A Chair for Bear

LITTLE READERS

Mia is having a pretend tea party in her playroom today.

She sets a little table
and puts two small chairs beside it.

Her brown teddy bear
watches from nearby.
He has a red bow.

"Come to my party,
Bear," Mia says.
"It will be fun!"

Mia seats her doll
on one little chair.
“Welcome!” she says.

Her stuffed rabbit
sits on the other chair.
Mia smiles at them.

Then Mia looks at Bear.
He is still beside the table.

“Oh, Bear!” she says.

“You need a chair, too.”

Mia looks under the little table.
There is no chair.

She looks around the playroom. Where could a chair be?

Bear waits quietly
while Mia thinks of an idea.

"I will find a seat
for you," Mia says.
Bear looks ready to wait.

Mia finds a small blue box. She brings it to the table.

"You can sit here," she tells Bear. She sets him on the box.

But the box is low.
Bear cannot reach
the little table.

"That will not do,"
Mia says. She helps
Bear off the box.

Next, Mia finds
a soft red cushion.
She puts it on the floor.

She sits Bear on the cushion. “Is this better?” she asks.

The cushion is very soft. Bear tips gently to one side.

Mia catches him.
"I think you need a different seat."

Mia takes Bear to Mom.
"Everyone has a chair except Bear," she says.

"The box is too low,
and the cushion is too
soft," Mia explains.

Mom thinks for a moment.
"Let us look in the playroom closet," she says.

Mia carries Bear to the closet. Mom comes with her.

Mom opens the closet door. Mia looks inside with Bear.

Behind some toys is a little yellow chair.
“Look!” Mia says.

Mom lifts the chair out.
Mia follows her back to the little table.

Mia tries the little yellow chair. “Let us bring it to Bear!”

Mom puts the yellow chair beside the little table. Mia holds Bear.

Mia brings Bear
to his new chair.
“Try this,” she says.

She sits Bear upright
on the yellow chair.
He fits just right.

"Everyone has a seat!"
Mia says. She smiles
at her friends.

Mia gives each guest
a little toy cup.
She has one, too.

“Would you like some pretend tea?” she asks.
Her toys sit in a row.

Mia lifts her cup.

"To my friends!" she says.

The party has begun.

Bear sits happily in his yellow chair while Mia enjoys the party.

Mia and Mom enjoy one more cup of pretend tea together.

When the party ends,
Mia puts the toy cups
away carefully.

“Thank you for coming,”
Mia tells her friends.
Then she picks up Bear.

She gives Bear a hug.
"I am glad we found a chair for you!"

Who are Mia's guests at her pretend tea party?

Why does Bear need a chair? How many chairs does Mia have?

What does Mia try first? Why is it not a good seat?

What happens when Bear sits on the soft cushion?

Who helps Mia
look for another chair?
Where do they look?

What color is the chair they find in the closet?

How does Mia know
the yellow chair
is just right?

What do Mia and her toys do together?
Tell the story in order.
