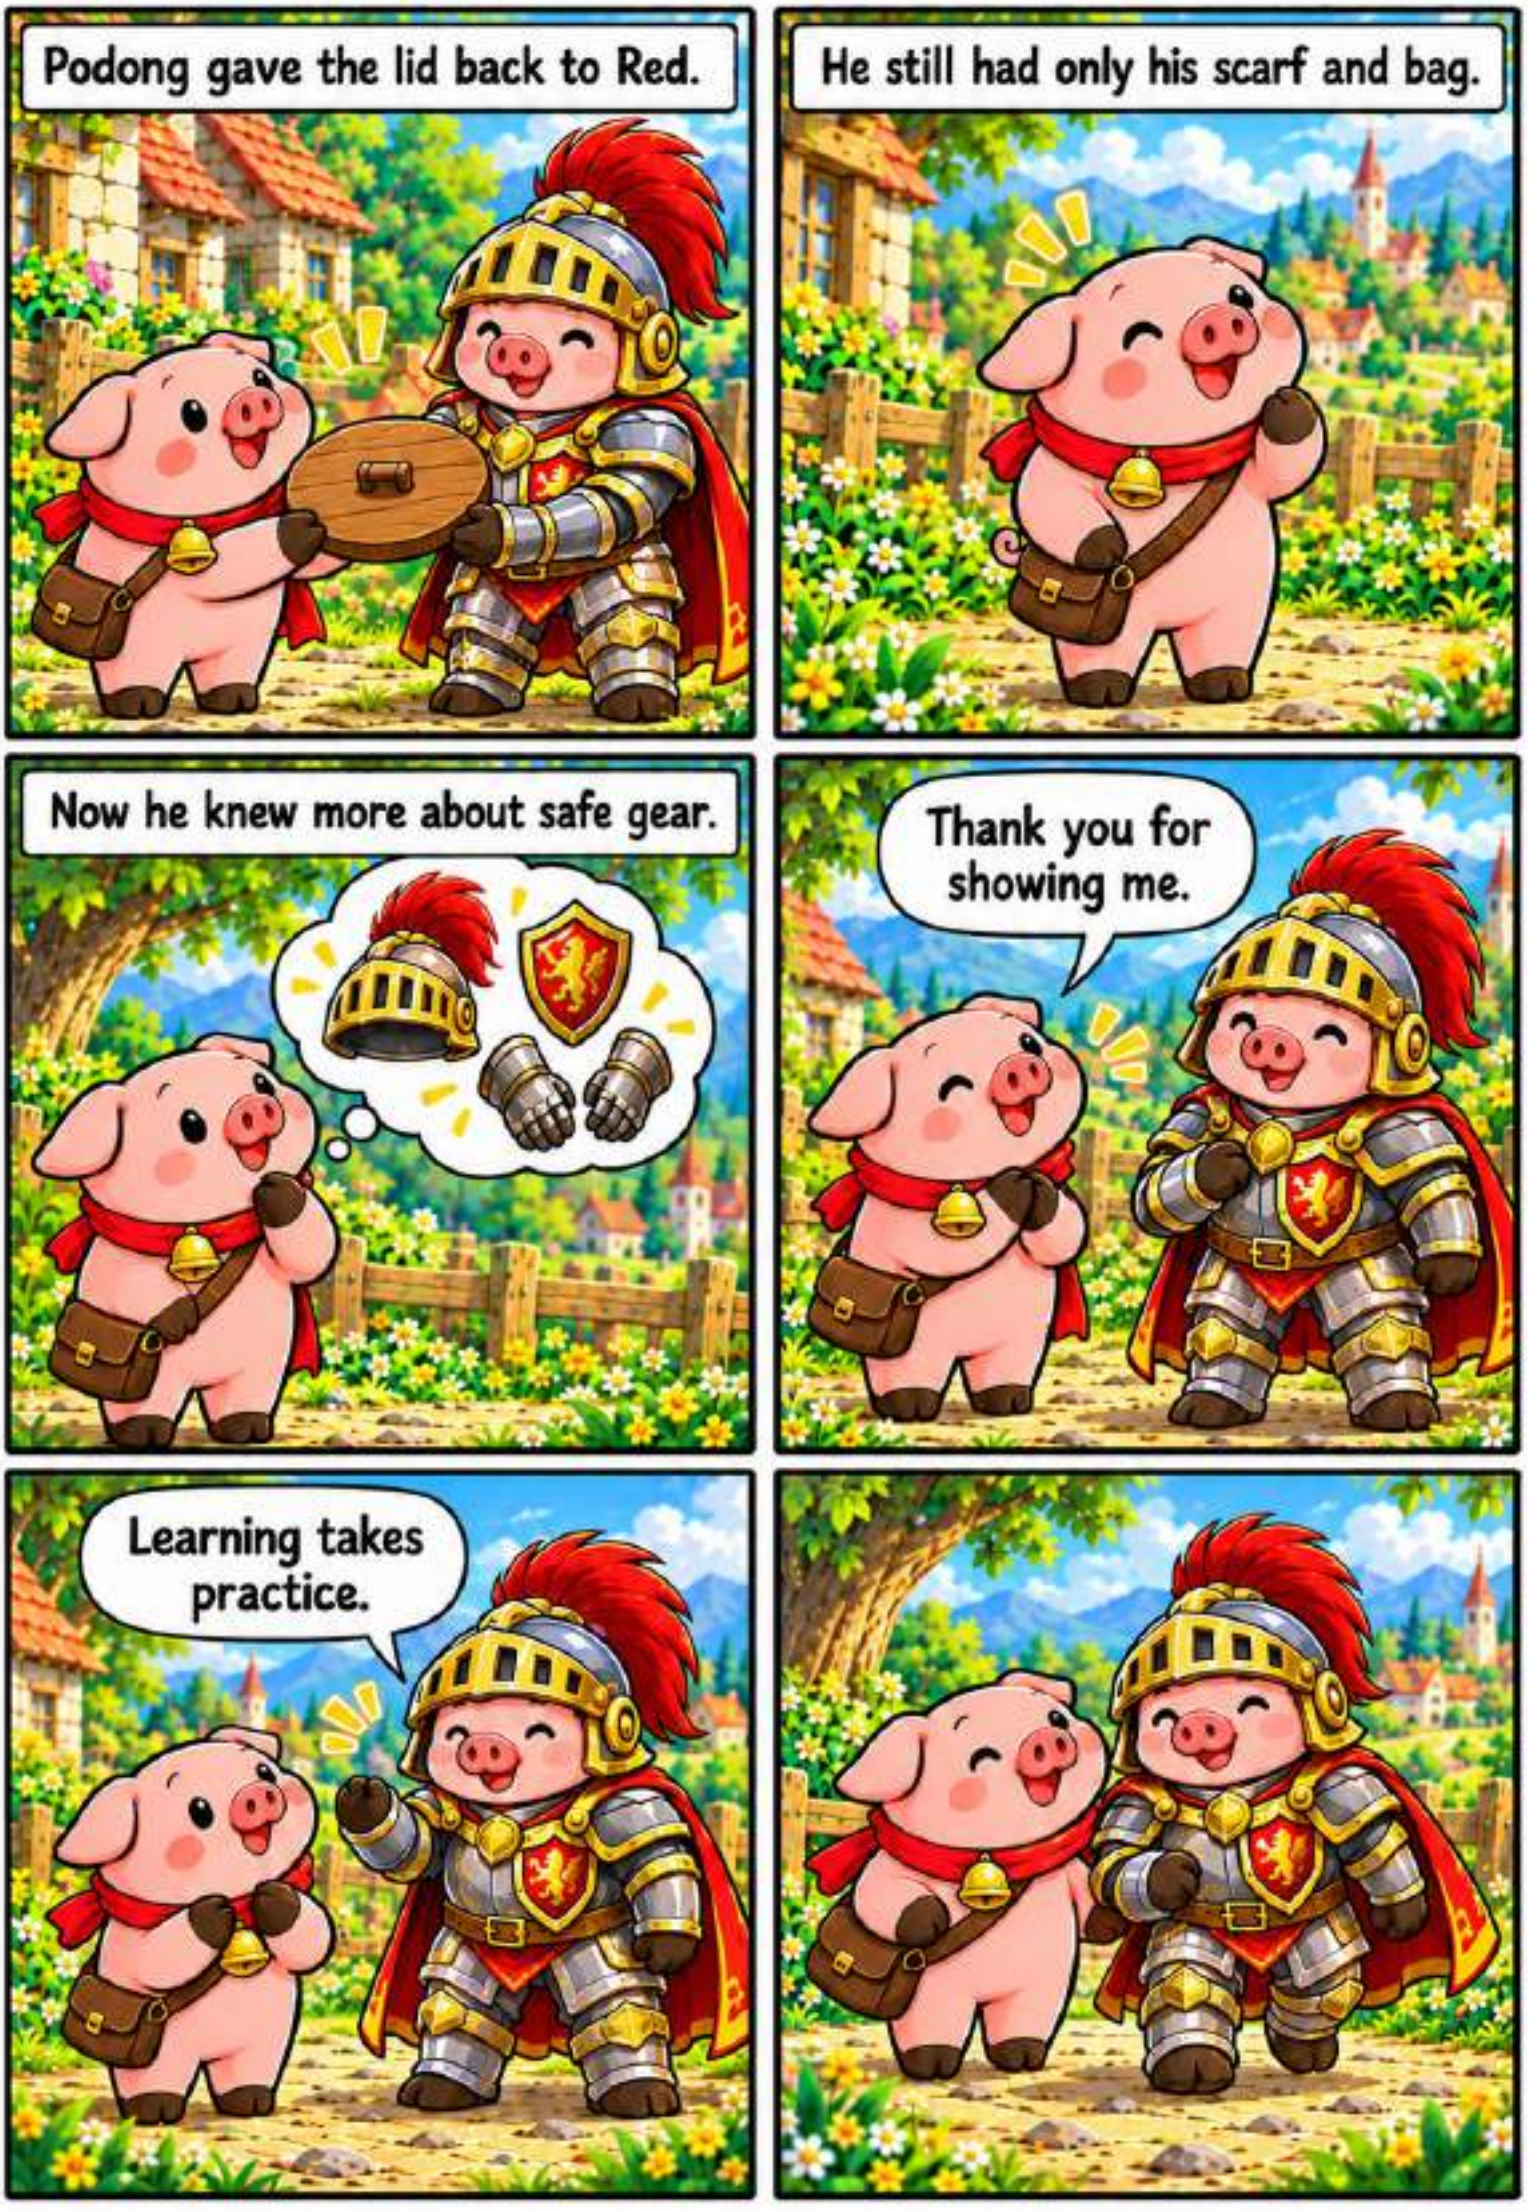
The helmet was made from strong metal.
It could protect Red from small falling sticks.
It did not make him safe from everything.
I still have to be careful.
Gear cannot do every job.

Podong tried the helmet.
It did not fit his head.
It was so loose that it slid over his eyes.
I cannot see!
Let us take it off.



Red showed him a small strap.
Gear should fit well, not too tight.
Is my scarf all right?
Podong checked the knot on his scarf.
Yes. That looks good.

Red let Podong carry a small wooden lid.
They would practice how to hold it.
It was a lesson, not a new reward.
Keep the edge away from your face.
I will take care.



Podong gave the lid back to Red.
He still had only his scarf and bag.
Now he knew more about safe gear.

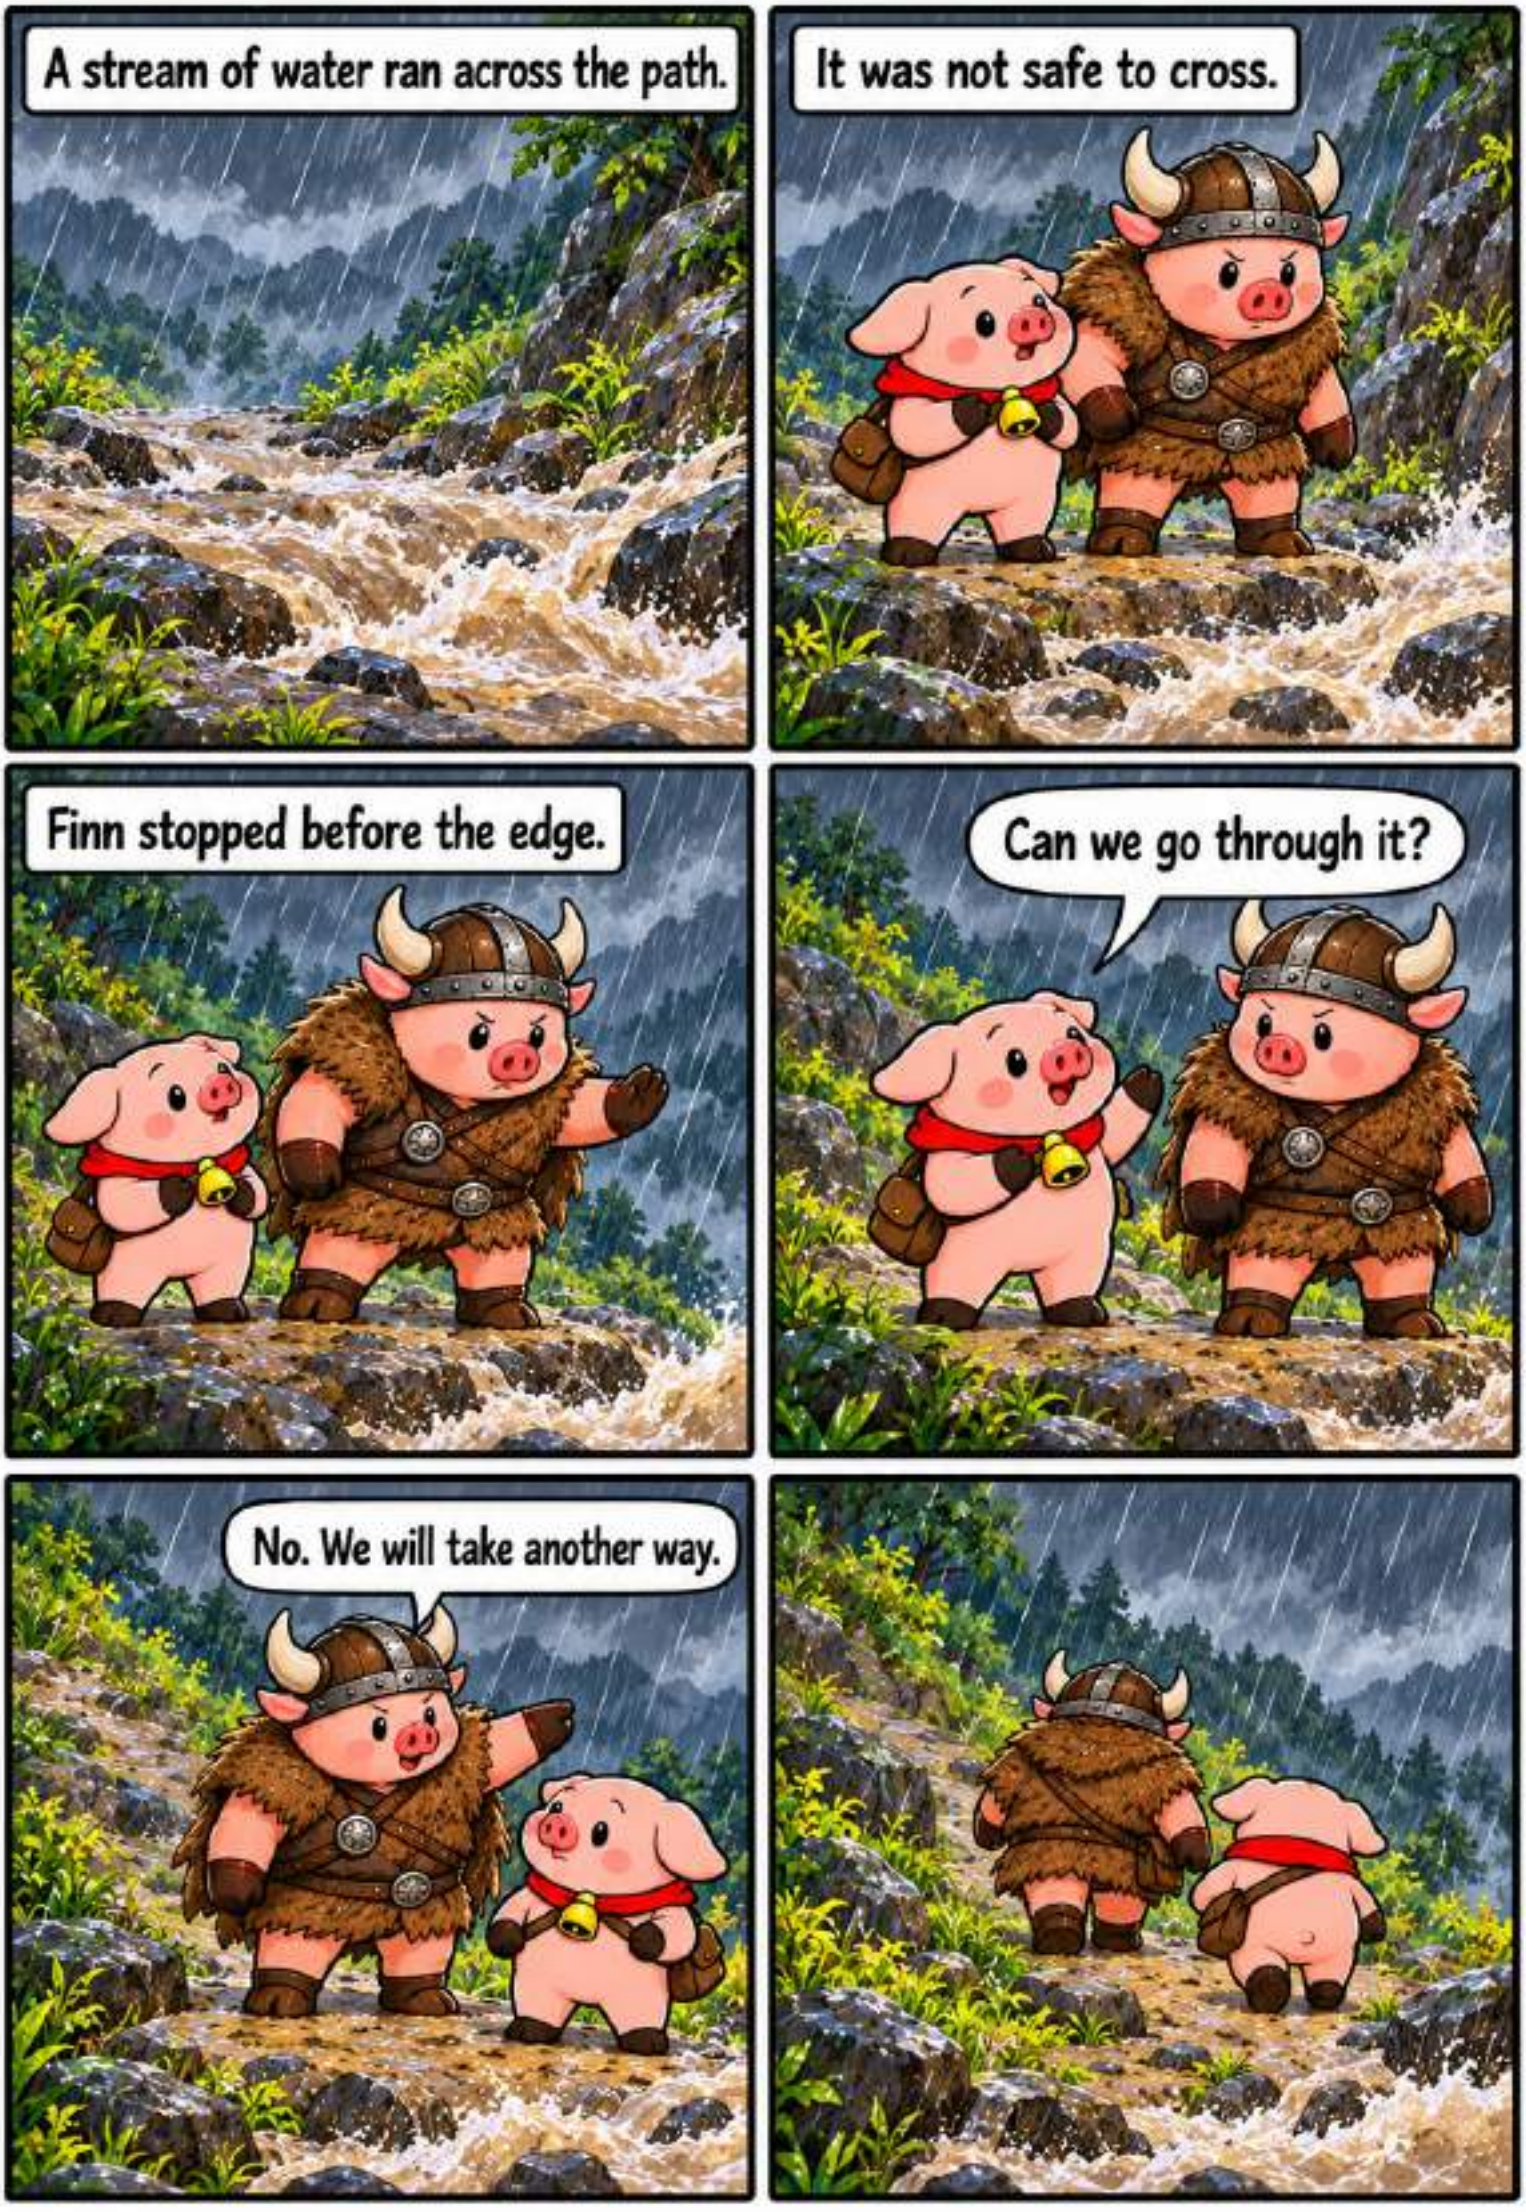
Podong was soaked, and his bag was wet.
He began to shiver.
I am very cold.
We will find shelter.



A stream of water ran across the path.
It was not safe to cross.
Finn stopped before the edge.
Can we go through it?
No. We will take another way.

They saw a small stone shelter nearby.
Its roof kept the rain out.
Both friends walked inside.
This place looks safe.
It is dry in here.

Finn gave Podong a dry cloth.
They sat close to stay warm.
They would wait until the storm passed.
Thank you for staying with me.

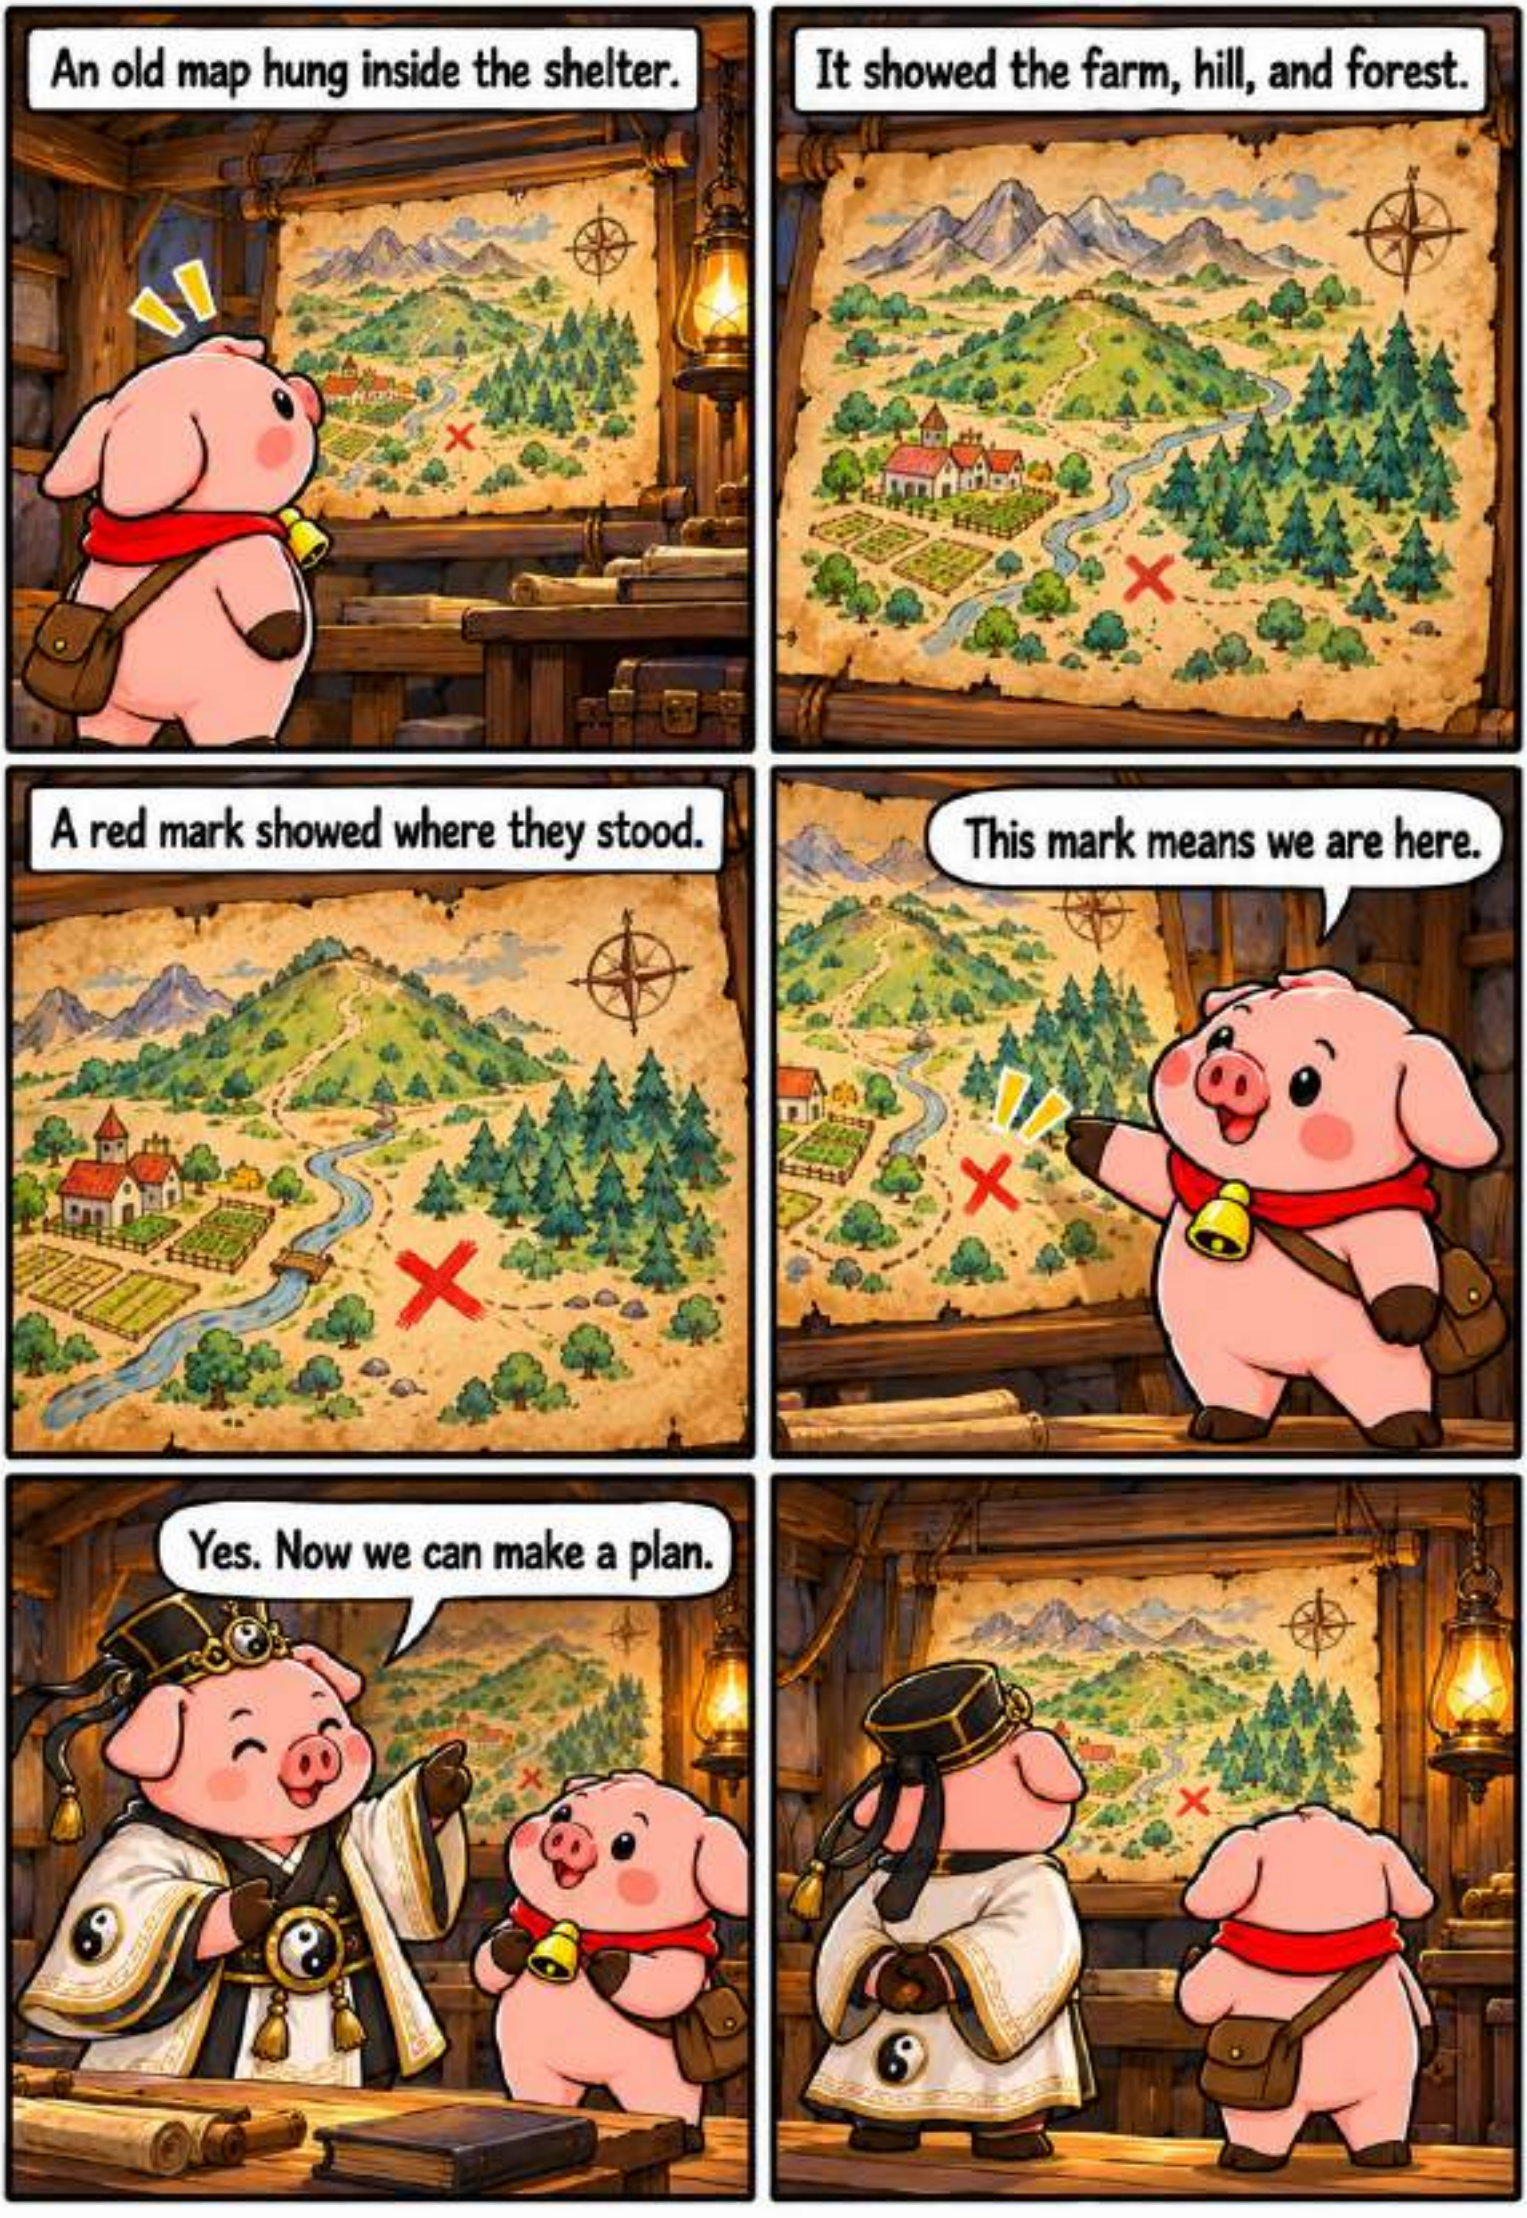
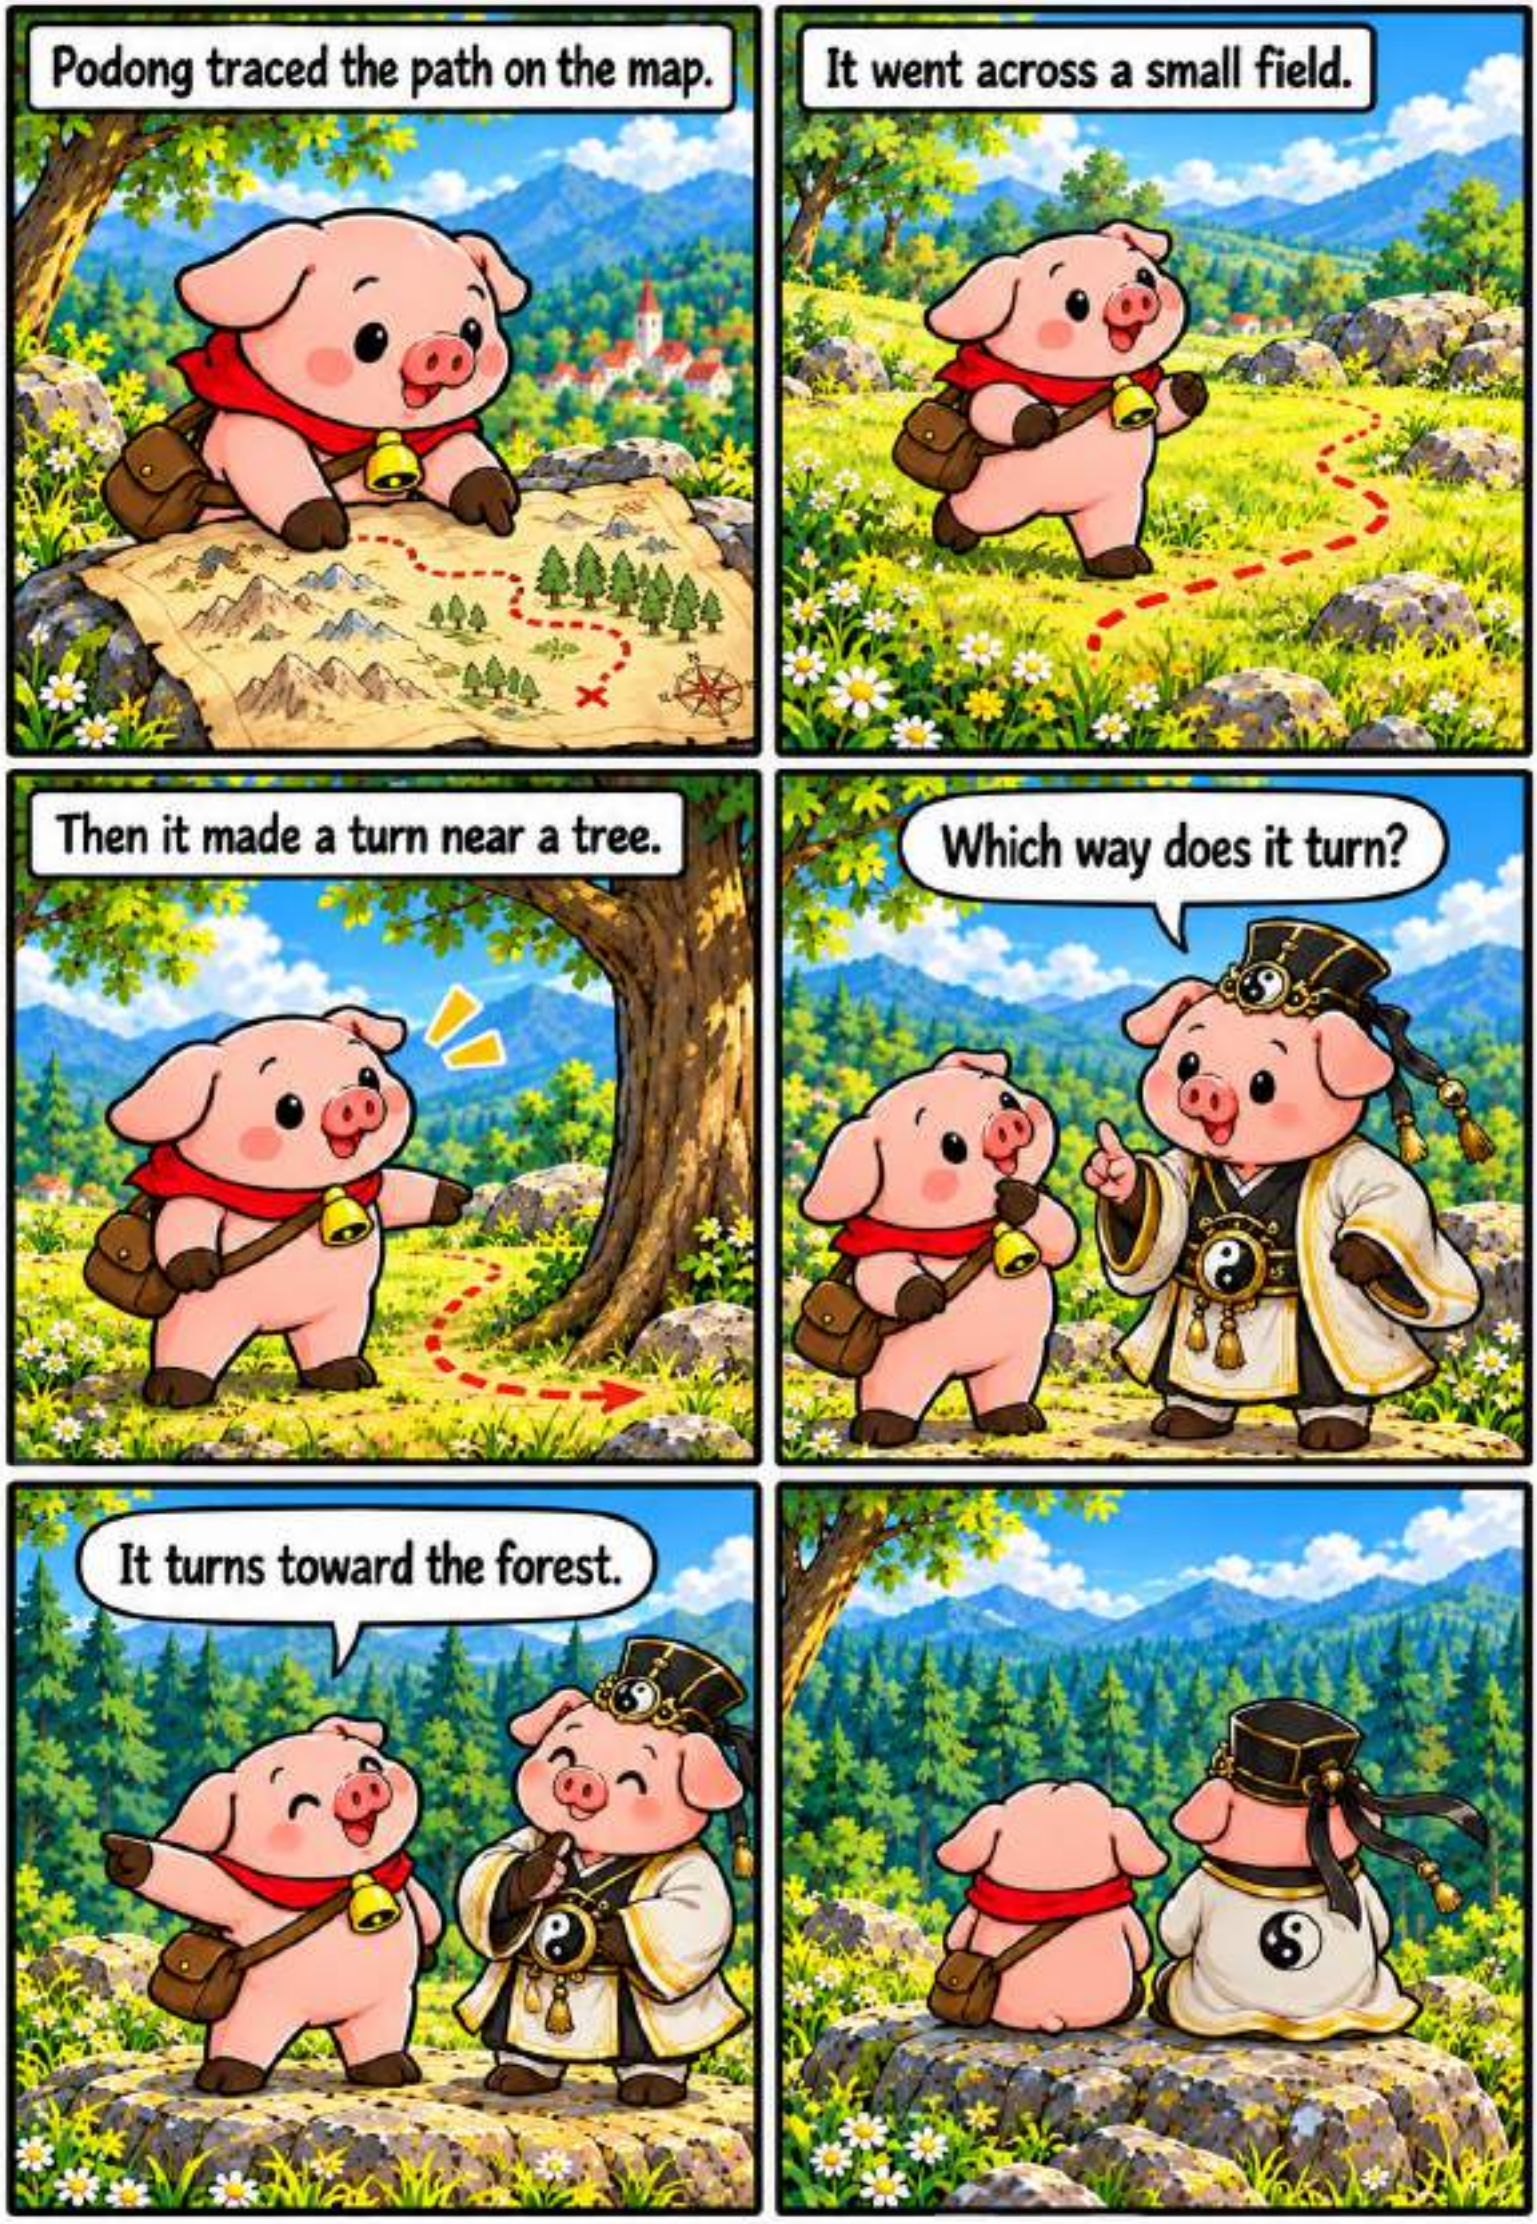
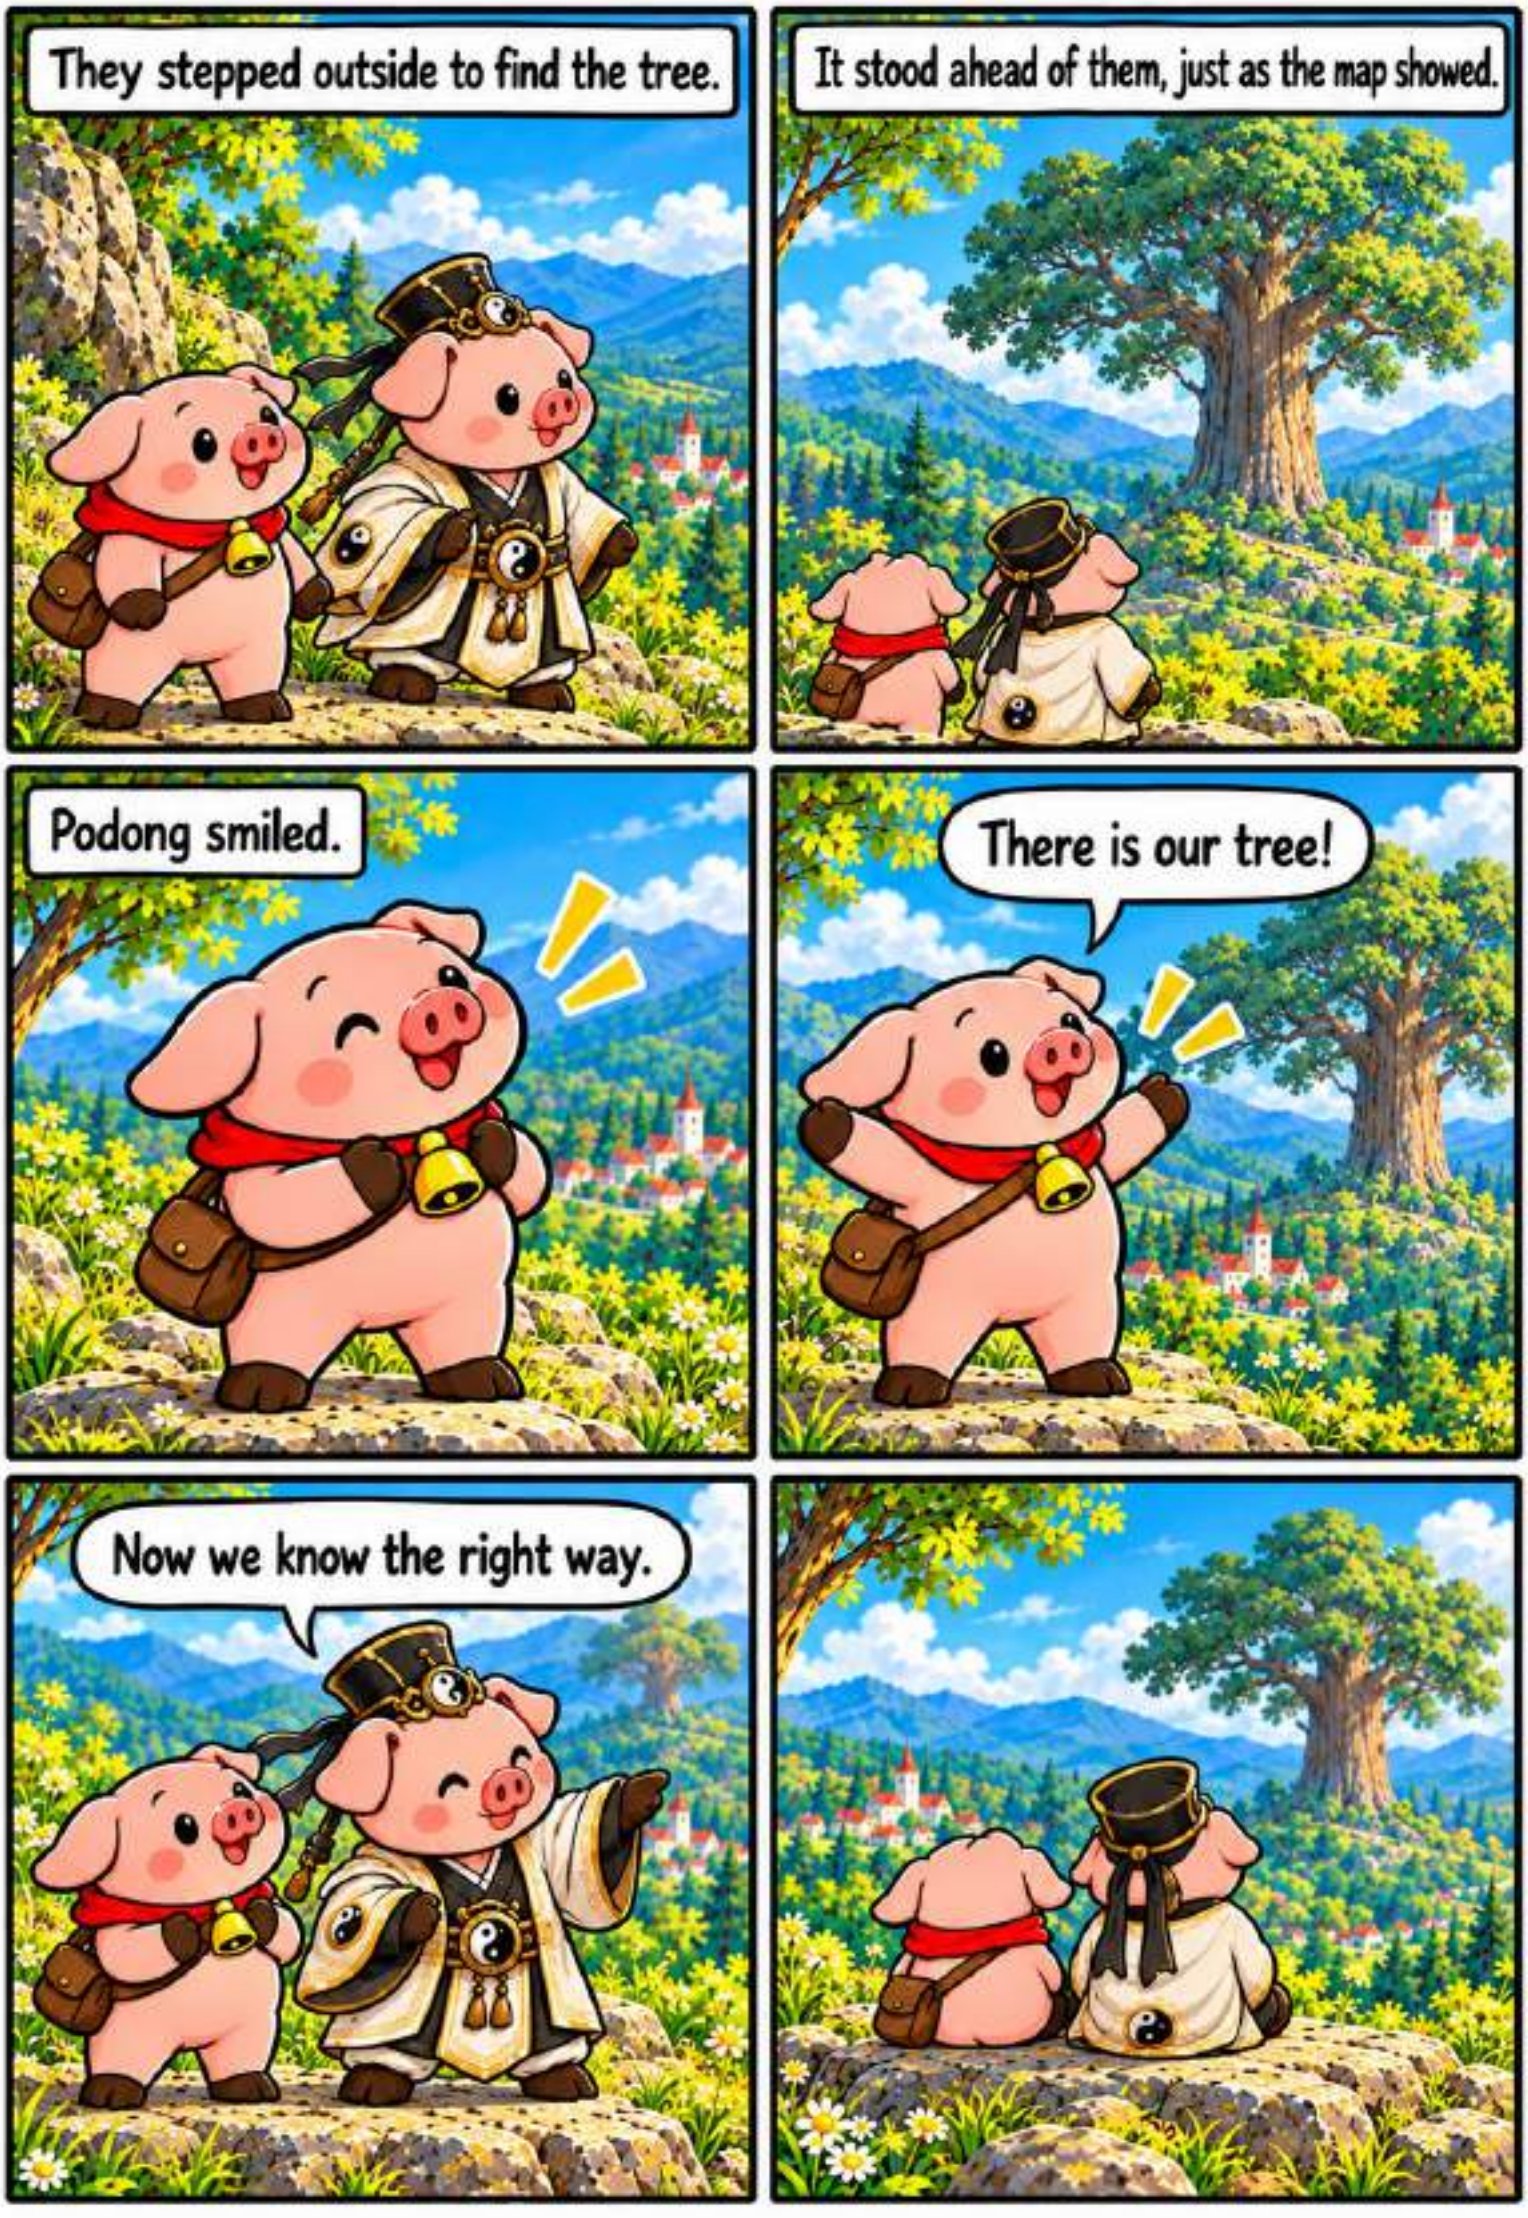
Rune, a sage, met Podong by the shelter.
Rain had washed leaves across the path.
Podong could not find the old marks.
Which way do we go?
Let us check the map.



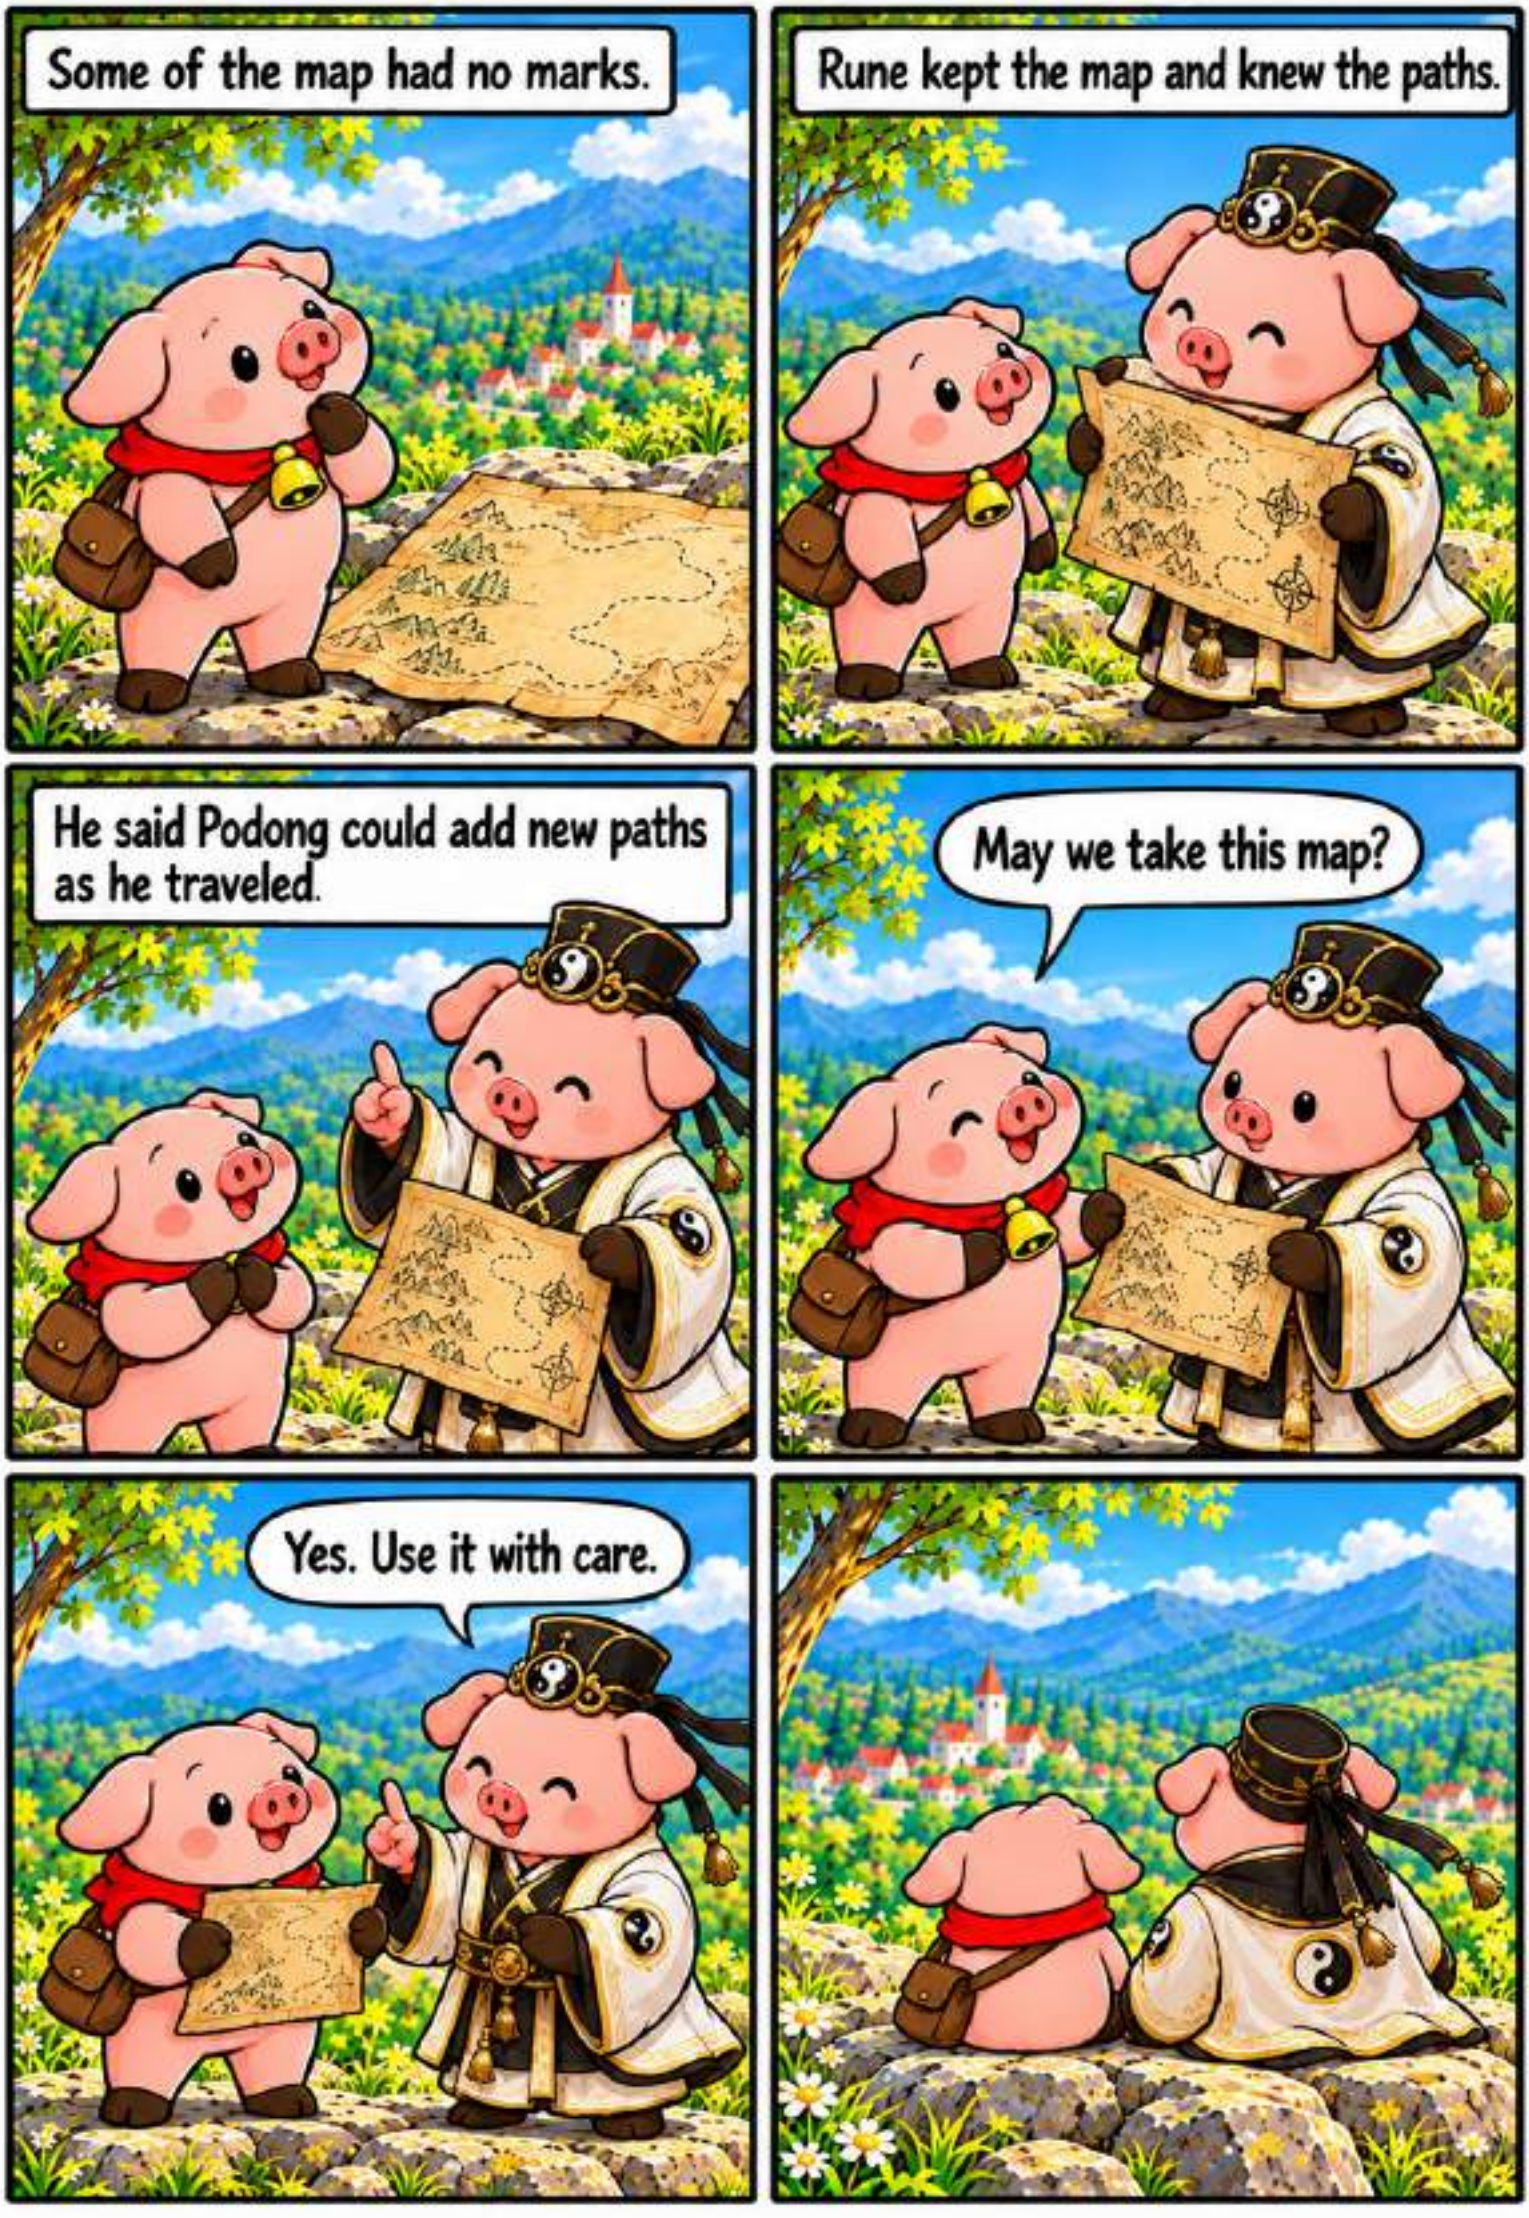
An old map hung inside the shelter.
It showed the farm, hill, and forest.
A red mark showed where they stood.
This mark means we are here.
Yes. Now we can make a plan.



Podong traced the path on the map.
It went across a small field.
Then it made a turn near a tree.
Which way does it turn?
It turns toward the forest.



They stepped outside to find the tree.
It stood ahead of them, just as the map showed.
Podong smiled.
There is our tree!
Now we know the right way.



Some of the map had no marks.
Rune kept the map and knew the paths.
He said Podong could add new paths as he traveled.
May we take this map?
Yes. Use it with care.

Podong put the map in his dry bag.
The forest path lay ahead.
This time, they knew where to begin.
Let us follow our plan.
We are nearly at the forest.

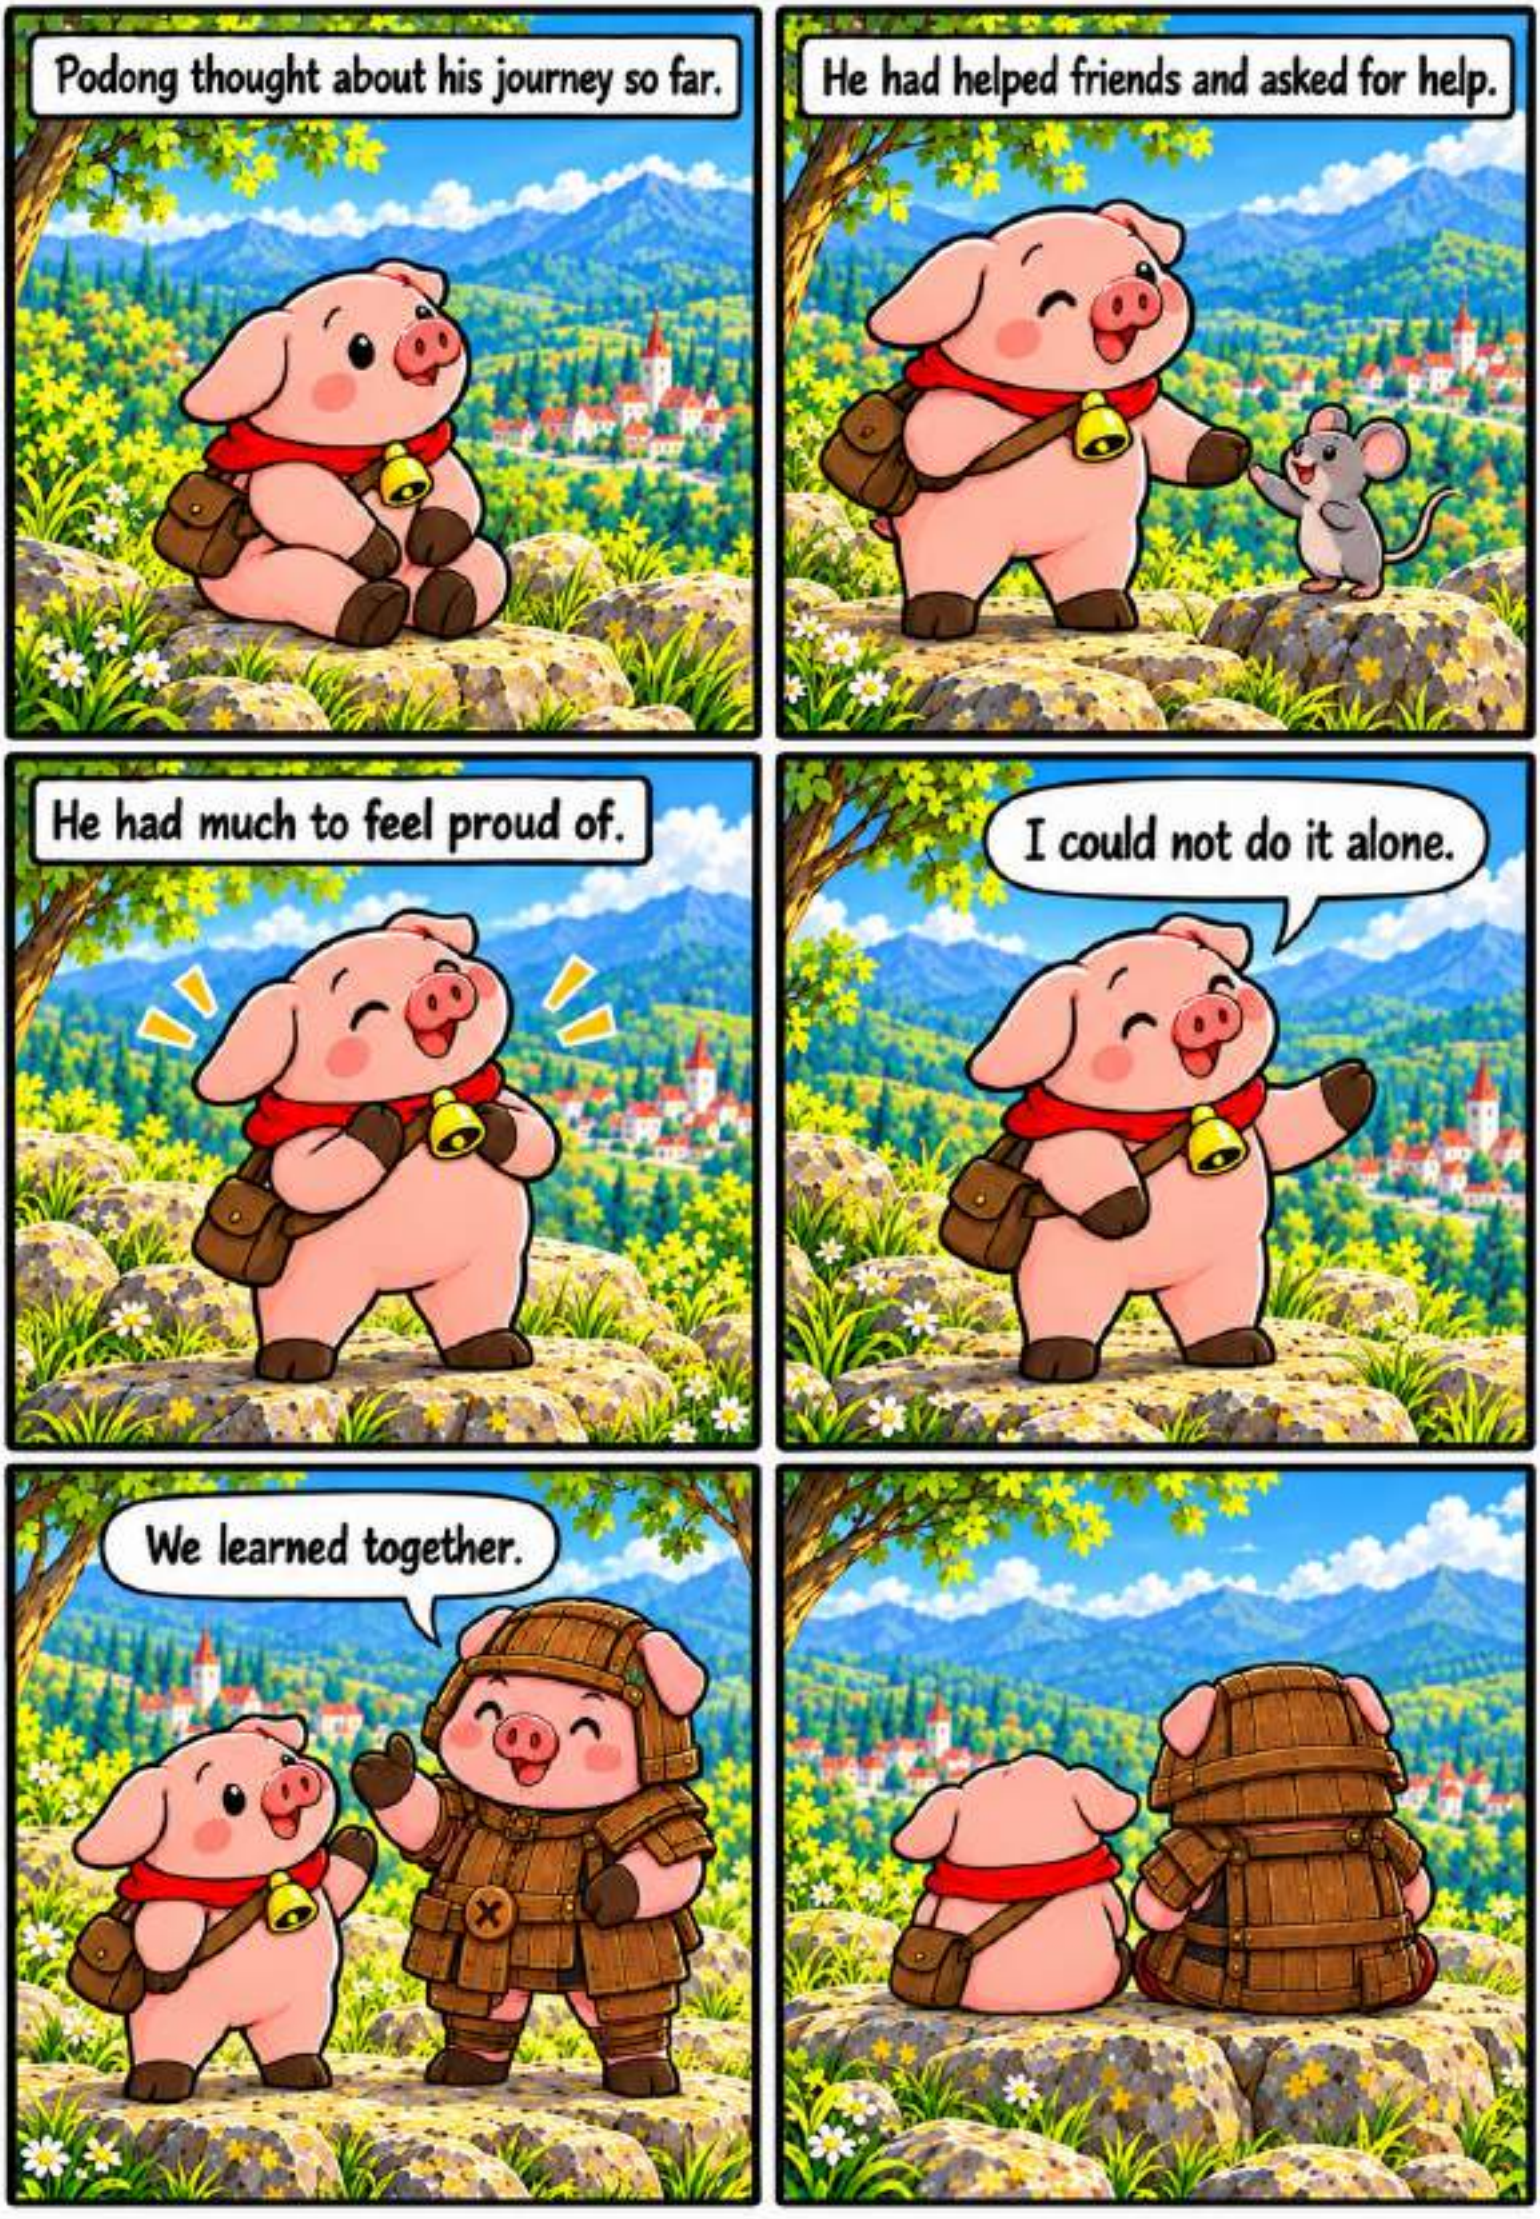
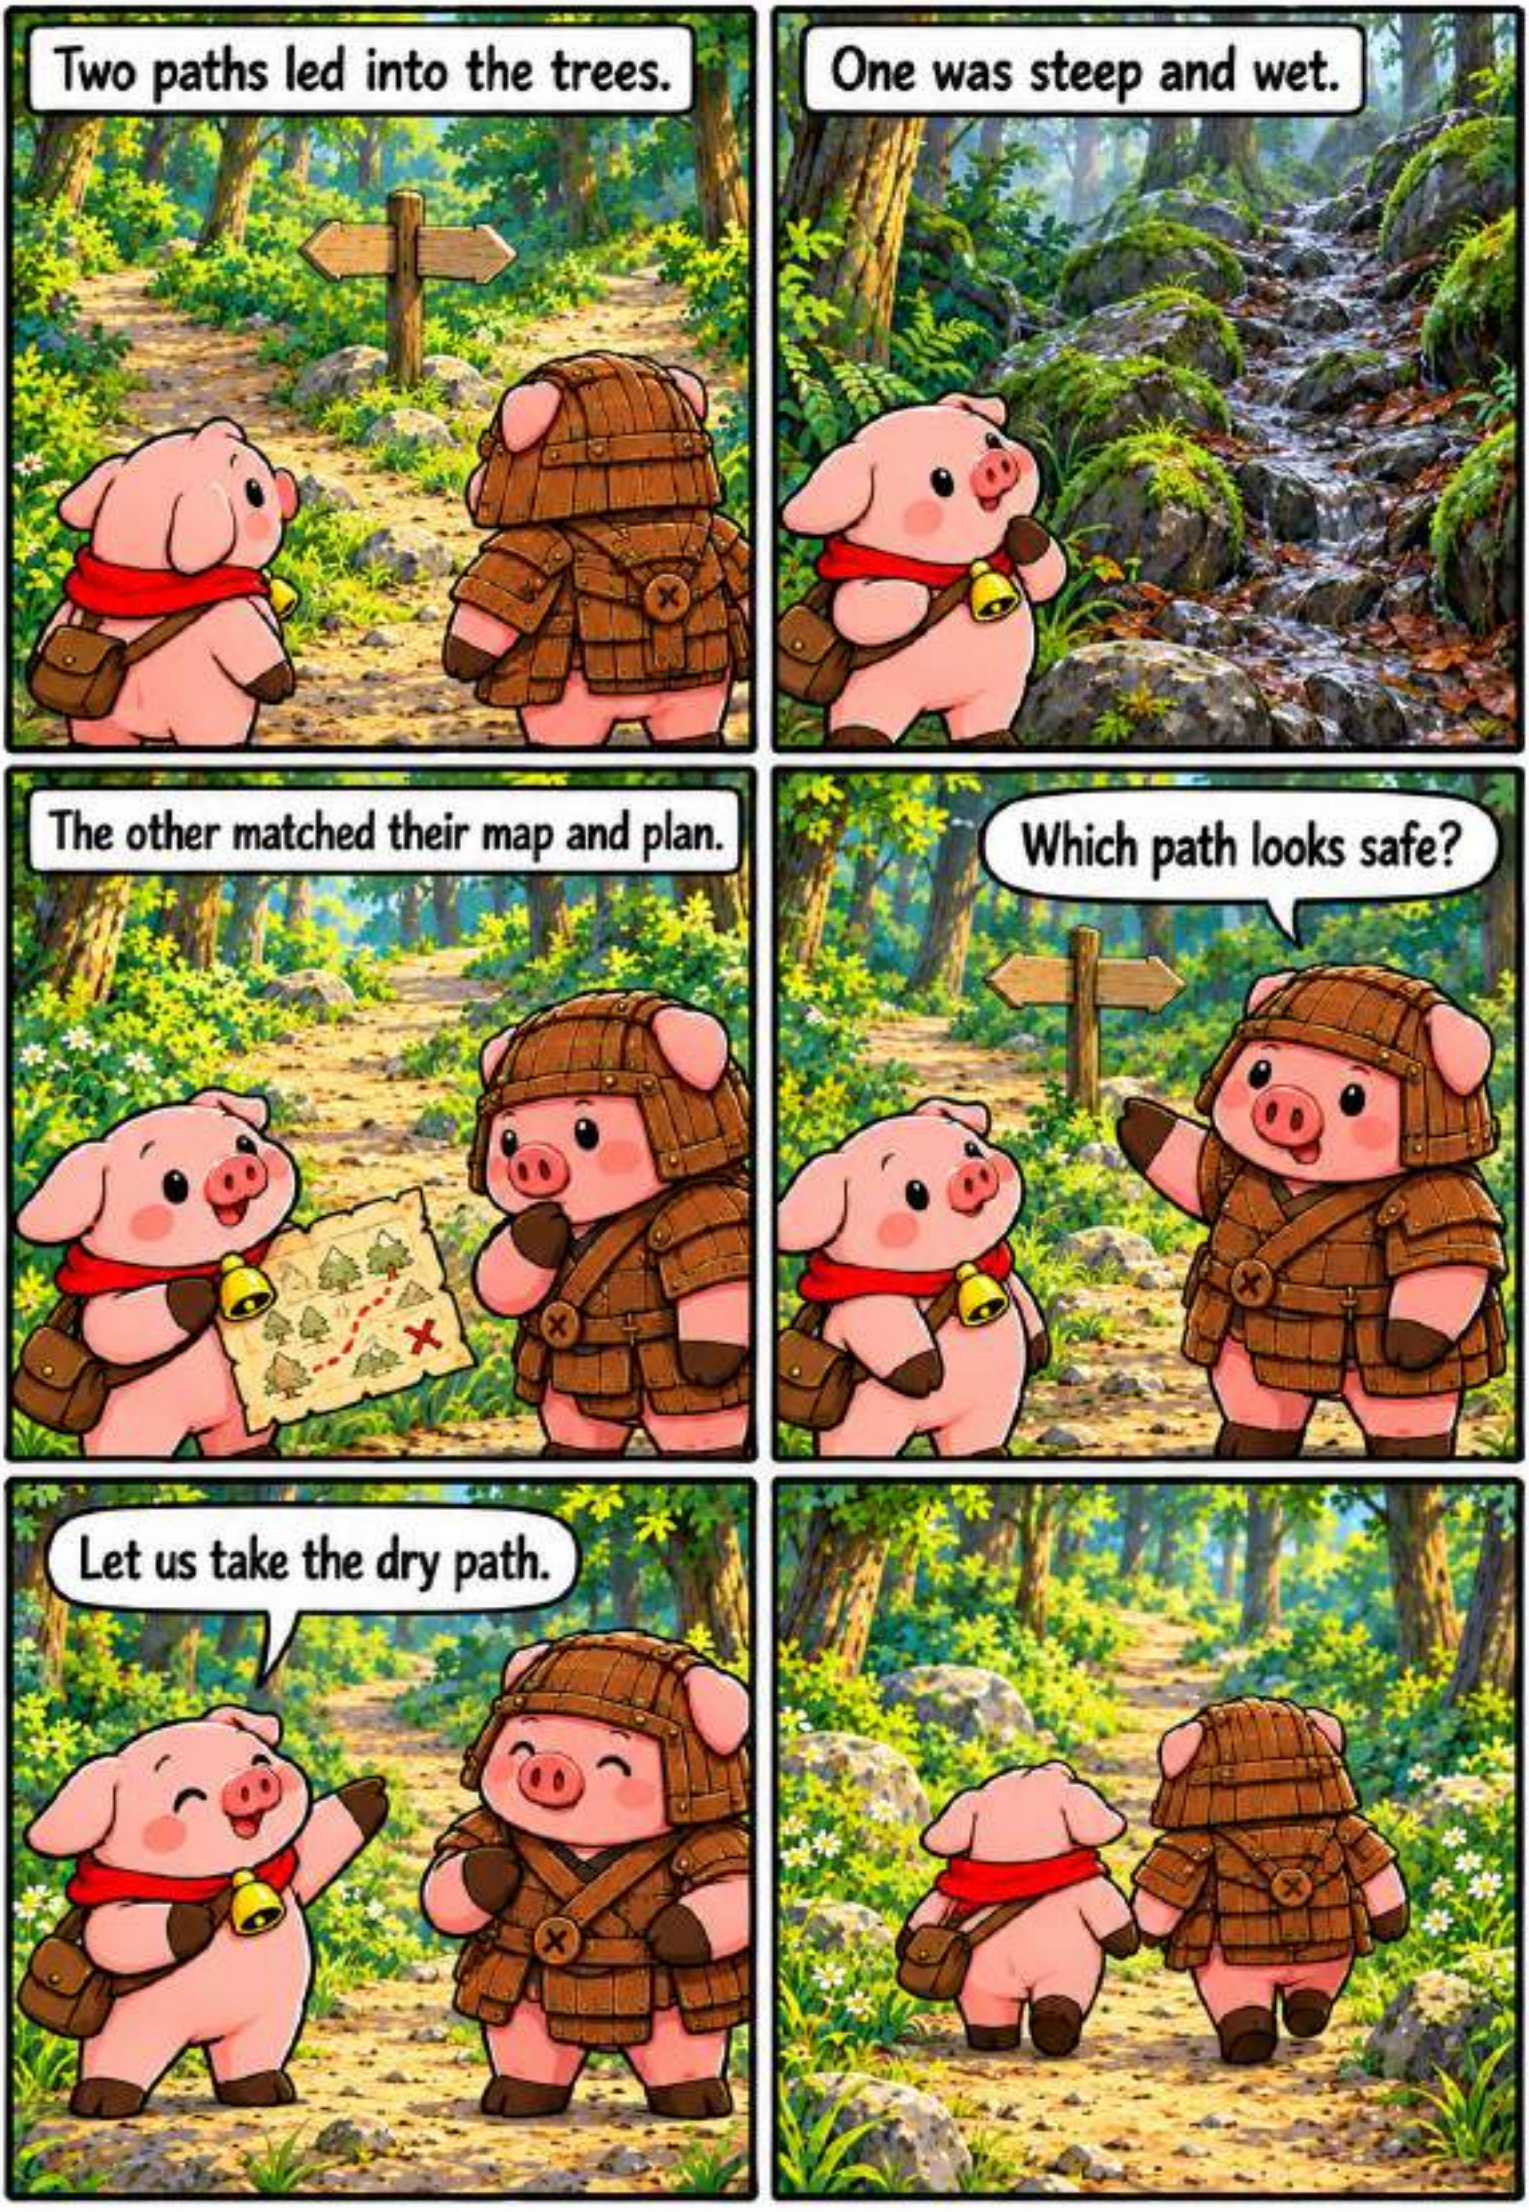
YOUR QUEST

Use everything you learned to begin again.

Oak met Podong at the forest gate.
Podong checked his scarf, bell, and bag.
He was ready for the next part.
Is everything ready?
Yes. I checked it all.



Podong thought about his journey so far.
He had helped friends and asked for help.
He had much to feel proud of.
I could not do it alone.
We learned together.



Two paths led into the trees.
One was steep and wet.
The other matched their map and plan.
Which path looks safe?
Let us take the dry path.

Podong felt a little afraid of the tall trees.
He could be brave and careful at the same time.
He could trust Oak.
Will you stay beside me?
Yes. We will go together.

They opened the wooden gate.
Sunlight made bright spots on the forest floor.
The bell gave a soft ring.
We are ready to go.
Let us take the next step.

Podong and Oak stepped into the forest.
A faraway tap came from the trees.
Their next journey had begun.
What is making that sound?
Let us find out together.
